A DATE TO KEEP!

February 22nd, Founder's Day

Radio Broadcast

WSB, Atlanta Journal Station, 740 Kilocycles

This may be the thirteenth time Agnes Scott has broadcast its Founder's Day program but don't get the idea that we think it is unlucky!

Please "red-letter" February 22nd on that new calendar and when late afternoon rolls 'round, if you are the lone alumna of your town, settle yourself in a comfortable spot to hear the first strains of "When Far From the Reach . . ."

If you are fortunate enough to be where alumnae are gathered in group meetings at homes or clubs or hotels to have dinner and enjoy the broadcast together, then you want to set aside that whole evening, for, after the broadcast, there'll be talk, and news, and songs, and fun!

Due to the fact that the January Quarterly had to be in the printer's hands around the first of December and the Journal had not at that time made up its new year's calendar, the actual hour of the broadcast cannot be published in this issue. But the Atlanta Journal Radio heads have promised the date and the time will probably be the same as last year's, six p. m., central standard time, with the half-promise that the station will give us the half hour this year rather than the fifteen minute period of last year. All groups will be notified definitely as to the time and won't you individual alumnae either write us that you are interested in the hour or tune in your radio late that afternoon and leave it at 740 kilocycles until the program comes in? We regret that our Quarterly publication does not coincide a little better with the time for getting this announcement to you but we feel that, after so many years, alumnae will be counting on this event and will secure the time, if you are not in the groups which are notified.

It is hoped to have the familiar voices and melodies on this program and ambitious ideas for some new features are being considered. And for alumnae, far and near, we bid you welcome to the thirteenth broadcast of Agnes Scott's Founder's Day program,—

And we DO mean YOU!

« Contemporary Poets and the South »

This address, made by Miss Laney as one of the features of our Alumnae Week-End program, is being published that many alumnae who could not be present may have the opportunity of enjoying this masterly presentation.

DR. EMMA MAY LANEY

Some years ago when H. L. Mencken was commenting caustically on everything in America, he called the South the literary desert of the Beaux Arts. The years since his statement have given ample refutation to it, as is best evidenced by the fact that four times within the contemporary period has the Pulitzer prize novelist been a southerner—Julia Peterkin, Margaret Mitchell, Caroline Miller, and T. S. Stribling, while other novelists such as Stark Young, Ellen Glasgow, and James Branch Cabell have ranked with the best modern writers of fiction. The South has likewise produced such notable biography as Freeman's Lee and Donald Wade's Longstreet, and such notable history as W. E. Dodd's Old South, and distinguished studies like W. T. Couch's Culture in the South, and E. Mimms, The Advancing South. In poetry also has there been a distinct revival in the form of poetry magazines, poetry societies, and volumes of verse.

There are various reasons for this literary productiveness in what had up to the contemporary period been a somewhat barren region. A wave of literary activity spread over America in the years preceding and following the world war, and the South sufficiently recovered from the economic effects of the reconstruction period to share in this activity. Furthermore, art is rooted in local tradition, and the South offers material, romantic and legendary, which had scarcely been touched before this time. Finally the advancing industrialism in the South quickened the sense of the value of this material and naturally resulted in the desire to preserve in literature the traditions and scenes that were passing.

Whatever the reason for the Southern literary revival between the years 1910 and 1938, it is significant that most of the literature produced is regional, that poets outside the South have found inspiration in the South, and that its spirit is in distinct contrast to that in most of the earlier literature of the South. In the days following the Civil War, the "Old South" was always treated sentimentally. Someone has called this the period of moonlight and nightingales. O. Henry, as has frequently been pointed out, started the satire of this sham sentimentality and glittering romanticism in a story which he called "The Rose of Dixie." "The Rose of Dixie" was a publication devoted to fostering and voicing of Southern genius . . . it was of, for, and by the South. The editor's purpose was to conduct the magazine so that the fragrance and beauty of the South would permeate the whole world. When the magazine was tottering on the brink of failure, an assistant business manager urged the publication of material of more general interest, and the editor after a long mental struggle consented to print an article by a northerner. He published it, however, with this caption, "Written for 'The Rose of Dixie' by a member of the well-known Bullock family of Georgia, T. Roosevelt." O. Henry was followed by a long list of satirical writers including Ellen Glasgow and Frances Newman, and extending to Thomas Wolfe. But even while this critical attitude was predominant, there came about a change in the form of an attempt to revalue the social and political traditions of the South. This spirit informs the novels of James Boyd and Margaret Mitchell, and is particularly characteristic of the contemporary poetry about the South. It is a tendency to regard the old South as a chapter not in local but in American history.

The most important contemporary poem about the South illustrates what I mean by this new attitude. It is John Brown's Body, a three hundred and seventy-eight page epic of the Civil War, by Stephen Vincent Benét, a Pennsylvanian by birth, graduate of Yale, who lived in Augusta, Georgia, long enough to know first hand Southern traditions and the Southern scene. The prelude to the poem presents scenes so vivid that the reader smells the fetid odor of the blacks on a slave boat which is bringing them to America and hears their grievous sobbing:

*Oh Lordy Jesus
Won't you come find me
I'm feeling poorly
Yes, mighty poorly
I ain't gi no strength.*

Following this prelude, the action of the poem begins with John Brown's raid and continues through the assassination of Lincoln. By a zig-zag method which moves from Connecticut to Virginia, to Tennessee, to Georgia, to Mississippi, and back again, Benét gives a cross-section of Civil War days in cinematic scenes that show battle, marching, sickness, hunger, as they affect the Pennsylvania farmer, Jake Diefer; the Georgia aristocrat, Clay Wingate; Jack Ellyott of Connecticut; Splade, the runaway slave; Breckinbridge, the Tennessee mountaineer; Sally DuPree, the Southern belle; and Melora Villas, daughter of a wandering ne'er-do-well. The conflict is of cotton against wheat and iron; of man against man; but primarily the story is the tragedy of human beings caught in a tide of events for which they are not responsible. John Brown's body, which lies mouldering in the ground and from which spring the armies and the swords of battle as well as the steel of the new industrialism which begins after reconstruction days, is the symbol of this destiny.

The poem is, then, neither a glorification nor a condemnation of either North or South as such, but rather as exposure of the evils of war:

It is cold. It is wet. We marched until we could not stand up.

It is muddy here. I wish you could see us here. They would know what war is like.

and again

*War is an endless procession of dirty boots,
Filling pitchers and emptying out the slops,
And making cornbush beds for unshaved men . . .
War isn't a thing for ladies . . . (Sophie, chamber maid in the hotel, said).*

*War was a throat that swallowed things
And you could not cure it with conjurings.*

With no attempt to glorify the South, the poem is rich in its scenes of the South. There is a picture of Georgia which is accurately descriptive of Georgia today:

*So Sherman goes from Atlanta to the sea
Through the red-earth heart of the land, through the pine-smoke haze
Of the warm, last months of the year.
In the evenings
The skies are green as the thin, clear ice on the pools
That melts to water again in the beat of the noon.
A few black trees are solemn against those skies.
The soldiers feel the winter touching the air
With a little ice.
But when the sun has come up
When they halt at noonday, mopping their sweaty brows,
The skies are blue and soft and without a cloud.*

And again of a market town which is more than faintly reminiscent of Decatur:

*On Saturday, in Southern market towns,
When I was a boy with twenty cents to spend,
The carts began to drift in with the morning,
And, by the afternoon, the slipsbod Square
And all Broad Center Street were lined with them;
Moth-eaten mules that whickered at each other
Between the mended shafts of rattle-trap wagons,
Mud-spattered buggies, mouldy phaetons,*

*There was always a Courthouse in the Square,
A cupolaed Courthouse, drowsing Time away
Behind the grey-white pillars of its porch
Like an old sleepy judge in a spotted gown;
And down the Square, always a languid jail . . .*

And also of the whole country:

This country was too new Too straggly, unplanned, too muddy with great Uncomfortable floods, too roughly cut with a broad batchet from a hard tree.

The poem is likewise vivid in its portrayal of Southern folk:

*Fat Aunt Bess is older than Time
But her eyes still shine like a bright, new dime,
Though two generations have gone to rest
On the sleepy mountain of her breast.
Wingate children in Wingate Hall,
From the first weak cry in the bearing-bed
She has petted and punished them, one and all,
She has closed their eyes when they lay dead.
She raised Marse Billy when he was puny,
She cared for the Squire when he got loony,*

*She has had children of her own,
But the white-skinned ones are bone of her bone.
They may not be hers, but she is theirs.
And if the share were unequal shares,
She does not know it, now she is old.
They will keep her out of the rain and cold.
And some were naughty, and some were good,
But she will be warm while they have wood,*

*Rule them and spoil them and play physician
With the vast, insensate force of tradition,
Half a nuisance and half a mother
And legally neither one nor the other,
Till at last they follow her to her grave,
The family despot, and the slave.*

And then the mountaineer:

*Luke Breckinridge, his rifle on his shoulder,
Slipped through green forest alleys toward the town,
A gawky boy with smoldering eyes, whose feet
Whispered the crooked paths like moccasins.*

*(He meets his Cousin Jim)
"Might go along a piece together," he said.
Luke didn't move. Their eyes clashed for a moment,
Then Luke spoke, casually.
"I hear the Kelceys
Air goin' to fight in this here war," he said.
Jim nodded slowly, "Yub, I heerd that too."
He watched Luke's trigger-band.*

*"I might be goin'
Myself sometime," he said reflectively
Sliding his own hand down. Luke saw the movement.
"We-uns don't like the Kelceys much," he said
With his eyes down to pinpoints.*

*Then Jim smiled.
"We-uns neither," he said.
His hand slid back.*

*They went along together after that
But neither of them spoke for half-a-mile,
Then finally, Jim said, half-diffidently,
"You know who we air goin' to fight outside?
I heard it was the British. Air that so?"
"Hell, no," said Luke, with scorn. He puckered his brows.
"Dunno's I rightly know just who they air."
He admitted finally, "But 'tain't the British.
It's some trasb-lot of furriners, that's shore.
They call 'em Yankees near as I kin make it,
But they ain't Injund neither."*

*"Well," said Jim
Smoothingly, "Reckon it don't rightly matter
Long as the Kelceys take the other side."*

These pictures are a part of the new realism with which everything is painted—from the scraping of lint and mending of rusty stirrups with rusty wire to the prostitutes who changed the flags on their garters from confederate to federal as the armies moved; the poem is new likewise in form with the shifting rhythms from blank to free verse, from prose to spiritual and ballad; but chiefly new in the presenting the whole civil war as a human conflict fraught with tragedy but inevitable.

Since the South is rich in history and legend, and possesses a landscape varying from the majesty of the Smokies to the languous low country, it is not surprising that the spirit of place should be strong in it and that this spirit should express itself in lyrical poetry. Such is that case. Most Southern poetry of today is lyrical and much of it is indigeneous, concerning itself with the local scene, local folk, local history, and local tradition.

Some of the lyrics present the impact of the new industrial era on the old South. Such is the theme of Dubose Heyward in a "Chant for an Old Town". Heyward said whimsically once that he was a member of an old Charleston family and as a business man engaged in selling insurance is an ambassador between the old Charleston and the new. Anyone who has visited Charleston recently and seen the huge skyscraper tourist hotels which over-shadow some of the quiet little streets can understand his prayer in this poem to the "builders of white towers in the sun" to pause before this ruin is complete. Following this invocation, he describes in regular pentameters the building of the city by men "whose hands loved the feel of stone and knew the elusive ways of Beauty . . ." In a parallel section of the poem he presents in nervous free verse the engines that come and breathe their iron breathing and snarl and shatter, shatter, shatter this frail beauty to make a hotel the mate to twenty others in great American cities.

In another such poem, "Fire on Belmont Street," Donald Davidson of Vanderbilt University uses the incident from Anglo-Saxon poetry of a surprise attack at night on a Teutonic band by a tribe with which they thought they had just patched up peace, as a symbol of the insidious encroachment of ovens, furnaces, and factories on a rural civilization where there was peace and serenity. Neither poet is facing backward with sentimental nostalgia. Donald Davidson in writing as a member of a group that has become famous for its defense of the agrarian way of life against an industrial civilization and DuBose Heyward is pleading not for a return of the old South, but for the keeping inviolate a beauty not made by hands.

The white columned colonial house which is such a characteristic feature of the Southern landscape is a favorite subject with the poets and three poems in this theme illustrate three of the schools of contemporary poetry. One of these, called "Ghosts of an Old House," is by John Gould Fletcher, member of an aristocratic Arkansas delta family, Harvard graduate, friend of Amy Lowell, member of the imagist group of poets. The poem in free verse after the imagist manner, falls into three divisions,—attic, house, lawn, each of which consists of half a dozen brief poems in which the poet tries by details to convey to the reader his feeling about the House, Nursery, Little Chair, Old Barn, Back Stairs; for instance,

THE ATTIC

*Dust hangs clogged so thick
The air has a dusty taste;
Spider threads cling to my face,
From the broad pine-beams.
There is nothing living here,
The house below might be quite empty,
No sound comes from it.
The old broken trunks and boxes,
Cracked and dusty pictures,
Legless chairs and shattered tables,
Seem to be crying
Softly in the stillness
Because no one has brushed them.
No one has any use for them, now.
Yet I often wonder
If these things are really dead:
If the old trunks never open
Letting out grey flapping things at twilight?
If it is all as safe and dull
As it seems?
Why then is the stair so steep,
Why is the doorway always locked,
Why does nobody ever come?*

Quite different is "The Old Mansion" by John Crowe Ransome, also of the Vanderbilt University group of poets. He has passed many times such a house, each time absorbing some new feature of it, and realizing that it is crumbling into decay, he decides to go in but is rebuffed in his attempt. His poem is a witty comment on his experiences. He describes himself as an intruder, trudging with careful innocence to mask a meddlesome stare and exhaling his cigar ("foreign weed"). He sees himself dismissed as tourists in Europe are:

*The old mistress was ill, and sent my dismissal
By one even more wrapped and lean and dark
Than that warped concierge and imperturbable vassal
Who bids you begone from her master's Gothic park.*

In still a different manner does Janef Preston of the Agnes Scott faculty express the effect on her of such a house in Louisiana's low country:

DESERTED HOUSE ON A BAYOU

*These broken columns, once so proudly tall,
Uphold too long the roof that men disown;
Too many summers' grass has split the stone
Of steps that bear no more a light footfall.
Unmarked by feast- or fast-day, seasons crawl
Across the chimneys that long since have sown
Their sparks upon the dust, or thinly blown
Blue smoke upon the day at matin call.
The sundial mocks, "Horas non numero Nisi serenas." While slow hours pass,
The garden's marred and sunken patterns show
Like skeletons half covered in the grass.
Time lingers on this threshold but to taunt
The house that has outlived man's utmost want.*

In the form of a Shakespearean sonnet, she expresses her sense of irony that the house has lived beyond man's need; the house thus becomes a symbol of the ruins of time and the poem takes its place in the long line of English poems from the Anglo-Saxon "Ruined City" to "The Deserted Village."

The imagist with his free verse, the metaphysical poet with his wit, and the traditional poet with vigorous realism—each has in turn found materials of poetry in the Southern ante-bellum house.

Important chapters of colonial history were enacted in the South, and novels and books like Caroline Couper Lovell's The Golden Isles of Georgia have perpetuated the memory of these events. Poetry likewise has found themes in them. The reconstruction of Williamsburg, Virginia, has had no small part in stimulating interest in historic places in the South, and Williamsburg lives in a series of sonnets by Virginia Lyne Turnstall. "Spring Dusk in Williamsburg" in her imagination brings back not only the rosy apple's blossom's scented snow but also gentle ghosts to Duke of Gloucester Street. The peace of Bruton Church yard is recreated in "They Sleep So Quietly."

Daniel Whitehead Hicky, of Atlanta, in "Thirteen Sonnets of Georgia" has paid his tribute to the historic Georgia Coast. Fort Frederica, established by Oglethorpe in 1736, is described as a mass of tabby-stone at the marsh's edge, where rhythmical waters from the sea whisper against grey and shell-torn walls, telling of strange new ships that came to be. Nearby is Christ's church, established by the Wesleys, and the peace of that churchyard is well described,

CHRIST CHURCHYARD

*Beneath this muted conference of oak
Spreading an emerald heaven overhead,
With grey moss hanging like a phantom smoke,
Time counts the timeless hours of the dead.
No spoken word awakes the quiet here,
No footfall, save the darkness and the dawn,*

*No stir save jasmine breathing on the air,
Drooping their dying petals on each stone.
Deep in our hearts they sleep, these pioneers,
The young, the brave, the beautiful, the old,
Who made an alien world so wholly theirs!
Down the slow centuries as the years are told
By Time's cold fingers at his crumbling door
They are at peace with earth. They ask no more.*

Amy Lowell in 1921 writing of Charleston said: "Charleston has more poetic appeal than almost any city in America . . . It is a place for poets, indeed. History touches legend in Charleston . . . The town is beautiful with the past, and glorious with the present . . . Its wealth of folk-lore has been little touched with poetry. The scene is set. Now for the actors." The actors, primarily Dubose Heyward and Hervey Allen, both better known now for novels than for poetry, made Charleston the center of a poetry revival in the South. The Charleston Poetry Society brought distinguished poets South, offered prizes for poetry, and from it sprang up between 1921 and 1930 a host of poetry societies and poetry magazines extending from Norfolk, Virginia, to Dallas, Texas. Charleston, its gardens, its coasts, its folk furnished material for poets of north as well as at home. One of the most vivid pictures of the city itself was written by Hervey Allen, a Pennsylvanian who spent a few of the post war years teaching in Charleston:

PALMETTO TOWN

*Sea-island winds sweep through Palmetto Town,
Bringing with piney tang the old romance
Of Pirates and of smuggling gentlemen;
And tongues as languorous as southern France
Flow down her streets like water-talk at fords;
While through iron gates where pickaninnies sprawl;
The sound floats back, in rippled banjo chords,
From lush magnolia shade where mockers call.
Mornings, the flower-women hawk their wares—
Bronze caryatids of a genial race,
Bearing the bloom-beaped baskets on their beads;
Lithe, with their arms akimbo in wide grace,
Their jasmine nods jestingly at cares—
Turbaned they are, deep-chested, straight and tall,
Banding old English words now seldom heard,
But sweet as Provencal.
Dreams peer like prisoners through her harp-like gates,
From molten gardens mottled with gray-gloom,
Where lichened sundials shadow ancient dates,
And deep piazzas loom.*

The gardens, which draw pilgrims each year when japonica and azalea blossom, have inspired both New England Amy Lowell and New England Henry Bellaman. Amy Lowell omitted from her published works the poem in which she affronted Charlestonians by calling the magenta azaleas obscene, but she included a free verse description of Middleton Place. Henry Bellaman, brought to the South by his wife's illness, became music director in a college in Columbia, S. C. He has written a series of poems on the Carolina coast country. In one of these, "Garden on the Santee," he captures the spirit of the stately formal 18th century Middleton garden.

*The river folds about the terraces
where the afternoon stretches its shining length and sleeps.*

*Walled in by hedges the pools of perfume deepen fed by hidden springs of jasmine
and grass-tangled roses.*

*I have come too late.
A lovely play is over,
and the stage is empty.*

*But I have heard,
as one half hears, half dreams,
last sounds of festivals at the distant turn of some long avenue;
I have heard
the brittle sound of brocade and the gay passage of red and silver heels behind azalea banks;
I have heard
the tournament of swift hoofs along the road, and the slow circling sound of negro boats songs from the hidden river bend.*

In another, Magnolia Gardens, he seizes the exotic beauty.

*This sudden, thick, unearthly flame
Of flowers is too violent;
It feeds on some dark stain
Deep in the soil—
A stain that seeps sometimes
Into the black lagoons,
Whose horror is not wholly hid
By creeping swirls of pale wistaria petals
Dripping through the Spanish moss.
The white azaleas are too white
To hold the slightest flow of life
In their waxed whiteness—
Too much like ringless hands
Under a coffin glass.*

*The hard clash of crimson on magenta
Is a warning discord—
See the shattered red
Trickling across the sand.*

*I must go out from this smother of stillness
I must feel some breath of air
Blowing across cool grass,
And sees leaves moving.*

It is, however, Josephine Pinckney of Charleston, who has given in her volume "Sea Drinking Cities" realistic, lightly ironic pictures of Charleston folk, from the Gulla negro to the antiquated before-the-war ladies. Such is the portrait of Mikel dawdling at his milking, admitting that a planter's son should know how to curry a horse and take care of a cow, but preferring to imagine himself the redeemer of this defeated land and muttering, "I wish I'd of met that white trash Sherman . . . I swear the ole boll weevil, I'd of fed him Paris green." Or picture the Misses Poar:

*Out from the tall plantation gate
Issue the Misses Poar in state.
Neatly darned are their black silk mitts,
And straight each stately sister sits.
Their carriage dresses, brushed and steamed*

Cover their decent limbs; they seemed
 No finer, really, before the War
 When money was free in the house of Poar.
 The negro coachman in beaver hat,
 Slightly nibbled by moth and rat,
 Smooths his frock-coat of greenish hue,—
 But fitting as trim as when it was new—
 With which he stiffens his spine of pride
 By tightly buttoning himself inside.
 To drive in this elegant equipage
 A yoke of oxen of doubtful age.
 (They've had no horses since sixty-four
 When the Yankees stopped at the house of Poar.)

The ladies move to the square front pew,
 Their Christian meekness in ample view,
 And follow the youthful parson's word
 With reverence meet for a legate of God
 Up to the moment when he prates
 Of the President of the United States;
 Then knowing full well that Heaven can't Expect them to pray for General Grant,
 They bury their noses' patrician book
 In dear Great-grand-papa's prayer book,
 Wherein are found urbane petitions
 To guard the Crown against seditions
 And rest King Charles the Martyr's soul.
 Not that they hold King Charles so dear,
 Although their blood is Cavalier,
 But it suits their piety, on the whole,
 Better to pray for the Restoration
 Than the overseer of a patch-work nation.

Charleston legends are recorded in a volume called Carolina Chanson. Allen and Heyward bought a boat and went around the coast gathering from cove dwellers legends of pirates and blockaders . . . One of the best "The Priest and the Pirate," tells what happened to Theodosia Burr, daughter of Aaron Burr, Vice-President of the U. S., when she sailed from Georgetown, S. C., for New York on a steamer which was never heard of again.

Another deep South section which has inspired poets is the country lying around the Mississippi River. J. G. Fletcher, whose Ghosts of the Old House, was discussed earlier, has written a group of poems called "Down the Mississippi" which describes the river as making its way through dull masses of dense green

Like an enormous serpent, dilating, uncoiling, Displaying a broad scaly back of earth-smear'd gold.

The heat pressing down upon the earth with irresistible languor, the rotted logs in the swamp, the stevedores rolling cotton over the gang plank with thudding sound, the roar and shudder of the whistle as the blast shakes the sleepy town in its night landing are realistic details.

Will Alexander Percy, a native Mississippian, was one of the first contemporary Southern poets to receive national recognition. It is not legend or history of the Mississippi that appeals to him, but the peace that is symbolized by the molten river and the broad stretches of flat land. His poem "Home" stands with such poems of nostalgia as Browning's "Oh, To Be in England Now That April Is There," and Rupert Brooke's "Grantchester." Writing from New York, he says:

*I have a need of silence and of stars;
 Too much is said too loudly; I am dazed.
 The silken sound of whirled infinity
 Is lost in voices shouting to be heard.
 I once knew men as earnest and less shrill.*

*Back where the breakers of deep sunlight roll
 Across flat fields that love and touch the sky;
 Back to the more of earth, the less of man,
 Where there is still a plain simplicity,
 And friendship, poor in everything but love,
 And faith, unwise, unquestioned, but a star.
 Soon now the peace of summer will be there
 With cloudy fire of myrtles in full bloom;
 And when the marvelous wide evenings come,
 Across the molten river one can see
 The misty willow-green of Arcady
 And then—the summer stars . . . I will go home.*

The cotton picker of this section as well as of South Georgia is well described by Hickey:

*Beneath the glittering dewfall, they are gone
 Into the broad fields, down the endless rows
 Flowing like silent music beneath the sun,
 And, with a measured tune that no one knows
 Save those who gather cotton, they are one
 In rhythm and in stark simplicity—
 The bonneted heads of girls scarce in their 'teens,
 The tall bronze men, their women who shall be Down with another child ere autumn wanes,
 The young boys picking, rising, bending down,
 Pausing to watch the first train into town.*

In striking contrast to this low country is the mountain section of the South—our last frontier. It has found its poets in Olive Tilford Dargan and Dubose Heyward. Heyward compares this region in its power, its slowness, its inarticulateness to a yoke of steers which "will arrive in its appointed hour, unhurried by the goad of lesser wills" while Dargan describes Clingman Dome where balsam is bluer for leaning on the sky and Sall's Gap from trough to tip thick with laurel. But the best poetry of the mountains describes the mountain folk who have changed little since Luke Breckenridge, in John Brown's Body, went to the Civil War. In poems as vigorous and realistic as those in which Frost describes the New Englander, Dubose Heyward portrays them. Their feuds live in a sonnet called "Black Christmas." The Mountain Girl whose fresh young womanhood quickly fades into burned out and sunken age, the raw-boned and thunder-voiced mountain preacher who with brandished fist shouted about an arrant egoist swift to avenge a wrong; these and more are to be found in Heyward's volume, "Skylines". Typical is the mountain woman whose stoic endurance of the tragedies of her life is broken when her husband returning home drunk breaks the scarlet geranium which is her only treasure.

In conclusion, contemporary poetry about the South makes only a small chapter in the account of contemporary American letters. In volume it is small; in quality, for the most part, minor. It does, however, mirror the absorption of the present day with experimentation in form; it does reflect the current realism; that of it which lives will achieve permanence by its sincere, unselfish, and true representation of traditions and people important in American history and legend.

THE PLEASURES OF READING

ELLEN DOUGLASS LEYBURN, '27

(Investiture address given on November 6th in Bucher Scott gymnasium. Ellen Douglass is one of the faculty advisors for the class of 1938.)

In this year when colleges and universities everywhere are celebrating with Oberlin the hundredth anniversary of the beginning of college training for women and when our growth is marked by our having to leave the chapel for Investiture, perhaps it would be appropriate to consider the century of progress since the day when men feared that higher education would make women desert their babies for quadratic equations. But I prefer to discuss with you this morning a delight of the mind more intimate than the atmosphere of the chapel and one enjoyed by girls for hundreds of years before it occurred to them to seek an equal footing with their brothers in institutions of higher learning. It is the sheer pleasure of reading books which I covet for you, a pleasure not dependent upon college training—and sad to say, not even fostered by it in many cases, for the pressure of being a part of the busy college community and of working at books too often precludes the conception of them as a source of fun. How many college students—and consequently college graduates—there are who deserve the pity Nathaniel in Love's Labour's Lost bestows on him who has never “fed of the dainties that are bred in a book; he hath not eat paper, as it were; he hath not drunk ink; his intellect is not replenished.”

The zest for books has been a peculiar gift of women since men first provided books for them to enjoy. You remember Ascham's charming account of his discovery of Lady Jane Grey's zest for reading:

I found her, in her Chamber, reading Phaedon Platonis in Greeke, and that with as moch delite as som ientlemen wold read a merie tale in Bocace. After Salutation, and dewtie done, with som other taulke, I asked her, whie she wold leese soch pastime in the Parke! Smiling she answered me; I wisse all their sporte in the Parke is but a shoadoe to that pleasure, that I find in Plato: Alas good folks, they never felt what trewe pleasure meant.

The daughters of Lady Jane in every generation have taken the same exquisite delight in books . . .

At the beginning of the next century, Dorothy Wordsworth, busy about mending William's shirts and baking William's bread—never dreaming of competing with him in learning—yet tasted with rapture the rich feast of books. Her journal is as much a record of her reading as of the changes of her Grasmere countryside:

We sat snugly round the fire. I read to them the tale of Custance and the Syrian monarch, in the Man of Lawe's Tale . . . In the afternoon we sate by the fire; I read Chaucer aloud and Mary read the first canto of the Fairy Queen. After tea Mary and I walked to Ambleside for letters . . . Read Tom Jones . . . I read a little of Boswell's Life of Johnson. I went to lie down in the garden . . . Worked hard, and read Midsummer Night's Dream, and ballads. Sauntered a little in the garden. The skobby sate quietly in its nest, rocked by the wind, and beaten by the rain . . . Read part of Knigh't's Tale with exquisite delight . . . We spent the morning in the orchard reading the Prothalamium of Spenser; walked backwards and forwards.

It seems to me deplorable that we should come to think of books in terms of assignments, that in advancing toward college degrees, we should lose the high joy of our less educated grandmothers, the joy which most of us have actually felt as children in the tales of Uncle Remus or the Brothers Grimm. We can keep the same spirit of delight, though the object of it changes from the Golden Goblin to The Faerie Queene, from At the Big House to Boswell's Johnson.

Another related pleasure to be found in books is the stretching of the sinews of the mind. Few of us know enough philosophy and physics to understand Eddington's Nature of the Physical World; but the effort to understand it is exciting mental exercise. And such use of the mind has the same tonic effect that physical exercise has upon the body.

An even more important satisfaction which books afford us is that of finding in them our own experiences intensified and clarified through the expression given them by great writers, by men and women who before they are masters in the craft of writing have been human beings living through much the same situations that we live through and who because of their gift of speech can unlock their hearts in words. When we are bewildered by the conflict between the old and the new in our beliefs, Arnold speaks to our spirits with:

Resolve to be thyself; and know, that he
Who finds himself, loses his misery.

When we are moved by the spirit of evening, Wordsworth's:

It is a beauteous evening calm and free
The holy time is quiet as a nun

Breathless with adoration gives expression to what we would express. When we are tempted to manage other people's affairs, we can laugh at ourselves deliciously in Jane Austen's Emma. When the awful mystery of death confronts us, we can be steadied by Emily Dickinson's:

The bustle in a house

The morning after death

Is solemnest of industries

Enacted upon earth.

The sweeping up the heart,

And putting love away

We shall not want to use again

Until eternity.

When we are in love, almost the whole range of poetry and fiction is at our command. Perhaps what we turn to is John Donne's:

All other things to their destruction draw,

Only our love hath no decay;

This, no tomorrow hath, nor yesterday,

Running it never runs from us away,

But truly keeps his first, last, everlasting day.

In almost every shade of emotion that comes to us, we have been preceded by those who have been able to give utterance to feeling. And this is one of the fortunate ways in which we are the heirs of all the ages.

But the most profound effect of reading seems to me to lie beyond this recognition of ourselves in literature. Few of us shall witness so noble a nature as Othello's so hideously destroyed by jealousy as his. We are not to share Orestes' fate of being compelled by a relentless destiny to the murder of a mother. Yet we are definitely the poorer if we have not given ourselves up to the tragedies of Shakespeare and Aeschylus. Milton has said that

A good book is the precious life-blood of a master spirit embalmed and treasured up on purpose to a life beyond life.

We live ourselves, we become something different through association with the greatest life; and this touching of the sources of being is the best gift that books, or that our college, can offer us, for

Spirits are not finely

Touched but to fine issues.

The Clock Struck Twelve

The following explanation of the requirements for entrance and the expenses for a year at Agnes Scott was written for the Quarterly in answer to many requests from alumnae for a simple statement about these matters.

Characters:

Agnes Alumna
A. S. Catalogue

(The scene is the home of Agnes Alumna, who sits wearily at a desk on which is a catalogue and a sheaf of disarranged papers. A clock points in horror at two minutes till twelve.)

Alumna (sighing):

I cannot get this straight at all,
Though I'm a former Hottentot,
So many changes have been made
Since I attended Agnes Scott.
I want to send my daughter there,
I know it is the best of schools;
But how can I enroll her when
I do not understand the rules?
This catalogue is just a maze
Of units and curriculum;
I give it up—the Horrid thing!
Oh, dear, I'm 'most asleep—ho—Hum.

(Her head sinks on the desk as the clock strikes twelve.)

Catalogue (standing up and ruffling his pages in indignation):

Madam, I assure you
I resent your groundless slurs
You blame me for your trouble
But the fault is really yours.

Alumna (startled):

Oh, sir, I beg your pardon,
I intended no insults.

Catalogue (mollified):

Well, all right. Now let's get started:
We will get some good results.
I understand you want your child
To enter Agnes Scott next fall.

Alumna:

That's right, but I can't understand
Your complicated rules at all.

Catalogue (sternly):

Let me tell you, Madam,
I am formed with utmost clarity.
That I converse with you at all
Is proof of my kind charity.

Alumna:

Excuse me, sir, and please accept
My deep appreciation.

Catalogue:

Well, we'll proceed, but do desist
Your ill insinuation.
Suppose we start with counting costs
To prove our fine economy.

Alumna:

I tried to, but I quite got lost
In your-uh-lovely physiognomy.

Catalogue (Bowing):

Well, here the required fees are in store
On page one-hundred-forty-four.
But to give them clearly at this time,
Allow me please to cease from rhyme.

Boarding student (total), $700.00; day student (total), $300.00; gymnasium outfit, (for the four years), $10.00; (paid on entrance of student and $10.00 is the amount whether girl is here four years or for a shorter period); laboratory fee, (if a science is taken), $9.00; special fees are required for extras such as piano, organ, violin, voice, art, and individual lessons in spoken English.

If a well rounded budget you wish to plan

Consider these items and have payment on hand:

Concert series ticket (in Atlanta), $6.00; student budget (covers the three campus publications and allows participation in all activities), $15.00; books, approximately $20.00; outstanding lecturers on the campus, about $2.00.

For information as to when, where, and how you are to pay

Write Mr. S. G. Stukes, the Registrar, right away.

Alumna:

There they are so clearly planned,
How could I so misunderstand?

Catalogue:

And now let us attack with glee
The entrance units you should foresee,
Though they've eluded you, they're seen
Completely told on page eighteen:
For entrance, sixteen units you must present
The lack of which you will lament.
Of prescribed units twelve there are:
Four English, one geometry, and two algebra.
Prescribed units in Latin number four
And one year of history which is rarely a bore.
If four years of Latin don't seem nice
Two of Latin and two of modern language will suffice.
The other four units are entirely elective
Which give you the chance to be selective:
You may choose from civics, Bible, geography,
Home ec, any science and history.

Alumna (gleefully):

My daughter has 'most all of these,
I am so glad to find it out!

Catalogue:

Well, that's fine. Now let's proceed
To find out all we can about
The courses that our Agnes Scott
Offers each new Hottentot:

English your freshman daughter must take,
And Math, Latin, or Greek for the classics sake.
The modern language from high school will need continuation

For her mastery of all points of grammar and pronunciation.

Sciences are offered, Chemistry, Physics, or Biology
Or she might prefer a thorough course in History.

There are elective courses she may start—
Bible, Spoken English, Sight-Singing or History of Art.

Alumna:

I like those things; they're planned to start
My child to become a Bachelor of Arts.

How can I wait until next fall
To pack my Mary off? This seems

CAMPUS NEWS and OFFICE NOTES

Seventh Annual Alumnae Week-End

We quote from the Agonistic:
"To the student body, Alumnae Week-End meant sausage and coffee for luncheon, both unusual treats since the advent of the Hollywood diet, but to the alumnae who came back home it meant renewing their youth with squeals of 'Oh, hello, I'm so thrilled to see you! You old darling, what are you doing here?' (This last to old classmates whose names they couldn't quite remember, although they sat in the third seat from the end in Bible class.) Even more frequently it was: 'Why, you don't look a day older than when we dressed up for Little Girl Day!' all the while counting wrinkles and pounds. And of course the new buildings bought forth wails of dismay and exclamations of 'Why didn't we have these when we were here?' But Ella and Mary Cox and the 10:15 A. M. train during the chapel hour convinced them that it really hasn't changed a bit."

Alumnae Week-End was homecoming for one hundred and fifty old girls who came back to school again. The theme, "New Emphases," was discussed in such widely different fields that every alumna found something of particular value to her in her work and understanding of current events. Mr. Stukes' after-luncheon speech on "New Methods in Education" and Dean White's talk on "Cross Currents in the Colleges" answered questions about child education problems from the teen age on through college. Dr. Thomas English's discussion of "New Emphasis in the Theatre and Drama" was a scholarly presentation of interest to all educated women. Judge S. H. Sibley's wit and eloquence delighted those who heard his discussion on the Constitution, and Dr. Emma May Laney's presentation of the South as the inspiration for an entirely new type of poetry brought thrills of delight to her listeners and aroused our Southern pride to its fullest. Mary Ann McKinney's chapel talk on Christianity as she found it in India was inspirational and informative. For sheer delight the exhibit of wild flowers painted in water colors by Mrs. Mary Motz Wills and the scores of books on exhibit for National Book Week, both in the library, could not be excelled. For an evening entertainment the Blackfriars presented Ben Levy's "Mrs. Moonlight," and the string ensemble music program under direction of Mr. Dieckmann in chapel on Saturday was a half hour of real pleasure.

The only flaws in a delightful week-end were the downpour of rain that came Friday and the icy winds on Saturday. In spite of the weather 150 alumnae and 25 visitors were present at one or all of the lectures.

Little Girls Transformed Into Dignified Seniors Overnight!

With ruffles ruffling, be-ribboned hair flying, and goose-pimpled knees bravely exposed to frost-bite, eighty-three little girls accompanied by one Boy Scout took possession of the campus November 5 with a jumping rope, a Big Apple dance on the Quadrangle, and a hundred childish games. A stranger on the campus would have thought Agnes Scott was running a kindergarten for backward children, but any well-informed person knew it was just "Little Girl Day."

On Saturday, November 6, Investiture bequeathed those same frisky little girls with caps and gowns and senior dignity in the presence of a thousand friends and relatives. For the first time since the tradition of Investiture was begun, the ceremony was not performed in the Chapel, and Miss Nannette Hopkins was not able to officiate. The service was held in Bucher Scott gymnasium to accommodate the increasing number of friends of the college who attend. Louise McKinney Hill, daughter of Caroline (McKinney) Hill, '27, granddaughter of Claude (Candler) McKinney, Inst., and great-niece of Miss Louise McKinney, was class mascot and led the academic procession. Ellen Douglass Leyburn, '27, faculty advisor, gave the Investiture address, which is printed in this issue of the Quarterly. Carrie Scandrett, '24, assistant dean, capped the eighty-four seniors. The singing of the Alma Mater and the recessional to "Ancient of Days" completed this best loved of Agnes Scott traditions.

Lecture Association Program for 1938

The Student Lecture Association will present two outstanding figures on the Lecture Program this season. On January 25th, Mr. H. S. Ede, Curator of the Tate Gallery in London, will present an informative lecture on "How to Recognize the Beautiful in Art" and will illustrate his talk with slides from the Tate collections. Mr. Tate is a widely-known artist, lecturer and author.

The second lecturer announced for this season is the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia, woman of letters who is known throughout the civilized countries for her ability. The Grand Duchess Marie will lecture here on March 25th and her topic will be "Russia As I Knew It."

New Privileges at Agnes Scott

The alumnae of a few years back are almost in a position to say: "What will those college girls do next! When I was at Agnes Scott we never thought of such a thing!" and all because of the success of the honor system at the college and the consequent increase in the privileges allowed the upperclassmen.

Juniors and seniors are allowed to return to the college from a destination unchaperoned as late as 11:45 on week nights, and on Saturdays they may go to the college dances and return at 12:30. Underclassmen have to have chaperons to return this late, but since thirty-one members of the senior class have qualified for the position of senior chaperons, the girls have no trouble in securing the required "big sister." This new ruling has lessened the need for a "place to sign out to" and has kept the students from imposing on friends in town so much. The senior chaperons have signed an agreement to follow strictly the rules of the college and be personally responsible for the underclassmen.

Reunion for 1937

The Class of 1937 spent a gala Thanksgiving week-end on the campus and climaxed their homecoming with a reunion on Friday evening in the Anna Young Alumnae House. Thirty-four members of the class were present at the banquet Friday night.

Martha Johnson, chairman of the decorations committee, arranged a beautiful banquet table with holly, pine branches and cones, and red candles, and the same effective decorations were used throughout the Alumnae House. Martha Summers, life president of the class, presided at the banquet and welcomed the alumnae back for this first reunion. After dinner Mortar Board honored the visitors with coffee in the Murphey Candler Building.

Among those returning for the reunion were Frances Belford, Lucile Cairns, Frances Cary, Cornelia Christie, Ann Cox, Kathleen Daniel, Lucile Dennison, Jane Estes, Charline (Fleece) Halverstadt, Mary Gillespie, Nellie Margaret Gilroy, Margaret

"Three Girls in a Room"; WSB at 9:15 Every Wednesday

Agnes Scott's radio program has been changed from 5 p. m. on Wednesday afternoon to 9:15 a. m. The program is broadcast over WSB, (740 kilocycles) and a group of alumnae and students take parts in the skit.

Betty Lou (Houck) Smith, '35, is the author of the skit, and Alberta Palmour, '35, is helping her get material. The characters are Peg, a senior; Pudge, a sophomore; Ginger, a sophomore, and Mickey, a freshman. Peg, Pudge and Ginger are roommates and befriend poor little Mickey. These characters are played by Betty Lou (Houck) Smith, Mary (Freeman) Curtis, '26, Frances James, '36, and Carrie Phinney Latimer, '36, respectively. The extra voices are furnished by Joyce Roper, '38, and Ida Lois McDaniel, '35. Typical Agnes Scott students as they are, the girls encounter all the usual (and some unusual) events of the college year.

A Summer Course at Oxford

The Woman's Colleges of Oxford University have announced a summer course for American women graduates and teachers to be held for the fourth time in Oxford in July, 1938. These vacation courses are arranged to provide opportunities to qualified American graduates and teachers to experience scholastic life in this historic institution, and to enjoy the unique environment and associations of this ancient seat of learning. The subject of the course will be, "England in the Past Fifty Years." A number of England's outstanding scholars will lecture on the literature, history, politics, and thought of the period. There will be opportunities, also, for discussing topics of the lectures with Oxford University teachers. The course will open on Wednesday, July 6, and close on Wednesday, July 27, 1938. The fee will include full board, residence in the women's colleges, lectures, classes, excursions, and concerts. The organizing secretary in this country is Miss Marion L. Day, 9 St. Luke's Place, New York City.

Are You Planning a European Trip?

All Agnes Scott alumnae who are planning to tour Europe in the summer of 1938 will be interested to learn that Miss Leslie Gaylord will again conduct a small party, sailing June 18th on the Aquitania and spending two months in travel in France, Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Belgium, Holland, England, and Scotland. Every detail of the trip has been planned to assure a maximum of comfort, pleasure, and profit at a minimum of expense. For a descriptive itinerary and detailed information write to Miss Gaylord, Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Ga.

CARRIE SCANDRETT
Assistant dean, '24, "capping" a senior at Investiture.

Do You Need a Change?

Any alumnae who are interested in changing professions or in changing the locale in which they are practicing their professions, are requested to communicate with Mr. S. G. Stukes, Registrar, Agnes Scott College. Mr. Stukes is constantly being asked to recommend Agnes Scott girls for various positions, and is unable to suggest as many people as there are inquiries for lack of information about alumnae who are interested in a change. All correspondence about this matter will be regarded as strictly confidential.

A Gift to the Tea Room

The tea room is very much indebted to Martha Stansfield, '21, for a useful gift which she presented to Mrs. Kerrison, the manager. It is a Star "Quick-Serv" Toaster Grill which has greatly increased the facilities for making toast in the kitchen.

CLUB NEWS

Atlanta, Ga.

The Atlanta Club had its major project of the year on November 12th when it staged a benefit bridge. Several hundred alumnae and their friends were present to enjoy bridge and also a fashion show which used as its models some of the Agnes Scott students. Around a hundred and fifty dollars was cleared by this affair and the club plans to use most of this sum in helping the Alumnae House and Alumnae Garden Committees in their year's plans.

Augusta, Ga.

"About our Alumnae Club in Augusta—we are still so young that we are afraid to step out into deep water. We are hoping to have Alberta Palmour down for our dinner in February to talk to us about the college and tell us what the other clubs are doing. We hope to do something definite for the college next year."

Decatur, Ga.

The regular meetings have been held in the Alumnae House with interesting programs; our November meeting was a book review given by Mrs. Emma Garrett Morris to which friends of the club members were also invited. An interesting exhibit and sale of Penland, N. C., pewter was staged by Gussie (O'Neal) Johnson, with the assistance of Mrs. R. B. Holt, and a very sizeable remuneration was gained from the sale of this exquisite metal work.

Charlotte, N. C.

Charlotte had the privilege of having Dr. McCain as its guest speaker on November 16th when the alumnae from Charlotte gathered at the home of the new president, Cama (Burgess) Clarkson, for the first meeting of the new year. There were also many out-of-town visitors: Mary (Mack) Ardrey, who is a member of the first graduating class, '93, of Fort Mills, S. C.; Vivian (Gregory) Dungan, ex-'21, and Alice (Cannon) Guille, ex-'20, of Salisbury, N. C.; Mrs. H. B. Arbuckle and Dell Arbuckle, '31, of Davidson, N. C.; and Mary Margaret Stowe, '36, of Belmont. About forty alumnae were in attendance to hear the inspiring message of Dr. McCain.

As special guests the club had the mothers of the girls who are now at Agnes Scott: Mrs. W. E. Adams, Jean Barry's mother; Mrs. H. B. Patterson, Patty's mother; Mrs. Bert Patterson, Frec Sproles' mother; Mrs. Peter Burke, Gentry's mother; Mrs. Leon Lawrence, Katherine's mother.

As one reporter writes: "It was truly a delightful meeting and you can readily understand why when I tell you that Maria Rose, Mary (Kessler) Dalton, and Sally (Cothran) Lambeth had charge of arrangements."

Faculty News

Miss Nannette Hopkins is rapidly regaining her strength after four months in bed, and was able to go in town to her physician the middle of December.

Miss Lillian Smith is much improved but has decided to take leave of absence for the remainder of this session and is spending the winter in Florida. Her address is 123 N. E. 97th St., Miami.

Carrie Scandrett, '24, assistant dean, was elected president of the Georgia Association of Women's Deans at the meeting of this organization in Milledgeville, October 29-30.

Mr. S. G. Stukes has been appointed a member of a committee to unify teacher training requirements in the southern states by the Southern University Conference. Agnes Scott is the only woman's college boasting a committee member.

Miss Catherine Torrance, accompanied by Miss Narka Nelson, of the Latin department, attended a meeting of the Classical Association of the Middle West and South in New Orleans Thanksgiving holidays. Miss Torrance was one of the speakers on the program.

Professor C. W. Dieckmann has had three original compositions accepted for publication this fall. An anthem dedicated to Joseph Reagan, director of All Saints' Choir, a solo which is a setting of Rosetti's "Uphill," and a Benedictus.

Miss Melissa Cilley was selected as one of the ten speakers at the tenth annual meeting of the South Atlantic Modern Language Association, which met in Rock Hill, S. C., in November. Miss Cilley spoke on "Spanish Contributions to Civilization."

Elizabeth (Mable) Cloud, Institute, Enrolls Again!

Elizabeth (Mable) Cloud, Institute, mother, grandmother, sister among seven sisters, all of whom attended Agnes Scott, flower lover, artist, and book lover, but charming, gracious woman above all, is enrolled at Agnes Scott College again after forty years away from the college of her young womanhood.

Mrs. Cloud, who entered Agnes Scott for the first time in 1896, has told her children for years that when she got them all educated and through school, she herself was going back; now that all six children have finished and are fully equipped to make lives for themselves, she is back, with her easel and paintbrushes, studying art with Miss Louise Lewis.

One of the seven Mable sisters of Decatur, Mrs. Cloud was practically brought up at Agnes Scott. In 1896, just a few years after she was married, Elizabeth Cloud matriculated at Agnes Scott Institute to study art. Although the care of two small sons, ages three and one, took a great deal of her time, she managed to study at the college for four years, or until she and her family moved to North Carolina. There in a small town this active woman developed the interests which have kept her literally on her toes since then: she did social work with the people who worked in the mills around Rockingham, Cheraw, and Hamlet, people who were superior to the average mill worker, for they were of the better class of farmers who had been unable to make a living in those mountains, and who brought their families to these mill towns where they had gained something of security. There were no foreigners here and no strikes. These people had their own schools and churches, and, with the help of Elizabeth Cloud and others like her, soon had their own libraries and parks and gardens. But in those earliest days she nursed, rode horseback with the doctor to assist in operations and deliveries.

Second to no other interests in her life is her garden which spreads over four acres surrounding her home in Hamlet. There is a wild garden, for which she has gathered flowers from the surrounding woods, filled with azaleas, rhododendron, and mountain laurel. Her iris garden contains all the twenty varieties of wild iris for which North Carolina is famous. Her bulb garden is unbelievably beautiful in the spring, for she has every variety of daffodil and jonquil known to botanists planted in her gardens. The garden of her heart is her "friendship garden" in which things grow in great abundance to be shared with friends and neighbors.

There are four sons and two daughters to whom she has been mother, and, since 1915, father also. Lewis, Jr., graduated at Georgia Tech and is sales manager of General Houses, Inc., in North Carolina. Joel graduated at Davidson and is manager of the Furness-Withy Steamship Lines in Baltimore. Fayette also went to Tech and is in charge of the Cloud Ballast Pit, a sand and gravel mine in Hamlet. Curtis graduated at the University of North Carolina in 1937 and is with the Southeastern Underwriters in Columbus, Ga. The girls, Elizabeth and Polly, are both at home in Hamlet now, but Elizabeth graduated at Converse, married, and after the death of her husband, brought her daughter, Elizabeth Breeden, home with her. Polly graduated from Sweetbriar, and has managed the house for her mother since then. The other four grand children are Betty, Martha, Pete and Fayette, Jr., children of her second son.

Next in importance to her garden and her children is her house, which is beautifully furnished in antiques. Mrs. Cloud drew the plan for her house and was her own contractor. The garden she designed as a setting for the house and it is a perfect picture. Beyond the gardens lie the stables and the pasture in which her favorite saddle horse runs. Mrs. Cloud still rides horseback and insists that she would be driving a horse and carriage if the automobiles hadn't driven her off the road. The greatest joy she gets from her house is in entertaining guests in it, and when the fortieth anniversary of her wedding arrived a few years ago she planned a houseparty for her six bridesmaids, all of whom are widows now, and the seven girlhood friends had a most glorious visit together.

Very close to her heart are the six sisters with whom she grew up and with whom she came to Agnes Scott: Cliff Mable, 1893-96; Clio (Mable) Cates, 1893-96; Katie Mable, 1890-96; Lella Mable, 1891-94; Lottie (Mable) Cromartie, 1891-94; and Lucy (Mable) LeSeur, 1891-93. Three of them still live in the old Mable home in Decatur, and Mrs. Cloud is living there while she is studying at Agnes Scott.

The courage and enthusiasm of this white-haired lady, who, undaunted by four flights of stairs to the art studio, climbs each day to the top and spends her mornings painting and sketching with her art teacher, are an inspiration to those young students who see her going about her work each day. Reminiscent of a generation of gracious Southern women whose appearance was deceptive in that it masked a degree of vitality and will power unsuspected by those who knew them best, she is one whom Agnes Scott is proud to call her own.

Just like the happiness of dreams.
You've pulled me out of all this bog,

You dear old palsy Catalogue.

Catalogue:

Alas! I live but one short year,
But if I've helped you from your bogs,

I am content at last to go
The way of all good catalogues!

The End.

"Not in the Catalogue":

As for the necessities, the average allowance at Agnes Scott is $10 per month. The majority of girls have less than $10, some few, more, $5.00 being sufficient unless the person in question has the "drug store habit" to extreme. Clothes average $150 to $400 a year, the expenditure being more the first year than any other, since there is a tendency to outgrow clothes left over from high school days and there is some extra output as the student gets ready for college. The smartest campus clothes are sweaters and skirts or tailored dresses. In addition to any "Sunday" dresses, a student needs two evening dresses at least and some sort of evening wrap, these being needed for Wednesday night dinners on the campus and concerts and other events in Atlanta and at the college.

GRANDDAUGHTERS' CLUB

The officers of the Granddaughters' Club, who are pictured above, are Caroline Armistead, '39, president; Margaret Douglas, '38, vice-president; and Susan Goodwyn, '39, secretary-treasurer.

The Granddaughters' Club is composed of those girls whose mothers attended Agnes Scott, too, and has its meetings in the Alumnae House at frequent intervals. The meetings are usually informal teas with the one elaborate meeting of the year a banquet in the spring. The Granddaughters had their first meeting early in November with twenty-seven present.

The Club for the current session numbers thirty-one members including: Caroline Armistead, '39, daughter of Frances (McCrorry) Armistead, Acad.; Betty Boote, '41, daughter of Mary (Ferguson) Boote, ex-'16; Marion Candler, '41, daughter of Marion (Symmes) Candler, ex-'15; Elizabeth Cousins, '38, daughter of Pearl (Estes) Cousins, Inst.; Margaret Douglas, '38, daughter of Annie Belle (Monroe) Douglas, Inst.; Kathryn Donehoo, '41, daughter of Florence (Kellogg) Donehoo, ex-'17; Nell Scott Earthman, '38, daughter of Eliza (Candler) Earthman, ex-'12; Florence Ellis, '41, daughter of Florence (Day) Ellis, ex-'16; Catherine Farrar, '39, daughter of Berta Lena (David) Farrar, Acad.; Martha Fite, '40, daughter of Ethyl (Flemister) Fite, ex-'06; Carolyn Forman, '40, daughter of Mary (Dortch) Forman, Inst.; Susan Goodwyn, '39, daughter of Linda (Simril) Goodwyn, Inst.; Penn Hammond, '40, daughter of the late Elizabeth (Denman) Hammond, '18; Kathleen Jones, '39, and Leonora Jones, '40, daughters of Elizabeth (Parks) Jones, Inst.; Winifred Kellersberger, '38, daughter of Julia Lake (Skinner) Kellersberger, '19; Martha Marshall, '39, daughter of Mattie (Hunter) Marshall, '10; Sarah Bond Matthews, '40, daughter of the late Annie Parks (Bond) Matthews, Inst.; Mary McPhaul, '40, daughter of Ruth Lynn (Brown) McPhaul, Acad.; Jane Moses, '40, daughter of Frances (Thatcher) Moses, '17; Katherine Patton, '40, daughter of Katherine (Jones) Patton, ex-'18; Jeanne Redwine, '39, daughter of Lucy (Reagan) Redwine, '10; Louise Scott Sams, '41, daughter of Louise (Scott) Sams, Inst.; Julia Sewell, '39, daughter of Margaret (Bland) Sewell, '20; Gene Slack, '41, and Ruth Slack, '40, daughters of Julia Pratt (Smith) Slack, ex-'12; Betty Sloan, '41, daughter of Eunice (Briesenick) Sloan, ex-'12; Ellen Vereen Stuart, '40, daughter of the late Pearl (Vereen) Stuart, ex-'11; Mary Nell Tribble, '38, daughter of Martha (Schaefer) Tribble, Inst.; Bonnie Westbrook, '41, daughter of Ida (White) Westbrook, Inst.; and Mary Scott Wilds, '41, daughter of Laura (Candler) Wilds, Inst.

June - Agnes Scott - And You

AGAIN WE CALL THE ROLL OF REUNION CLASSES:

'00, '01, '02, '03

'19, '20, '21, '22

Class of '37

And all others who want to make a trip back to the college this June, whether this is your class reunion or not.

It is none too early to write that roommate to meet you here! It is just the time to extract a promise that the family will gladly take care of little Jimmy and Susie! And the Boss ought to be in a genial holiday mood to approach for time off from June 4th to June 7th!

Agnes Scott is planning already for your coming in June!

Agnes Scott College

Decatur, Georgia

WELCOME, ALUMNAE!

As the Commencement season draws near, we "old-timers" at Agnes Scott begin to long for our daughters to come home. We are glad that you are busy and that you have important work to do, but in a real family the home members like for the absent ones to report on what you are doing. We are proud of your accomplishments. If you have accumulated husbands and children, we will be glad to see them too. If they cannot come, perhaps you are not as indispensable in the home as you think, and they may spare you for a little while.

As we are finishing the forty-ninth year of our history, we would like to have your wisdom in making plans for the Semi-Centennial. We would like for the celebration of that event to be the most noteworthy in the entire history of the College. We have a splendid committee composed of Trustees, Faculty, and Alumnae, with Professor S. G. Stukes, as Chairman, but they have not yet formulated plans, and are open to suggestions.

Many of you will be interested in one suggestion that has been submitted. It is only tentative because the Trustees have not yet passed upon it, but it is an illustration of many ideas which will be interesting. The proposal is that we erect a new dormitory, to be known as Hopkins Hall in honor of our beloved Dean, and that we include in it a single dining room and kitchen which would be adequate to take care of the entire campus community as now constituted so that all the girls, and the faculty who care to eat in the dining room, may be together, and thus avoid the separation that is inevitable when we have two dining rooms. We would certainly like to honor Miss Hopkins, and we need the dormitory space, and it would be economical and perhaps desirable to have a single dining room. It is therefore a suggestion which interests us very much.

What would you like to propose?

Cordially,

President.

COMMENCEMENT

Reunion Time at Agnes Scott! The classes of '00, '01, '02, '03, '19, '20, '21, '22, and the baby class of '37 have a very special invitation back this year because by the Dix plan it's your reunion year. But the alumnae of every class and age are invited back with the same warmth and expectancy. Will you come?

To each of us there is some very personal thing that always brings back Agnes Scott; if we thought a thousand years we'd probably never guess that memory of yours, or you guess ours. It may be the gleam of the colonade in the sunlight, it may be the long cool halls of old Main with that remembered hush, a sudden whiff of the tea-olive in the Alumnae Garden, the memory of a beloved friend of college days, the silhouette of Buttrick against a star-filled sky, the smell of the pines and the freshly cut grass on the Quadrangle,—your Agnes Scott is your own bright memory!

But to each of us there comes the same joy in seeing again our college, in renewing old ties with the faculty, and in living once more those gay student days. There is something about coming back to the campus again which opens all the flood gates of memory and from the time you arrive until the moment you have to leave, you are reviving forgotten escapades, exchanging "Do you remember" with others, visiting old haunts and living so completely in the memory of your college days that by the time "Ancient of Days" sounds on Graduation Day it is doubtful which is the senior and which the alumna. In truth we sometimes fear that some alumna is going to join the processional in a reunion trance and advance for another degree!

So we bring you this most urgent of invitations to spend the Commencement Week-End back at school. At the time this Quarterly went to press the speakers on the Commencement program were not known, but with all respect to that little item we doubt if that is a telling argument with alumnae anyway. We know they will be speakers well worth hearing and that we will enjoy hearing them, but more than all else we will be here ourselves, a host of "old girls" enjoying each other, and that's what makes commencement for alumnae!

June is only a step away from April, so write that old friend and begin to make plans to be here, or gather up a car load of Agnes Scotters in your home town and come. The date is late enough not to conflict with the dates for high school graduations, June weather is perfect in Decatur, and all Agnes Scott will be waiting to welcome you back!

June 3rd—Alumnae Children's Party, given by Decatur Agnes Scott Club.

June 4th—Trustees' Luncheon for alumnae, seniors, and faculty in Rebekah Scott dining room, 1:30 p. m.

Annual meeting of Alumnae Association, 3:30 p. m.

(Reports of committees to be condensed into a general report given by the president to insure a short session.)

Phi Beta Kappa Initiation, 6:30 p. m., followed by banquet in Alumnae House.

Blackfriars Performance at 8:30 p. m. in Bucher Scott Auditorium.

June 5th—Baccalaureate Services, Bucher Scott Auditorium, 11:00 a. m.

Senior Vespers, 6:00 p. m.

Open House in the Alumnae House and Garden, 6:30 p. m.

(This reception is in honor of alumnae, seniors, their friends and relatives, and the faculty.)

June 6th—ALUMNAE DAY. Reunion class luncheons in the Alumnae House, 1:00 p. m.

Class Day Exercises, 4:00 p. m.

Concert by the Department of Music, 8:30 p. m., in Bucher Scott Auditorium.

June 7th—Commencement Exercises in Auditorium, 10:00 o'clock.

The rustling in the ivy seems to re-echo the song

That the wide-flung gates are sending to bid you

Welcome Home.

"AND HAVE YOU READ . . . ?"

ELIZABETH LILLY (MRS. HUGH THOMAS SWEDENBERG, JR.), '27

For several reasons I should never have been asked, as I was, to give a "presentation of the outstanding books of the year." For one thing, I have a sort of phobia of outstanding books and am likely to shy away from the best selling volumes which are piled into pyramids in bookstores and are assiduously reviewed in all the women's clubs so that all the women can talk glibly about them. The result of this irrational complex is, of course, that I sometimes miss fine books out of sheer perversity. I shall not therefore mention again And So—Victoria, The Arts, The Citadel, and such like upstanding tomes, which everyone else has probably read. Of Miss Stein's Everybody's Autobiography can be offered only a fervent thanksgiving that the critics have finally spoken out clear and bold (see Clifton Fadiman's soul-satisfying review in the December 4th New Yorker). J. B. Rhine's New Frontiers of the Mind is all very exciting, no doubt, if you like to guess at cards and believe you're psychic. I don't. Christopher Morley's "modernization" of the Troilus and Criseyde story, The Trojan Horse, is unfortunate, to say the least. I almost had apoplexy when I read in one review that Morley "follows Chaucer's interpretation of the old story quite exactly, making it fit his times as Chaucer did his . . . The actors in the drama are presented with Chaucerian feeling." I can think of no reason for Mr. Morley's fanciful meanderings, unless he has run out of material for his weekly page in The Saturday Review. I cannot help wishing, though, that he would confine the subjects of his whimsies to dogs and cockroaches where they are vastly more appropriate. Or maybe it's my sense of humor that's at fault.

But to greener pastures. There does seem to be a large number of this year's books which are thoroughly rewarding. I can discuss only a few of them at any length but I can't resist mentioning some others. Thomas Mann's Freud, Goethe, Wagner further illuminates not only those three great nineteenth-century figures, but also the remarkable and ever stimulating mind of its author. Anyone who is interested in any of the four surely will find it valuable. The third of Mann's Joseph series is just out, too—Joseph in Egypt. Reading The Life and Death of a Spanish Town by Elliott Paul is so vivid an experience that it is difficult afterwards to think of it as a book. Mr. Paul has written with such sincerity, such passionate intensity that the reader experiences an awakening of sympathy and enlargement of spirit. Books which do this for us are not common. Eve Curie's life of her mother, Madame Curie, is another one that does give

Of ebb and flow, and ever-during power;
And central peace, subsisting at the heart
Of endless agitation.*

Madame Curie is a great book because it is the simple inspired story of a simple and inspired woman of invincible idealism. It is foolish and futile to try to give much of the effect of reading this book, of coming to know rather intimately those two powerful and noble minds, Marie and Pierre Curie. It would be a pity to miss it.

Because Alexander Woolcott included Kenneth Gramme's The Golden Age in his Second Reader I mention that omnibus. There seems to be a vast number of widely read people who do not know that small classic and its companion volume Dream Days. Since first I met "The Reluctant Dragon," "The Blue Room," "The Burglars" and those other leisurely tales of childhood in England, I have cherished them greatly and passed my enthusiasm on to numbers of students in English I, who could not choose but hear. Thanks to Mr. Woolcott, therefore, for bringing at least one of these volumes into public notice.

The year 1937 brought two more books of John Steinbeck to light: Of Mice and Men, which everyone must have read by this time, and a fine piece of writing it is; and The Red Pony, not so widely heralded but a collection of three very sensitively written stories. The ways of fame are hard to understand. Steinbeck wrote several books before Of Mice and Men, all different, all effective in their way. Yet that one is acclaimed and the others are mostly unknown. The cult of Steinbeck worshippers is growing, though, and we shall undoubtedly hear increasingly more of him.

This year has seen the collected edition, with an introduction by John Middleton Murry, of The Short Stories of Katherine Mansfield. Of course this can hardly be called a new book, but in a sense it is. It is convenient to have all the stories together now. And because the stories of Katherine Mansfield are timeless, they are forever new. It is a happy thing to have an excuse (if such were needed) to lose oneself again in the magic of "Bliss," "At the Bay," "The Doll House." How did she do it? Perhaps we shall never know for surely no one after her has succeeded so well in showing the tremendous importance of trifles, the significance of the moment of awareness when a lifetime is envisioned. Nor has anyone equalled her swift, intuitive flashes, the excitement, wonder, and pathos implicit in the most casual appearing phrase. Could anyone ever forget the ending of "Life of Ma Parker"? "Ma Parker stood looking up and down. The icy wind blew out her apron into a balloon. And now it began to rain. There was nowhere." Or of "Miss Brill"? "But when she put the lid on she thought she heard something crying." Or of "The Doll House"? "I see the little lamp." You see, this is another reason I shouldn't have been asked to comment on the new books. I'm too likely to go off on a tangent like this about something I probably shouldn't even have mentioned. If, though, you don't know Katherine Mansfield's stories, Letters, and Journal, don't take up time reading America's Sixty Families or even The Folklore of Capitalism.

Another collected edition of the fall is interesting—The Collected Poems of Sara Teasdale. The book reveals Miss Teasdale's steady maturing as a poet, from the early facile versifying of emotions through periods of increasing sincerity and economy to the authentic poetry of her later volumes. She was not a major poet, not even a versatile one, but in the one key in which she sang, she attained mastery.

The living poets have not been idle. I confess to having been bored by Edna Millay's long awaited Conversation at Midnight, but perhaps I didn't try hard enough. Still I cannot believe that it would have received more than passing notice had it not been by the glamorous and undoubtedly talented Miss Millay. I could also do nicely without this last example of Ezra Pound's cryptography, The Fifth Decade of Cantos. Life seems so short, time so fleeting and art so very long when I get into those learned and undoubtedly brilliant animadversions on usury! I should like to get hold of Next Door to a Poet, Rollo Walter Brown's intimate portrait of Edwin Arlington Robinson and his "somewhat cool elevation of spirit." So far I have not been able to, nor have I read Richard Thornton's Recognition of Robert Frost, which brings together notices, reviews, and sketches of Mr. Frost over the twenty-five year period from the publication of A Boy's Will.

I did read, with some care, Robinson Jeffers' Such Counsels You Gave to Me, because I am convinced that no matter what Mr. Jeffers thinks about the human race, he is an extremely able poet. The very title of this latest book, harking back to the domestic tragedy of the old English ballad "Edward" indicates at once that this is another treatment of the almost inevitable theme of his longer poems—incest. He keeps the true nature of his stories symbolic, while endowing them with remarkable realism of style. There is here as in his other poems the long slow line, the deep pulsating rhythm, the raging despair, the same profound relationship with nature, and the same unquestionable and intense sincerity. This is another in the cycle of poetic and vehement dramas based on introversion, in which man is urged to fall in line outwardly (with nature) rather than inwardly (with people), and again Mr. Jeffers chooses to chronicle the stricken moments of humanity. Back in Thurso's Landing he said of humanity:

It is rather ignoble in its quiet times, mean in its pleasures, Slavish in the mass; but at stricken moments it can shine terribly against the dark magnificence of things.

And again:

*It (life) owns no other manner of shining, in the broad gray eye of the ocean, at the foot of the beauty of the mountains
And skies but to bear pain; for pleasure is too little, our inhuman God is too great, thought is too lost.*

It seems to me rather absurd to find fault with him (or any other artist) for picturing the world as he sees it, as long as his reading of it is thoughtful, sincere, and intelligible. It is a world that most of us do not see, but he sees it without any doubt. He replies to his critics in this latest volume in the poem "Self-criticism in February" concluding with the devastatingly simple statement "I can tell lies in prose." It should be obvious by now that neither the neglect of the masses nor the ridicule of many of the critics is going to persuade Mr. Jeffers to record in poetry a world he does not see. It may be that his bias, philosophy, preoccupation—call it what you may—will exclude him from the company of the great poets. It is too soon to know about that. In this book Jeffers expresses his own idea of his place and purpose to be truth-bound, the neutral Detested by all the dreaming factions is my errand here.

There we may safely leave him.

As an antidote for such seriousness, there are the collected verses of Margaret Fishback, One to a Customer, delightful to read, to remember, to have about. This has, in fact, been a productive year for humor, both high and low. Robert Benchley brought forth another gorgeous gallery of gallant inventions—After 1903—What? Thurber, whose slightest line either drawn or written pleases me immeasurably, has done what he could about the Dale Carnegie menace with Let Your Mind Alone. But of course the millions (or is it millions yet?) of people who have been learning how to win friends and influence people will likely not ever see Mr. Thurber's book, let alone read it. In Academic Procession James Reid Parker has a beautiful time at the expense of the academic life. Every right-minded person who ever taught in a college will enjoy it vastly as well as numbers of others who are not unaware of academic circles and their ways. Best of all is Leonard Q. Ross' The Education of Hyman Kaplan. Words fail me here—as they never did the redoubtable Mr. Kaplan. I don't see how anything could be funnier than this and at the same time so heart warming. Mr. Parkhill and his seekers after knowledge are more real than our next door neighbors and twice as diverting. The sessions of the night school for adults do not become dull even after we have sat in on them repeatedly. I shall never forget Mr. Kaplan on the beatific smile and the sublime self-confidence.

Perhaps these remarks would be more adequate if they included at least the titles of some of the books I hope to get very soon. Being subject to more than the usual amount of human frailty, I may not accomplish the hope for a long time, but the list, at least, includes:

Jules Romains, The Depths and the Heights
M. A. DeWolfe Howe, John Jay Chapman and His Letters
Ivan T. Sanderson, Animal Treasure
Emanuel Hertz, ed., The Hidden Lincoln
Peter Morell, Poisons, Potions and Profits
Edgar Snow, Red Star Over China
Joseph Mitchell, My Ears Are Bent
Bemelman, My War With the United States
Carl Crow, Four Hundred Million Customers
William Maxwell, They Came Like Swallows
Liam O'Flaherty, Famine
Edith Hamilton, trans., Three Greek Plays: Prometheus Bound, Agamemnon, The Trojan Women

Now you tell me what you've been reading and how you liked it!

ALUMNAE Here and There

MYRA JERVEY'S PERSONALITY CLINIC

It isn't listed in college catalogues but it's rapidly becoming the most important subject taught on feminine campuses, and chiefly because of the personality of the woman who started it as a college course. For years there have been charm schools, advertised in the better magazines, and there have been people who believed in them, but never before has the charm school assumed such proportions as it has this past year on the college campuses in this country.

Myra Jervey, Agnes Scott graduate of the Class of 1931, is now affectionately dubbed the "dean of Charm" for she is the first woman who actually taught charm as a college course. In the three years which she has spent as director of the Stephens College home economics department she has completely remodeled the old style course in home economics and established what can accurately be called a "personality clinic." A phase of the clinic is a sewing room in which ten seamstresses work under the direction of a "boss" who is in turn under Myra. Girls who want new clothes go to Myra and she designs a dress for them; they purchase the necessary materials, pay the seamstresses a fixed sum for the labor, and then walk out with an original model for the sum of $10 or $15, the variance depending on the cost of materials. Myra's day begins at eight in the morning and frequently runs on until ten at night. It is filled with classes, private conferences, and overseeing the dress shop. Those private consultations are what do the trick for the girls, for she subtly advises them on their coiffeurs, their figures, their complexions, their posture, and then their wardrobes. These consultations bring in such practical problems as what to do with clothes that get too small after a few months of the "regular hours and increased weight" that characterize freshman years, and Myra gives advice on what can be remodeled and how, and what must be replaced to keep the wardrobe complete, all the while advising the student on colors, line and matters of taste.

Myra studied art in New York for two years after finishing at Agnes Scott, and worked at Parsons and the New York School of Fine Art. She began her work as a designer in the shops of Elizabeth Hawes and Muriel King, and later trekked off to Paris to work as an apprentice at Patou's, there learning clothes as only the French can know them.

In the meantime Dr. James Madison Wood, president of Stephens Junior College, in Columbia, Mo., went to Hollywood to consult Adrian, the famous film designer, on how to aid college girls in the selection of their wardrobes. Dr. Wood had the subject much at heart and tried to get Adrian to come to Stephens and lecture. Failing in that, he resorted to a suggestion offered by the great designer. Why not offer a course in "charm" as, for want of a better word, the two men decided to call it, and get some designer with plenty of ability and initiative to put it over. There were plenty of designers available, but there weren't many with initiative and ability and college degrees, and Myra Jervey got the job.

The charm school at Stephens was so much talked about and the results of the personality clinic were so evident that girls from all over the country flocked to the college to matriculate. The other women's colleges, unable to maintain a year-round department of charm, did the next best thing, and instituted "charm week" with some personal consultant as director. At Agnes Scott the first charm week was held in January, 1937, and Miss Elizabeth Osborne, of New York City, was lecturer, the movement being under the direction of Mortar Board. The value of the charm clinic was so evident on this campus that this year Y. W. C. A. and Student Government combined with Mortar Board to provide the funds necessary for such a project. The results were a completely revolutionized diet with much of the starchy element that was causing bad skins and excess weight omitted, a consciousness of the necessity for good grooming even on the campus, enough curiosity aroused in the students to make them study carefully style and suitability before adding to their wardrobes, and a conspicuous absence of the sloppiness in dress and manner that has hitherto characterized girls' colleges.

INTERVIEWING WOMEN WRITERS

Sarah Shields (Mrs. John Pfeiffer), '27

The author has had much experience in newspaper work, having conducted a column, features articles, as well as handling society news. She is now secretary of the New England Woman's Press Association and is writing for magazines and is also an interesting speaker.

I do not feel qualified to discuss writers and let anyone believe me a writer. Rather do I feel like Ruth, the daughter-in-law of Naomi in the Bible, who went after the reapers or writers and gleaned a harvest of ideas that the writers dropped in interviews and talks. This harvest of stories about women and how they write I reaped from my work as a reporter, a society editor and a columnist.

Sylvia Thompson, the distinguished English author of "Hounds of Spring," visited Boston last year and discussed women as novelists. She said that it is difficult for a woman to be a novelist because of the terrific emotional let-down when she completes a story and because she has so many domestic interruptions and that it is equally hard for a novelist to be a woman because choosing clothes and being well-groomed take so much energy.

Women are just as individual in their methods of writing as they are in their choice of clothes. No two alike—that's how they write. Some go at it laboriously, grinding out every word with almost a physical pain while others dash it off wherever they happen to be.

As to why women write—that's simpler. I believe there are two main reasons why. One, like Pearl Buck's incentive, is because they need money to help a loved one. The other is because women seem to write to fulfill an inner urge that drives them to put ideas on paper. Often this ambition is deferred when they are busy with young children, like Emilie Loring, and it isn't until their children are grown that they can give full vent to this desire.

Kathleen Norris told last year when she was in Boston that one of her first stories came back from magazines thirty-eight times before it was accepted. She did not begin her writing career until she was over thirty, but think what a great number of novels and stories she has turned out since then! Mrs. Norris has the rare ability of being able to write anywhere, any time. She has even written an enthralling love scene with her typewriter propped up on a suitcase while waiting to catch a train in a station.

Helen Topping Miller, author of "Storm Over Eden," "Hawk in the Wind" and numerous short stories of her romantic theme, capitalized upon her teaching experience at Wesleyan College to write even when her son was a baby, by holding him on one knee and her paper on the other. Mrs. Miller has written for more than twenty-five years and, like every successful writer I know, makes a business of her profession. When she lived near Biltmore, N. C., she would go to her office in Biltmore every morning at ten o'clock and write through until three o'clock. Her office is adequately but simply furnished with a desk, straight chair and a rocking chair. She keeps no telephone there and her only interruption comes at noon when the corner drug store sends up a tray for her luncheon.

Mary Roberts Rinehart found that poor health enabled her to write. She had studied nursing and, after graduation, married a young surgeon, Dr. Rinehart. They had three children before she was twenty-five. She kept so busy with the youngsters that finally her health gave way. The Rineharts found themselves twelve thousand dollars in debt due to bad investments, so she began to write earnestly. In a year she had sold forty-five stories and made twelve hundred dollars. She wrote in odd moments when the children were away or asleep, on a card table using two fingers on a typewriter. Today she writes long hand with a plain pen. "The Man in Lower Ten" was written while she was building up her strength for an operation.

Emilie Loring, successful and consistent writer of romantic novels, grew up in a literary family, being given books instead of toys for playthings. After her two sons were grown, she became interested in writing book reviews and then turned to fiction. She has since written one novel a year. Her sixteenth book, called "Today Is Yours," was published in February. Mrs. Loring likes to believe that when a person picks up one of her books he or she will think, "I'll park my problems and have a good time," because she frankly writes to entertain. Her days are so planned that she goes to the famous Athenaeum at nine-thirty and writes until two-thirty. She keeps a forest of pencils at her elbow and, whenever she is stuck for an idea, finds that sharpening a pencil also sharpens her thoughts. She keeps a great many notebooks, full of ideas, and hundreds of clippings from papers and magazines. She is one of the few people who can write without working out a plot in detail beforehand—she merely creates characters and then lets them live out their lives.

Margaret Lee Runbeck, one of the leading present-day writers of short stories, practically wrote her way through college by selling articles to women's magazines. Later she did newspaper reporting and fashion advertising before devoting all her time to fiction. She commutes to her office in Boston as regularly as a business man. She and her secretary arrive at nine o'clock. The secretary takes dictation or types manuscripts until one-thirty. From then until four, Miss Runbeck plans the next day's work. Her delightful stories appear in McCall's, Pictorial Review, This Week and other publications. Her novel, "For Today Only," will be published in April. And in May, she will go abroad (her hobby) and spend a while in London, which she particularly loves.

And so, when I pick up a book written by a woman I like to think of it as more than a handful of paper, printer's ink and binder's board. I like to think of it as a testament to a woman's ability to manage two or three careers at the same time and as evidence of a budgeted life and of carefully hoarded hours.

A TRIP THROUGH THE PYRENEES AT FOUR MILES AN HOUR

Mary Virginia Allen, '35

Franco-American Exchange Student
1936-37

Three days of vacation for Mardi Gras was an interesting prospect, but there was a fly in the ointment—our purses were deflated in a most discouraging way. Where could one go for three days on 150 francs? Certainly not to Paris, or Nice, or even Biarritz! But we were full of energy, the weather was warm, and with the mountains only forty miles away, our problem was solved. A hike in the Pyrenees! The vote was unanimous.

So at noon on February 6, with a little sack on our backs in the typical tramp style, we stepped off the train at Foix, a village in the foothills of the Pyrenees—and looked around us. The brilliant sun suggested the extreme southern atmosphere we were going into. On a cliff, high up against the sky, a "chateau-fort" dominated the village. Its white stone has not become discolored with the centuries; no tower is in ruins. It is old and yet alive—a rare and interesting combination.

Early in the afternoon we started on our way to Tarascon (in Ariège) following the less used of two roads along the river. A cart passed, the old woman peered at us from under her shawl and muttered something in patios to her husband beside her. Dogs barked at us ferociously as we passed through the tiny villages; they, too, knew we were strangers.

Our English companion remarked significantly that the British army always takes a five minute rest every hour. Of course we resented this slur cast upon our endurance, but nevertheless we stopped willingly at the end of the first hour, stretched out on the rock wall by the edge of the road, and breathed in the warm afternoon air. At the end of the second hour we came in sight of a tiny village where we hoped to enjoy a cup of coffee or a glass of milk (even goat's milk would taste good). We saw the little church, we saw the school house and several astonished children, we saw three pigs and some hens under a shed, but we didn't see anything which suggested coffee. We were about to continue our journey without refreshment when someone spied a sign "Tobac-Café" tacked over a narrow doorway. Our knock was answered by a woman with stringy black hair and a sack apron, who spoke amazingly good French for that isolated section of the mountains. We were led into a dingy little room with a bag of meal and a broken bicycle in one corner, a calendar and a picture of Le-Brun on the wall, and a big grey cat sitting on the table. The coffee came steaming in bowls, and while we enjoyed it and the hunk of bread served with it, the woman asked us about the disastrous floods in America, which the newspapers were full of. We were secretly astonished to discover she ever saw a paper!

With renewed energy we set out at a good rate of speed. Soon it grew dark. Heavy clouds covered the sky; it began to lighten and rain. On the mountain there was a red glow from fire. We didn't mind getting wet.

The night was Wagnerian, and, singing the "Ride of the Valkerie," we went on down the road at a gallop. At eight o'clock we reached the tarascon where there was food and a bed.

The next morning it was raining so hard we had to go by train all the way to l'Hospitalet. The sky looked brighter after lunch, and we started on our hike to the Andarra frontier. The valley was limpid grey. White, misty clouds chased us and dropped snow flurries or rain drops. As we climbed higher, the clouds disappeared, and by three o'clock the snow was sparkling under the dazzling sun.

The road through to Spain is the result of excellent engineering. There is none of the first-up-and-then-down grading which is so often used in building mountain roads. This one is constructed on a steady, gradual ascent; however the climb left us breathless, and my heart was thumping away faithfully in an attempt to keep up with our four mile rate of speed. At four o'clock we were at the Andarra frontier, of which the only visible signs are a little shack of a customs house and a refuge. Several people were out on skis. The snow was then deeper on the road and it was more difficult to walk. We began to wonder if the "Pas de la Case" would be opened up. Now the really steep climb up to the crest of the pass began. At the end of an hour we were only half way up, but it was impossible to continue. A snow shovel and twenty men with spades (who resembled strikingly the smugglers in Carmen) were clearing the road. We tried to go on for a few yards, but sank up to our knees in the snow, so we stopped to breathe the sunshine, the wind, the cold air.

When we started down the snow was freezing over in the road. We went down—half sliding, half running—with nothing to stop us for miles. It was a glorious sensation! The gorges were beginning to get misty and purple but the snow on the peaks still caught the rosy glow of the sunlight. A bright star shone behind us, and later, down in the darkness of the valley, we could see all the stars.

The people at the hotel looked at us with pity that night when we came down to dinner in bedroom slippers. But we didn't need their sympathy. We hoped that some day they, too, would climb mountains, and get blisters, and pant for breath at the rate of four miles an hour.

THIS DAY'S "TROJAN WOMEN" Marjorie Daniel, '31

Member of the Executive Committee of Institute of Oriental Students for the Study of Human Relations.

A few days ago I was reading again in Euripides' Troades. The day I chose to read it was an ironical choice but a perfect one, for on that day six Chinese came together at the South-side House where I live in Chicago. Two were men, one China born and studying here; one American born, and until recently aiding the modernization of Shanghai with new air-conditioning and refrigerating processes. Three were Chinese women. Two were sisters born in New York, married not long ago to Chinese living in Peiping. One woman was born in Shanghai and has been for some years a student in the United States. The sixth of the group was an infant girl of five months, hardly born when war came.

These three Chinese women are of my own college generation. One, the mother of the child, is glad indeed to claim for her own Alma Mater the Georgia Alma Mater of Madame Sun Yat Sen, a woman of the new China. One is pregnant and fled Peiping to have her child in safety from air raids and bayonet thrusts. The sisters talked for long with an American woman, of their own age, whose Chinese husband has sought protection in Hongkong. All of them together read with concern a recent letter from a friend, an American woman, who, with her Chinese husband, is teaching in a Chinese college—teaching in the intervals between drills for refuge from aerial bombings.

Talk about the war was animated and at times called forth bits of characteristic Chinese humor. No one of these women, albeit so unceremoniously driven from the land of the great wall, wept and wailed like Hecuba without the ruined wall of ancient Troy. But when the main lecturer of the evening was speaking and all other voices were quiet, the Chinese women looked far away and saw nothing. I think they heard nothing.

It has been many a year since Euripides dared lay bare women's hearts and reveal the spiritual degradations of war. Thousands since have dared, but conquests, under whatever name, are still made. Those of us trained in the humanities, long accustomed to legal procedures and democratic forms freeze from the spine upwards at the thought of repudiating belief in men's power to govern themselves; we grow cynical at the dismal defeat of intelligence in the heat of armed combat, and we are outraged by wholesale violations of ordinary international comity.

This is not to say that the great body of international law (including treaties of peace) has been built on justice or even on semblances of idealism. The legalized injustices must be recognized, and the sooner the remaining democracies realize them and try to remedy them, the better. Their remedying, moreover, must go deeper than international bounds. To preserve the remnants of democracy within the states themselves the democracies must become increasingly more democratic and eradicate all forces making peace merely static.

But as divided and conflicting as peoples and ideologies are this day, many things still unite us. Humanity itself has numerous common aspirations—the desire to live, the pursuit of happiness; humanity the world over experiences life, love, suffering, death. Mankind is naturally good. Whether further goodness comes from religious or ethical or humanitarian impulses, is not so important as realization that depravity is learned by observation or of necessity. The highest expression of this goodness is religion—the charity and love of Christianity, the moderation and virtue of Confucianism, the nature worship of the Shintoists. Religion is common to us all.

What is possible when religion thoroughly permeates science so that its end is the greatest good to the greatest number has not yet been realized. The internationalism of this kind of science comes very near to our own perspectives, for everywhere academically-trained people especially have helped to build this particular internationalism. The method of science is used in Johannesburg, Istanbul, Cairo, as in Moscow, London, New York, and Tokyo, whether the method is exemplified in surgical operations, refrigeration, philology, or anthropology. If in the field of the social sciences what is now being done in the name of science is a justification of racial inequality, intolerance, bigotry, and intellectual persecution, or if in the physical sciences engines of war are perfected and not some germ-eliminating device or new electrical appliance for the blessing of man, we cannot blame science—we can blame only those scientists who are the willing tools of governments; we may well fear for those honest intellectuals who have no alternative but starvation and death.

~ Founder's Day Meetings and Greetings ~

Truly this was a year when we made good on our boast of an Agnes Scott day from coast to coast, for, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Great Lakes to the Gulf, alumnae were meeting for tea or dinner, as the hour fell in their towns, or as the lone alumna of other places, to hear the radio program. Failing that, there was still good fellowship of kindred souls to be enjoyed, messages from Agnes Scott which had been mailed to group meetings, and clever additions to the program as planned by the local alumnae. But the messages below speak for themselves as to the pleasure of the day. Let us say how grateful we at Agnes Scott are to those who planned the meetings and wrote or telegraphed to us that day. Our joy in your messages would make you feel that all the days of telephoning and writing notes which went ahead were at least worth while. From Dr. McCain and Miss Hopkins down to the least of us, it is a great day and one when our thoughts are nation-wide in interest.

In case you could not hear the radio, we are re-printing the welcome of Daisy Frances Smith, which included a letter from Miss Hopkins to you:

"As President of the Agnes Scott Alumnae Association, I am happy to have the privilege of speaking to the college's daughters. You would not be listening to this special Founder's Day program if you did not love Agnes Scott and I would not be trying to serve your association but for the same reason.

"There are many cords of love that bind us to Agnes Scott. We know she gave us splendid training—physical, social, intellectual, spiritual. Our habits and attitudes, our friendships, our emotional reactions, our understandings were all influenced. We are not people of identically one type, turned blindly out of one mold. We are individuals whose period of maturing was blessed—and so whose outlook was indelibly colored—by a fine institution. God bless her!

"So we pay tribute a few moments to the college we love.

"It is always people, who have made and who will make Agnes Scott. From one of these, greatly beloved by all who know her, comes a message to her girls. As Miss Nannette Hopkins, connected with the college since its founding, cannot be here tonight, I asked her to write you a letter, with which I shall close."

Dear Girls:

Through the courtesy of the President of our Alumnae Association I am able to give you my usual Founders' Day greeting. Every day I think of you, but on February 22nd you and our College are foremost in my thoughts. I like to think of the courage and faith and generosity of our founders. I recall with gratitude the work of Col. George W. Scott, Dr. F. H. Gaines, Mr. Samuel M. Inman and others who guided our institution in safety through almost overwhelming difficulties and discouragements. We all rejoice in the wonderful physical growth and development of your Alma Mater. We especially rejoice in the high standards, intellectual and moral, which it maintains and which you have helped to make possible. My prayer is that the coming years may bring to our College an even greater devotion to these ideals.

A warm welcome always awaits you at your second home. As I am rapidly growing stronger I hope to have the pleasure of seeing you when you visit the College. My love and interest always follow you.

Affectionately yours,

NANNETTE HOPKINS.

Alabama

Montgomery: The group here sent the following telegram: "We are all for you. Best wishes, Miss Hopkins." Millbrook, Montgomery.

Troy: The Troy group met for dinner at Mary (Enzor) Bynum's and wired "Just to say that we have enjoyed the Founder's Day program but missed more than you know your part in it. Are glad that you are better." Mary (Enzor) Bynum, Charlotte Smith, Alice Dunbar, Pearl (Waters) Lee.

Arkansas

Little Rock: The following wire received: "Although radio reception was poor here we received perfectly from each other all news of Agnes Scott. Very much enjoying the day together. So glad you are improving which is the best news we heard. Bill sends love along with a great deal of ours." Violet Weeks and Helen (Brown) Williams.

California

Berkeley: Helen (Hall) Hopkins wrote that she was rounding up the

Agnes Scotters in Berkeley and nearby towns and would let us know later about the meeting.

Connecticut

New Haven: Flora (Crowe) Whitmire writes: "We Agnes Scott girls in New Haven had such a nice party with Roberta Winter in her little apartment. She herself cooked the dinner which was just grand. There were only four of us as three were not able to come. I am glad we meet once a year anyway. Our love and best wishes to Miss Hopkins for a speedy recovery."

District of Columbia

Washington: This club postponed its Founders' Day luncheon until March 12 when new officers were elected. (The report of this meeting did not reach the office in time for publication in this issue.)

Florida

Gainesville: Mary Jane Tigert wrote: "The alumnae in Gainesville will be meeting together and thinking of our college on Tuesday. We are not able to tune in on WSB as early as 5:15 because of interference here, but we are getting together to talk and think about Agnes Scott over a cup of tea in the afternoon."

Pensacola: Sara (Strickland) Beggs and Katherine Pasco were joint hostesses at tea at Sara's home. The following telegram was sent after hearing the broadcast: "Pensacola girls listened with glad hearts to the good news from Agnes Scott and wish for you a speedy recovery. Program came in fine." Farris (Davis) Bauer, Hortense (Boyle) Bell, Frances (Stewart) Morrison, Katherine Pasco, Frances (Crenshaw) Page, Helen and Margaret Sandusky, Annie (Campbell) Brawner, Johnnie Louise (Kelly) Cheney, Annie Chapin McLane, Sara (Strickland) Beggs.

Tallahassee: Elizabeth Lynn wrote that the alumnae would be getting together either in Tallahassee or a nearby town.

Tampa: Twelve Tampa alumnae met for tea with Gregory (Rowlett) Weidman but could not get the broadcast at that early hour.

Georgia

Americus: Mattie (Hunter) Marshall entertained the alumnae with a lovely tea at her country home on the Andersonville Road. Following the reception of the broadcast and tea this wire was sent to Miss Hopkins: "Love and best wishes to you and the college." Reva DuPree, Em (Eldridge) Ferguson, Florence (Hildreth) Council, Mildred (Hollis) Luthey, Pansy Kimble, Lizzie Mae (Oliver) McAfee, Quenelle (Harrold) Sheffield, Frances (Oliver) Adams of Montezuma, Harriet (Rylander) Ansley, Louise (Hamil) Fain, Flora (Hamil) Duncan, and Mrs. Tom Vereen.

Athens: The alumnae here celebrated with a dinner at the home of Mrs. H. H. Cobb. Charlotte Newton reports that the radio program came through well and that everybody had a grand time. This telegram came: "Seventeen of us enjoyed listening to your Founder's Day program together and we send greetings and good wishes to our Alma Mater." Martha (Edmonds) Allen, Mary Elizabeth (Allgood) Birchmore, Grace Anderson, Augusta (Arnold) Barrow, Mamie A. Bacon, Frances Balkcom, Walterette (Arwood) Tanner, Edith Brightwell, Eleanor Brightwell, Cullen (Battle) Williams, Rubye (Carroll) Walker, Ruth (Cofer) Whelchel, Martha Comer, LaGrange (Cothran) Trussell, Olive (Hall) Shadgett, Virginia Hightower, Virginia (Lockman) Nelson, Daisy McDonald, Gabrilla (Lanier) Hunnicutt, Frances Moore, Charlotte Newton, Jennie Belle (McPhaul) Myers, Wilburta Aileen Parker, Frances (Paris) Hanna, Catherine (Pratt) Secrest, Ellen (Pratt) Rhodes, Mary Louise (Schuman) Simpson, Marie (Stone) Florence, Meredith Turner, Grace (Troutman) Wilson, Nelle (Upshaw) Gannon, Edna (Volberg) Johnson, Julia Walden, Jane Carithers, May (Walden) Morton, Pauline Wynne, Carolyn Myers, Katherine Jones, Ida (White) Westbrooks, of Ila, Ga., and Anna (Billups) Johnston, of Watkinsville.

Atlanta, Decatur, Agnes Scott Business Girls' Clubs: These three clubs met for dinner at the Atlanta Athletic Club with one hundred alumnae and escorts present. Eunice Ball, president of the Business Girls' Club, presided. Talks were made by Dr. McCain, Dorothy (Walker) Palmer, president of the Atlanta Club, and Helene (Norwood) Lammers, president of the Decatur Club. Dr. David Marx was the principal speaker of the evening. The local alumnae heard the broadcast before attending the dinner.

Augusta: Llewellyn Wilburn and Alberta Palmour were the guests of this group at their dinner meeting Founder's Day, Eugenia Symms presided. Following the broadcast and dinner Llewellyn Wilburn spoke to the group on alumnae work and college events. Those present were: Maude Gary, Dorothy Kethley, Virginia Stephens, Elizabeth Baethke, Ruth McAuliffe, Carolyn White, Mary Hull, Eugenia Symms, Mary Willis, Janet Newton, Lucile (Heath) McDonald, Jeanette (Victor) Levy, Kathryn (Leipold) Johnson, Virginia (Borum) Cumming, Minnie Lee (Clarke) Cordle, Christine (Sinclair) Parsons, Gena (Calloway) Merry, Jane Chandler, and Mrs. Lester Skinner.

Dalton: Gertrude (Manly) McFarland and Martha Lin Manly were hostesses to the Dalton alumnae and the mothers of three Dalton girls now attending Agnes Scott, at tea. Martha Lin reported that the broadcast was the best yet and came in better than any she had ever heard. Those present were: Lottie (Anderson) Pruden, Mary Emma (Ashcraft) Greer, Mary (Carter) Hamilton, Mary Hamilton, Fannie B. Harris, Mary King, Mary (McLellan) Manly, Mary Stuart (Sims) McCamy, Margaretta (Wormelsdorf) Lumpkin, Lulu (Smith) Westcott, Gertrude (Manly) McFarland, and Martha Lin Manly.

Griffin: Katharine (Gilliland) Higgins reported: "We had fourteen Griffin alumnae present for the Founder's Day tea. We all enjoyed the broadcast and the campus news which you sent to us. Cornelia Stuckey, high school senior who is going to Agnes Scott next fall, met with us."

Lithonia: Ruth (Dolly) Johnson, and her daughter, Martha Johnson, entertained the Lithonia alumnae at a beautiful tea. The guests all listened to the broadcast together and sang the Alma Mater with the radio singers. The guests included: Sadie (Almand) Tucker, Ada (Chupp) Bond, Minnie (Matthews) Flake, Grace (George) Mackie, Miriam (George) Venable, Fannie Kate (Moss) Anderson, Lois (Buice) Evans, Ava George, May Belle Evans, Emma Ava Stokes, Leone Evans, Dorothy Lyons, Mrs. L. G. Evans, Martha Johnson, and Ruth (Dolly) Johnson.

Macon: This group and the mothers of several Macon girls now at Agnes Scott met for dinner. Ruth (Blue) Barnes and Ethel (McKay) Holmes were in charge of the meeting.

Marietta: Aimee D. (Glover) Little wrote: "I will be so glad to have all the Agnes Scott girls in Marietta in for tea so that we can hear the broadcast together."

Monroe: Alumnae gathered at the home of Clara Knox (Nunnally) Roberts to listen to the broadcast and enjoy a delightful tea. Allie (Felker) Nunnally assisted in entertaining.

Illinois

Chicago: Marjorie Daniel reported that seven of the Chicago alumnae met in the Tally-Ho Room of the Medinah Athletic Club and "had two hours of fun and incessant chatter together." Eloise Lower was hostess to the group which included Ruth Moore, Louise (Wesley) Robinson, Marjorie Daniel, Charis (Hood) Barwick, Sally Betsey Mason, and Margaret (Sienknecht) Lotz.

Louisiana

Baton Rouge: The alumnae listened to the radio program and were guests at tea with May (McKowen) Taylor. Those attending were: Cornelia (Cross) John, Julia (Heaton) Coleman, Marguerite (Sentelle) Flesman, Augusta (Sherard) Smith, and Minnah Lulie (Taylor) McKowen.

New Orleans: Ruth (Hall) Bryant wrote: "We have never been able to hear the program because of our own powerful WSMB, and so we will meet for a luncheon down town. We'll combine 'juicy alumnae tidbits' with delicious New Orleans food." This wire was received: "Good wishes from New Orleans alumnae on Founder's Day."

Maryland

Baltimore: Caroline Waterman writes: "Founder's Day was celebrated by a group of nine Agnes Scott girls at a delightful tea given by Alvahn Holmes and Roberta Florence Brinkley at the College Club in Baltimore. Johnnie Frances Turner was elected as new president of this club and I am secretary, with our next meeting scheduled for April 6. Among those present were: R. Florence Brinkley, Alvahn Holmes, Lucile Caldwell, Florence (Ellis) Henderson, Martha Sterling Johnson, Marguerite (Kennedy) Griesmer, Johnnie Frances Turner, Sara Wilson, and Caroline Waterman."

Mississippi

Mississippi State Club: Under the leadership of Sarah (Till) Davis, president, and Ruth Virden, secretary-treasurer, a state wide celebration was held in the form of a luncheon at the University Club in Jackson with Elizabeth (Watkins) Hulen in charge of local arrangements. This wire was sent from the luncheon table: "We shall be listening to broadcast and thinking of you." Mississippi Agnes Scott Club.

Missouri

St. Louis: Mary Bell (McConkey) Taylor wrote: "Seven of us met at my house for tea and to hear the Founder's Day broadcast. Georgia (Crane) Clark gave us Institute memories. Ruth (Evans) Larimore and Christine (Evans) Murray told of their days in college. Ann Coffee and Mary Jane (Evans) Lichliter amazed us with stories of the gay '30s and Mrs. Sears, mother of Evelyn Sears, a junior, supplied interesting details of the new charm wave on the campus. Helen (Eagleson) Scruggs, who taught psychology in my day, joined us." Ann Coffee sent this wire: "Wish I could be there but as next best thing am joining other Agnes Scotters of St. Louis to hear broadcast."

North Carolina

Asheville: Catherine (Carrier) Robinson notified the Asheville alumnae of the broadcast but no meeting was held this year.

Durham: Ruth (Slack) Smith arranged a group meeting for alumnae of Raleigh, Chapel Hill, and Durham.

Charlotte: The alumnae held their annual Founder's Day banquet at Thacker's Restaurant with the president, Cama (Burgess) Clarkson, presiding. After listening to the Founder's Day program and following the dinner Marian (McCamy) Sims gave an informal talk and Cama (Burgess) Clarkson reported on alumnae weekend and read the news letter from the office. Special guests included mothers of Charlotte girls who are now at Agnes Scott. The following alumnae were present: Frances (Medlin) Walker, Elizabeth (Sutton) Gray, Sarah (Dunlap) Bobbitt, Charlotte Hunter, Mae Duls, Miriam Steele, Pernette (Adams) Carter, Frances Miller, Susan (Clayton) Fuller, Clyde (McDaniel) Jackson, Louisa Duls, Jennie Lynn (DuVall) Nyman, Jane McLaughlin, Irene Lowrance, Ethel (Rea) Rone, Rebecca (Whaley) Roundtree, Romola (Davis) Hardy, Ann (Gilleylen) Quarles, Alice (Quarles) Henderson, Mabel (Ardrey) Stewart, Mary (Speir) Bradford, Sally (Cotran) Lambeth, Mary (Kessler) Dalton, Maria Rose, Marian (McCamy) Sims, and Cama (Burgess) Clarkson.

Hendersonville: This wire of greeting came from the Hendersonville alumnae: "Founder's Day greetings from the Hendersonville alumnae." Winona Ewbank, Laura (Candler) Wilds, Margaret Bull, and Dorothy Bradley.

Winston-Salem: Diana Dyer wrote: "Twelve of us met on Founder's Day and had an enjoyable chit-chat together. We listened to the broadcast and then had dinner. Meriel Bull was elected chairman of this group for the coming year. Each person was tagged on her back with the name of one of the twelve faculty members whose greetings were included in the letter from the alumnae office. She had to guess her identity by asking yes or no questions, and each found her place card by that identity and during dinner read the message from her "greeter" supposedly imitating her or him." They sent the following wire: "Winston-Salem alumnae send love to you and Agnes Scott." The following attended the meeting: Lib (Norfleet) Miller, Lillian (McAlphine) Butner, Martha (Jackson) Logan, Jeannette (Archer) Neal, Cleo (McLaurin) Baldrige, Rachel (Paxon) Hayes, Caroline (Long) Sanford, Virginia (Tillotson) Hutchinson, Lila Norfleet, Meriel Bull, and Mrs. Ashburn, mother of Ruth Ashburn, who is a freshman at Agnes Scott.

New Jersey

Ridgefield: Florence (Stokes) Henry writes: "We heard you! It was certainly thrilling when the words Agnes Scott came clearly over the radio. Three of us were grouped around the radio with our hearts attuned to the familiar voices to come over the air."

New York

New York: This group celebrated with a dinner on the twenty-third at The Clipper, a down-town restaurant, with Mary Catherine Williamson as chairman of arrangements. Thirty-one were present, including Marjorie Carmichael's mother, and they were: Mary Catherine Williamson, Dorothy (Hutton) Mount, Kathleen Bowen, Betty Gash, Willie White Smith, Dorothy Owen, Carrington Owen, Douschka Sweets, Mary Richardson, Grace Hardie, Bessie Meade Friend, Julia (Blundell) Adler, Ellen McCallie, Elizabeth Hatchett, Eloise (Gaines) Wilburn, Sara (Townsend) Pittman, Louise (Slack) Hooker, Dora (Ferrell) Gentry, Floy Sadler, Miriam Harrison, Gjertrud (Amundsen) Sigeland, Elizabeth Mack, Lilburne (Ivey) Tuttle, Caroline Wilburn, Mae Erskine (Irvine) Fowler, Augusta Kings, Ruth (Pirkle) Berkeley, Marjorie Carmichael, Polly Gordon, and Rebecca Dick. Julia (Blundell) Adler was elected president with Dorothy Owen as vice-president and Dora (Ferrell) Gentry as treasurer. A gift of $8.75 was sent to be used by the House Decorations Committee for the Alumnae House.

South Carolina

Anderson: The Anderson alumnae were notified of the broadcast by Eunice (Dean) Major, and since so many of them were unable to attend a tea because of office hours, they listened to the broadcast separately.

Charleston: Mary (Kelly) Van de Erve got the Charleston alumnae together for a Founder's Day meeting. The group sent the following wire: "Charleston group meeting together send greetings to all, especially Miss Hopkins, and rejoice in her improvement."

Columbia: This group met with Jo (Smith) Webb for tea and to hear the broadcast which they reported was splendid. The club had a linen shower for the Alumnae House, and thoroughly enjoyed reminiscences of Agnes Scott during the hour. New officers elected are: Ellen (Davis) Walters, president; and Sarah Spencer, secretary.

Tennessee

Chattanooga: Alice and Anne McCallie were hostesses to the Chattanooga Club at a tea at Anne's home, and the group sent the following wire: "Greetings and congratulations from twelve who together enjoyed Founder's Day broadcast at Anne McCallie's home." Lucy (Howard) Carter, Rosemary (May) Kent, Sarah (Stansell) Felts, Margaret McCallie, Helen (Brown) Webb, Kate (Cox) King, Alma (Roberts) Betts, Elizabeth (Stoops) Sibold, Minnie (Allen) Coleman, Shirley Christian, Alice McCallie, and Anne McCallie.

Bristol: To Miss Hopkins from the Bristol group—"With loyal hearts and tender memories the Bristol Alumnae of Agnes Scott will listen in on the Founder's Day program. We shall miss your voice but are happy to know that you have derived real benefit from your rest. Each alumna joins me in fondest love to you, my dear." Mary Catherine (McKinney) Barker.

Nashville: Elizabeth (Smith) DeWitt and Anna Marie (Landress) Cate called all the Nashville alumnae about the broadcast but there was no central meeting.

Texas

Bryan: "Happy Founder's Day from lone listening alumna many miles away," Lulu Daniel Ames, who sat out in her car and listened to the radio program alone.

Virginia

Lynchburg: Courtney Wilkinson gathered the Lynchburg alumnae for a meeting and reports that they received the broadcast splendidly.

CAMPUS NEWS and OFFICE NOTES

Letter to:

November 24, 1937.

Miss Nannette Hopkins,
Agnes Scott College,
Decatur, Georgia.

Dear Miss Hopkins:

On yesterday I received via Helen and Mother, clippings telling of your taking a much-needed rest, and also giving a resumé of your work at Agnes Scott, with which I am more or less familiar anyway.

I hope the rest is proving very beneficial, and that you will not only be able to fill out your 50 years of service, but many more years with Agnes Scott, for in the minds of the great many people, you and the college are indissoluble, so much that we can hardly conceive of the institution going on without your presence.

Personally, I know of no one who has in such a magnificent way contacted and moulded so many lives, and you certainly have a living monument in the minds and hearts of untold numbers of girls and women throughout the United States, and also of some half a dozen more or less men, or rather grown-up boys. And may I facetiously give you credit for having given me probably the worst scare I ever had, though this was official and not from your heart. One of my most vivid childhood memories is that of a "scrap" that I once had with Lewis Gaines in which, having lost my temper, I threw at him a muddy overshoe, which missed him and left a very ugly stain on the schoolroom wall.

As principal, it was necessary for you to call me in for a reprimand, and I don't think I was ever quite so badly frightened. I still go a little weak in the pit of my stomach when I recall it, and the numerous blows and reprimands I have received since then have never quite eradicated this one.

With heartiest good wishes for your continued recovery and for many more years of useful service, I am

Cordially yours,

A. S. MEAD,
Alumnus of Agnes Scott.
New Series

A series of lectures to educate the seniors for marriage is being sponsored by Mortar Board for the last quarter of this year. The need for such a course has been recognized on all campuses and the state institutions have added courses in marriage and family to their curricula under the head of sociology. Agnes Scott chapter of Mortar Board is offering a series of ten lectures, given each Friday afternoon at four o'clock and consequently available for any student desiring to attend.

The Day Has Been Turned Into Night!

Myrl Chafin, of McDonough, was elected May Queen by the student body and will reign over the May Day Festival Friday night, May 6. A precedent is being set this year with the change in the date of the festival, but since it is to be an adaptation of Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," the committee is anxious to stage the production at night to secure the proper lighting effects. Myrl will reign as Queen Hippolyta, and in her court will be: Grace Tazewell, of Norfolk, Va., and Kay Ricks, of Jackson, Miss., as maids of honor; Jean Barrie Adams, of Charlotte, N. C.; Zoe Wells, Marjorie Rainey, Amelia Nickels, of Decatur; Susan Bryan, of Carrollton, Ga.; Jane Moore Hamilton, of Dalton, Ga.; Aileen Shortley, of Nashville, Tenn.; Kay Toole, of Hegins, Pa.; Martha Marshall, of Americus, Ga.; Adelaide Benson, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Carolyn Alley, of Dalton, and Jean Dennison, of Atlanta.

Anne Thompson, of Richmond,

chairman of the May Day Committee, Giddy Erwin, of Davidson, N. C., and Mary Matthews, of Atlanta, are co-authors of the scenario. The principals in the cast include: Nell Scott Earthman and Helen Kirkpatrick, of Decatur; Mary Anne Kernan and Eleanor Deas, of Atlanta; Jane Moses, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Ruth Tate, of Banner Elk, N. C.; Shirley Armentrout, of Goldsboro, N. C.; Helen Moses, of Sumter, S. C.; Jane Guthrie, of Louisville, Ky.; Nell Hemphill, of Petersburg, Va.; Anne Thompson, of Richmond, Va.; and Nell Allison, of Kiagsu, China.

The Lecture Association Presents the Grand Duchess

The Grand Duchess Marie, of Russia, lectured at Agnes Scott on March 25 under the auspices of the Student Lecture Association. The Grand Duchess is making a lecture tour of the United States and spoke on "The Old Life and the New" at Agnes Scott. The Grand Duchess escaped from Russia when the Bolshevik uprising caused the assassination of twenty-one members of her family, and set up a dress shop in Paris. In 1928 this exiled woman came to America with her sole possessions, a typewriter, a guitar, and one suitcase, and since then has been making a name for herself, first as fashion consultant and business woman, then as authoress and now as lecturer. Her first book, "The Education of a Princess," was written in French and Russian and was in its first rough draft when she came to America. She wrote her second book, "A Princess in Exile," directly in English and her subsequent success with the two books has made it possible for her to devote her entire time to writing and lecturing.

Glee Club Presents "The Mikado"

The Agnes Scott Glee Club, under the direction of Lewis H. Johnson, presented Gilbert and Sullivan's light opera, "The Mikado," on April 1 and 2. Among those playing leading parts in the production were Caroline Armistead, '39, daughter of Frances (McCrorry) Armistead, Academy; Jane Moses, '40, daughter of Frances (Thatcher) Moses, '17, and Jane Moore Hamilton, '39, sister of Elinor (Hamilton) Hightower, '34.

Agnes Scott Alumnae and Students in Print

Mary Lamar Knight, '22, has a book, "On My Own," just off the press, being released on March 29 by MacMillan & Co. Quoting from the Publishers' Weekly, "The colorful reportorial career of a newspaper woman in Paris, China, Japan and the United States. Miss Knight was at one time the only woman staff correspondent for the United Press and was the only woman contributor to 'We Cover the News.'"

Margaret W. Hobson, Institute, has just published a book of verse, "Songs and Stories from Magnolia Grove." Margaret dedicated the book to her brother, Richmond Pearson Hobson, and the volume bears the name of his birthplace and home in Greensboro, Ala., which is to be kept as a shrine. The Alumnae Office received a beautiful autographed copy of the book for the Alumnae Shelf in the library, inscribed "To my beloved Alma Mater, Agnes Scott College."

Florence (Stokes) Henry, Institute, and her husband, Mellinger Edward Henry, are co-authors of a collection of "Folk Songs from the Southern Highlands" which is being published by J. J. Augustin, New York, this spring. Florence and Edward are living in Ridgefield, N. J., but they have spent much time in the last twenty summers roaming the by-paths of the Blue Ridge Mountains in North Carolina and Tennessee. Long before good roads opened these mountains to visitors Mr. and Mrs. Henry had gone far back into the coves, met and become good friends of the mountain folk, who love the Henrys and think that they are "nice and common." Through this close contact with the singers themselves they have found many rare songs which they have made into a book rich in notes and references, and some forty odd tunes which are sung to these old songs.

Four students at Agnes Scott have poems which are to appear in the 1938 Book of College Verse, printed by the University Post Publishing Company. Miss Dorothy Garrett, editor of the book which is devoted to Southern student poets, wrote Dr. Geo. P. Hayes of the English Department for representative work and poems of Carol Hale, Hortense Jones, Evelyn Sears and Violet Jane Watkins were submitted. The volume is to appear April 15.

Remember This Room?

The Day Student Room in Main, former dining room for the Academy, is reviving its former popularity as a meeting and eating place, with the advent of new furnishings and new draperies. The room has been sadly neglected in the last few years due to current enthusiasms like the Murphey Candler offices and Buttrick Hall's new day student room, but now, a quarter of a century after its day, the old room has come out in a burst of glory. New green striped curtains, tables topped with green marble linoleum, green cushions and back covers for the old straight chairs, a new cabinet, and best of all, ten new arm chairs upholstered in green. The climax of the room's glory came when it was the scene for an actual come-and-go four-to-five tea, with all the trimmings.

Phi Beta Kappa Spring Announcements

Announcement of Phi Beta Kappa elections from the present senior class were made February 15 at a joint meeting of the Institute of Citizenship and the Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa of the University of Georgia and the Gamma chapter of Emory.

Those elected are: Elsie Blackstone, of East Point, Ga., secretary of Eta Sigma Phi, and member of the Spanish Club; Jean Chalmers, of Atlanta, president of Athletic Association, Director of Senior Opera, Member Mortar Board, Current History Forum, and Blackfriars; Mildred Davis, of Orlando, Fla., treasurer Mortar Board, treasurer of Student Lecture Association, secretary of Eta Sigma Phi, and chairman of Industrial Group of Y. W. C. A.; Eliza King, of Columbia, S. C., student recorder, chairman of Presidents' Council, president of Current History Forum, vice-president of Mortar Board; Elise Seay, of Macon, Ga., vice-president of French Club and member of the German Club and Poetry Club; Zoe Wells, of Decatur, president of Day Students, president Eta Sigma Phi, member Pen and Brush Club, French Club, Lecture Association, and Student Government Executive Committee.

The new members were initiated at a banquet on Friday evening, Feb. 18, in the Alumnae House. Among the guests were Phi Beta Kappa members from Columbia Seminary, Emory, the Agnes Scott faculty and alumnae.

Happy Birthday to You, Mr. Orr!

Of interest to every Agnes Scotter who remembers the "truest test of woman's worth, the surest sign of noble birth" and the man who taught it to us is the announcement that Mr. Orr has just celebrated his 81st birthday. Mr. Orr was on his way home from a trip to Nassau and spent his birthday in West Palm Beach, in the best of health, and enjoying every minute of the Florida sunshine. Our sincere hope is that the good health will continue so that the chairman of the Board of Trustees will be able to enjoy the Trustees Luncheon with us on June 4.

Faculty News

Miss Nannette Hopkins is sufficiently improved to take short rides in the car these warm days, and spends an hour a day sitting out on her sleeping porch in the sun. She has been working on the exam schedule this last few weeks and is still resting and building up her strength as much as possible.

Dr. J. R. McCain attended meetings of the Association of American Colleges, the National Conference of Church-Related Colleges; the Pan- Presbyterian College Union, and a committee of the American Council on Education in January.

Miss Leslie Gaylord is making arrangements for the European tour which she will conduct this summer.

Miss Florence Smith attended the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of G. S. W. C. in Valdosta in February, and represented Agnes Scott at the dinner and in the procession. Among the prominent speakers were Dean Mildred Thompson, of Vassar, and retiring President Wooley, of Mount Holyoke.

Miss Helen Carlson, of the French department, reported on the language conferences which she attended in Chicago during Christmas at the Georgia Association of French Teachers conference at Agnes Scott Feb. 12.

Dick Scandrett, '24, attended a conference of the American Association of Deans in Washington, D. C., Feb. 25-28.

Attention, Alumnae!

The work of the new Alumnae Directory has just begun in the Alumnae Office and we are asking for your prompt cooperation in sending back to the office the card which has reached you or will in the very near future. This card asks for your correct name and address and the promptness with which we receive these cards will determine the date of the publication.

If you do not receive your card within a reasonable length of time, will you please write these items on a one cent postcard and mail in to the Alumnae Office? For, as in all mailing of this kind, there is apt to be an omission occasionally or a card gets lost in the mail.

We know you are looking forward eagerly to receiving this new directory and we wish it to be as perfect as it is possible to make a record of this kind. Help us to achieve this by sending in your information and we will greatly appreciate any news of those alumnae who have drifted into our lost columns.

Yours for an early publishing,

The Alumnae Office,
Agnes Scott College,
Decatur, Ga.

As We Saw Commencement

Have you ever been at Agnes Scott on the morning after commencement? If you can imagine the stillest of stillnesses that is the setting as we try to tell you who may not have been able to be here or to recall to those of you who were guests at this commencement something of the joy, the noise, the bustle of reunion time at Agnes Scott in this year, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-eight. And if the writing suddenly trails off into nothingness, you may know that the unnatural quiet plus after-commencement let-down has proved fatal to the recorder and she has floated away into dreams!

To begin at the beginning: The first guest arrived on Friday afternoon, which was also the time of the Children's Party, given by the Decatur Club to alumnae children, with a marionette show and balloons and favors and ice cream to their utter contentment. And may we add that the children of our alumnae are something to write about and we wish everyone of you could be here some reunion time with yours or to admire others! Then Saturday dawned bright and fair and the lobby of Rebekah and the dining room began to hum with preparations for the decorating of the tables for Trustees Luncheon which came off duly and in grand style at 1:30 P. M. with Mr. J. K. Orr presiding in his accustomed and inimitable way. Anna Meade, of the class of '23, was our guest speaker and gave us a delightful resume of her years in China and then told us something of the experiences which were hers in fleeing from China during the bombing of ships at the time of the Panay event. She is soon to return to China to marry a member of the diplomatic corps and to make her home there, so her friends were glad to have this chance of seeing her during her short stay in this country and wish for her every happiness in the years to come. The annual meeting of the Alumnae Association is the biggest part of this Quarterly for the reports of committees form the basis of that meeting and they are printed in full later in the Quarterly. Phi Beta Kappa's banquet brought Saturday to a close in a blaze of glory.

Sunday breakfasts in the Alumnae House are one of the most intriguing unplanned parts of reunion time, for the alumnae do their own gathering and eat and talk until someone remembers that Baccalaureate Procession is forming and "of course, you don't want to miss that, let's hurry!" After dinner coffee and senior vespers, then the Garden Party, given by the Alumnae Association to faculty, seniors and their friends, and alumnae ended another day in a glow of summer twilight.

Monday was our day, for then all reunion luncheons were held and a dinner for '37 was held that evening, so from morning till night, the Alumnae House swarmed—we cannot think of a more dignified word—with alumnae and the talk ran fast and furiously from here to the four corners of the earth where old friends are. Class Day in the May Day Dell brought thrills to each of us as we remembered our histories, our poems, and prophecies, and our sophomores and their daisy chains.

Tuesday belonged both to the seniors and to us and although we formed the audience we seemed to walk with the senior class and kneel with each one as the hood was placed on, for to each alumna there came the memory of other girls and another graduation day, nor was that memory one of sadness but of freshness and of hallowness ever.

Do you remember the responses at Trustees' luncheon each year? In order that you who were not here may have some of the fun of that event, some parts of these replies to Anne (Hart) Equen's call on the reunion classes are published below, for they were even better than usual this year and you will enjoy them:

Rusha Wesley, '00, began the clever response when she was called on to reply for the reunion classes of '00, '01, '02, and '03:

"Age has its compensations. Either they think we cannot see as well, or because we have been here so long they like to have familiar faces near, the Trustees have us sit at the head table.

"You who are graduating this year and you who have been out only a few years think I am going to say, 'We who are about to die, salute you!' But I am not! The fatal asterisk is by the name of only one of us, Martha Cobb Howard, though we have been out about forty years.

"Pitkin says that life begins at forty and Browning says that the best of life is yet to be. Dr. Gaines taught us, in Bible, that the number seven is mystical and symbolical. We, of the four classes, are three times seven. Fourteen of us are married and live above the average families. Two are librarians. One is a missionary and one is a business woman. Four of us are teachers.

"One of our number is a popular writer. One is an authority and historian on Atlanta. One is a national leader in teacher organizations. Two are very prominent in the lay work of the Presbyterian Church. Three of us are heads of large schools. Those who have married have children enough to keep up the college average for all of us.

"We are not about to die! We will carry on from here!"

'19 reported in two parts: Llewellyn Wilburn spoke of the record in college as follows:

"If you know your history when you are told that we were in college from 1915 to 1919, you will recall that we were a war class. We did what we could toward relief work and today when you look over old annuals and miss the one for 1919, remember that we gave that money to other causes rather than publish an annual. We seemed to lead fairly normal lives in spite of the war. We played, we studied, we fought. In fact, we fought so hard that after our freshman fight with the sophomores, the suggestion was made by Dr. Sweet that the hatchet be buried and that there be instead a contest of wits and so we participated in the first freshman-sophomore stunt when we were sophomores. It was during our senior year that we started having a student chairman for May Day and Margaret (Rowe) Jones—better known as "Peanut" Rowe—was elected to that office. And now that you may visualize what we looked like in college, we have asked a member of the senior class to model a middy suit of those days." (Here Winifred Kellersberger stood on a chair clad in yards and yards of white skirt and the famed middy blouse of that day.)

Louise (Felker) Mizell picked up the story from there:

"Turning over the pages nineteen years from the girl with the middy suit brings us up to 1938. Let us see what the class of 1919 is doing now. The most distinguishing characteristics of our class of thirty-eight graduates is that we are all alive and fairly healthy. Our class boasts: one surgeon, one lawyer, one editor, two authors, several in the advertising business, two missionaries, three college teachers, one librarian. Someone will ask here, 'What became of the rest of you?' Several years ago a group of young children were discussing what they'd do when they grew up. One wanted to be a poet, one an artist, one a musician, etc. One little girl sat very still and said nothing. Her mother looked down at her and inquired, 'What are you going to be when you grow up?' Smiling up at her mother, she replied, 'Oh, I'm going to be a nothing like you.' So, most of the class are busy being 'nothings' but we're rearing a number of girls and boys, who in a few years will be ready for Agnes Scott and Emory."

Margaret (Bland) Sewell spoke for the class of '20:

"It is natural that in returning to Agnes Scott, the class of '20 should turn in memory to the Agnes Scott of '20. As we think of the college as it was then, the best we can say of the physical equipment of our Alma Mater at that time is what Touchstone said of his homely, rustic sweetheart, 'A poor thing, sir, an ill-favored thing, sir, but mine own.' Agnes Scott of 1920 was our college and we loved it. We studied philosophy and psychology with relish even though the building in which our classes met housed also the Home Economics kitchens and during the afternoon lectures we were often tantalized by the fragrant odors of cooking food that came through the open windows. It is perhaps for that reason that some of us have never been able to disassociate the philosophy of Bergson and the smell of doughnuts! We read with eagerness French and English literature even though the class rooms were immediately above the gymnasium and lines like 'Life like a dome of many-colored glass stains the white radiance of eternity' were read to the tune of thumping basketballs and Villon's memorable refrain, 'Where are the snows of yesterday?' was interrupted by the words, 'On your mark! Get set! Go!' and the sound of running feet. But we have the same sort of devotion to that early Agnes Scott of '20 that Madame Curie had for the little shed where she did her early work. Also, like Marie Curie, we do not want those who follow after us to struggle with the same handicaps. It is interesting to remember that she had a passion for beautifying the Institute of Radium, where her pupils worked. It is with the same delight that the class of '20 gazes with pride at the Agnes Scott of '38—the well-kept lawns, the fine gymnasium, the pleasant class rooms, the beautiful library—but we look forward to seeing a college that will become more beautiful each year but will always be devoted to the principles of high character and sound scholarship."

1921 claimed its feature was the toastmistress for the reunion classes, Anne (Hart) Equen, '21, but tried out its voice in the "Old Grey Mare."

1922 had Ivylyn Girardeau as its star, the alumna from farthest away, a medical doctor from a hospital in India, whose furlough came at the perfect time of her class reunion. Ivylyn made a response, voicing her pleasure in being back at this time.

The Baby Class of Alumnae, 1937, responded through the voice of Nellie Margaret Gilroy as follows:

"The truest test of woman's worth
We learned while in this college
And to its portals wide and far
We owe a lot of other knowledge.

'Twas here we warbled wood notes wild
Of larks that sing to the thrushes
And heard the Gillespian theory of
The finding of Moses in the rushes.

Amid these halls we studied late
To Mr. Hayes' glee trying to decide What Shakespeare meant in his
'To be or not to be.'

Now it was atoms, again John Huss
That demanded our attention;
Logarithms, Latin verbs
And other things too numerous to mention.

Reflex action, the Nun's Priest tale
The Confusion of the 4th dimension,
H₂S and chlorophyll
And, of course, the 5th declension.

The rise and fall of stocks and bonds,
Theories of population,
Parlez-vous and Mendal's Law,
The politics of the nation.

We burned our candles at both ends
Cramming these facts into our heads,
And many a morn yon cock had crew
Before we fell into our trundle beds.

But, alack, alas, how futile 'twas
This that we learned and read,
When half the class is teaching school
And worse—the other half is wed!"

We are publishing below the names of those who were at Trustees' Luncheon and also at class luncheons and dinners and, we regret that the names of many others who attended other affairs during the week-end cannot be included, since no record was kept at other events. May we take this last line to say what a pleasure it was to have each of you on the campus and we do hope you had a very happy time and will soon be back again?

Annual Reports

Annual Meeting of the Alumnae Association

The annual meeting of the Agnes Scott Alumnae Association was held in the chapel following the Trustees Luncheon on June 4th, 1938, the president, Daisy Frances Smith, presiding.

Minutes of the last annual meeting, having been published in the Quarterly, were not read on motion.

The report of the treasurer in printed form was presented and approved, this motion including the proposed budget for 1938-1939.

The nominating committee presented the slate of new officers, which was unanimously accepted. The ballot is not included in this report, as it is being published in detail in another part of the Quarterly.

It was voted to accept the president's report as a combination of the reports of the committee chairmen of the Association. This report was then read and accepted.

The recommendation of the Executive Board in regard to a change in the By-Laws, which had been brought to its attention by the Constitution Committee, was as follows: That the following change be made in Article 4, Section 1, of the By-Laws:

"... half of this group to be chosen in alternate years. The president, second vice-president, treasurer, and chairmen of the following committees—radio, house decorations, entertainment, and alumnae week-end—are to be elected in even years, and the first vice-president, secretary and chairmen of the following committees—newspaper publicity, house and tea room, garden, student loan, and constitution—are to be elected odd years. The latter group as elected in 1938 shall serve a period of three years."

A motion was made and accepted that this recommendation be approved as read.

The president expressed her appreciation of the pleasant contacts and cooperation of the alumnae. A rising vote of thanks was given her for her wonderful attention and constant interest in the Association and its many plans and features during the past two years.

Meeting adjourned.

Respectfully submitted,
Helene (Norwood) Lammers, ex-'22,
Secretary.

Minutes of the Alumnae Council, May 3, 1938

The Alumnae Council met at the Anna Young Alumnae House May 3, 1938. The meeting was called to order by the president, Daisy Frances Smith, who stated the three-fold purpose of the Alumnae Council: 1. A clearing house for ideas; 2. Coordination of activities of various groups interested in the progress of the college; 3. The spread of proper information regarding the college, its policies, and activities. The minutes of the last meeting were not read since they were printed in the Quarterly of July, 1937.

Miss Carrie Scandrett reported the activities of the college from the standpoint of the administration. She brought greetings from Miss Hopkins, whose interest in the college is still paramount and who, though ill this year, has given valuable advice. The dormitories in the college have been filled to capacity this year, with 316 boarding students. This year's freshman class has been a very happy one and there have been few unfortunate circumstances arising. Senior chaperonage for the girls has been very successfully worked out this year and will be continued. The session has been marked by outstanding good health of the student body, with a few measles and appendectomies as chief ailments. The administration has been at the call of the students twenty-four hours a day and has worked with them in friendly cooperation.

Dr. J. R. McCain presented the general plans for the Semi-Centennial of Agnes Scott. In an interview with the officials of the General Education Board it was decided that Atlanta is the logical place for a southern educational center. Cooperation with Emory and Georgia Tech must take a prominent place and Semi-Centennial plans must include them. The desire for a greater Agnes Scott is to be crystallized in the Semi-Centennial needs presented to the General Education Board, a program to be completed in 1940. These include a new dormitory and dining room for the entire campus, new auditorium, with memorial chapel named for Dr. Gaines, fine arts building, science hall, apartment house for faculty, department of the Home, new infirmary and an endowment of about $2,000,000 to take care of it all. The Board was asked for $1,500,000.

Laura Coit, president of Student Government Association, mentioned the changes in social regulations, including senior chaperonage, written invitations, time limit, Freshman regulations, new lighting system, and the new Hand Book. Among the projects pursued were the combining of offices, the honor system programs, the campaign for the Day Students' Room, Current History Forum, Peace Day program, and research on compulsory budget.

Douglas Lyle, incoming president of Agnes Scott Christian Association, reported that "Finding My Faith" had been the subject of the chapel programs which alternated speakers, devotionals, and music. Dr. Wallace Alston and Dr. Robert E. Speer were speakers for the two religious emphasis weeks. Deputations have been sent to Emory, Tech, Wesleyan, and Brenau, and these colleges have sent students to Agnes Scott. Vespers have been held regularly on Sunday evenings with faculty and student speakers. Freshman and Sophomore cabinets have been organized to train students for work on the big cabinet. The organization has this year changed its name to the Christian Association of Agnes Scott.

It aims to integrate the religious forces on the campus and make for greater service. On the other hand it has not broken from the national Y. W. C. A. of the national "Y" movement. A delegate was sent to national Y. W. C. A. student convention at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.

Mary Lillian Fairly spoke for Mortar Board on that organization's cultural and social contributions to college community life. This organization sponsors parties providing the Freshmen and Sophomores with opportunities to meet eligible young men in Atlanta. Charm Week was again observed and a week of local talent presentations. Comprehensive examinations were taken by the members of the chapter this year as an experiment; the points given to president of Mortar Board were raised. The chief innovation was the course on "Marriage" held the last quarter.

Zoe Wells, president of the Day Students, stressed the feeling of cooperation between boarders and day students. The room provided for the day students to spend the night in on the campus has been moved from the dormitory to a cottage. Regulations governing the room have been successful this year. Ten new chairs and other improvements have added to the attractiveness of the Day Student Room in the basement of Main.

Letitia (Rockmore) Lange, publicity chairman, is keeping a permanent scrapbook with all articles on Alumnae activities which appear in the local papers. This book will be kept in the Alumnae House and should prove helpful to new chairmen in the future.

Martha Stansfield, House and Tea Room chairman, announced that Mrs. Kerrison would return as manager of the tea room next year, and that there had been a steady increase in the tea room business.

Eloise (Gay) Brawley, Grounds Committee chairman, reported the completion of the background planting in the garden this year.

Irene (Havis) Baggett reported that the entertainment committee was planning the series of Senior Teas to be given the next week.

Kenneth Maner, Student Loan chairman, reported that many of the long overdue loans had been recovered due to the splendid activity of the Alumnae Association president.

Ray (Knight) Dean, acting chairman of the Constitution and By-Laws Committee, announced that a recommendation of the last General Meeting had been considered and that the name of the Curriculum Committee had been changed to the Alumnae Week-End Committee.

Alberta Palmour, chairman of the Preparatory Schools Committee, reported activities among the various high school groups in the interests of the college.

The Decatur Club, represented by vice-president Annie (Johnson) Sylvester and Willie Mae (Coleman) Duncan, reported speakers of interest at the monthly meetings, and various projects of the year.

The Atlanta Club, Dorothy (Walker) Palmer, president, reported gifts made to the House and the Garden, and speakers of interest at the monthly meetings, in addition to the projects which have been completed.

The Business Girls' Club, Eunice Ball, president, reported the activities of the Tuesday evening study class, which had as its topic this year "The Novel," and a group of speakers at the regular meetings who had as their topics, "Problems of the U. S. As It Reflects the Problems of the World."

Fannie G. (Mayson) Donaldson reported the numerous Founder's Day meetings of the alumnae all over the country. Articles belonging to George Washington Scott and Agnes Scott are being collected for exhibition during the Semi-Centennial program. Alumnae activities among the students have included a tea for the new students in September, three teas for the Granddaughters' Club, and two senior teas which will be held next week. Many close contacts with the girls are made through Nelle Chamlee, who is closely associated with the students in many extra curricula activities.

Nelle Chamlee reported the progress made in selling the students the idea of using the Alumnae House for their mothers and relatives when they visit the campus. With the help of the five scholarship girls in the office a tremendous amount of correspondence has been sent out this year. Of 6,000 alumnae written to in preparation for the directory, 2,500 have responded and the files have been corrected to tally with these replies. This is necessary work in preparation for the directory.

Class representatives who were present were recognized, and councilors from the various clubs.

A motion for adjournment was made and carried.

Respectfully submitted,
Helene (Norwood) Lammers, ex-'22,
Secretary.

Minutes of the Executive Board Meeting, May 19, 1938

The meeting of the Executive Board was called to order by the president, Daisy Frances Smith, after which the minutes of the January Board Meeting were read and approved.

The president announced that both the alumnae secretary, Fannie G. (Mayson) Donaldson, and the assistant secretary, Nelle Chamlee, had accepted contracts for next year.

Emma Pope (Moss) Dieckmann, chairman of the Alumnae Week-End Committee, submitted the program followed this year as a report of the committee's work.

Letitia (Rockmore) Lange, newspaper publicity chairman, presented a scrapbook of clippings about alumnae affairs that constituted the year's publicity.

Carrie Phinney Latimer, representing the radio publicity committee, reported the regular Wednesday broadcasts over WSB. It was suggested that whenever mail goes out from the office to alumnae there be some note regarding the radio program and blanks for radio requests to be sent back.

Martha Stansfield, Tea Room chairman, reported numerous gifts to the house, and purchases made by the committee. Thanks were voted Mrs. Kerrison for her capable managing of the tea room this year. Her report was read and commended. Mrs. Kerrison plans to return next year.

A report from the House Decorations Committee stated that the most outstanding needs of the house had been met this year, and plans were under the direction of Mary Miller, decorator.

Irene (Havis) Baggett, Entertainment chairman, reported the affairs at which the alumnae have been hostesses this year. The question of securing china, glassware and silver for such affairs was discussed, and it was finally suggested that a sum of money be set aside for such equipment, to be taken under consideration by the Finance Committee.

The Local Clubs Committee reported 27 active clubs with four rather inactive ones come to life this year.

Alberta Palmour, chairman of the Preparatory Schools Committee, reported that 235 girls from all parts of the country had taken the competitive examinations, and that numerous high school groups had been entertained by the college.

Kenneth Maner, Student Loan chairman, reported seven loans made this year, and money available for next year now.

Ray (Knight) Dean, acting chairman of the Constitution Committee, read suggestions for constitution amendments.

The Garden Committee, Eloise (Gay) Brawley, chairman, announced expenditure of funds given them during the year, and plans to improve the front of the house next year.

Fannie G. (Mayson) Donaldson, alumnae secretary, reported a number of alumnae activities not reported by the committees, the increased success of the campaign to get students to use the Alumnae House for their parents and guests, the number of distinguished guests who had stayed in the house during the year, and the increased income from its use.

Nelle Chamlee, assistant secretary, gave a detailed report of the correspondence carried on by the staff, which totaled 6500 letters during the year, in addition to 8000 cards sent out in preparation for the directory.

Margaret Ridley, treasurer, read the treasurer's report, which was accepted as read. She presented a proposed budget for next year which was adopted as read.

Motion was made that if the Finance Committee approved the request of the Entertainment chairman, that $25 be expended on purchase of glassware and other equipment for the use of this committee. The motion was carried.

The president thanked the members of the Board for their cooperation during the past year. The Board expressed its pleasure that Anne (Hart) Equen, presidential nominee, was present at this meeting.

The Board considered the change in tenure of office that was suggested at the previous meeting, so that there would be carry-overs from one board to another. It was moved and seconded that the proposal of the committee be accepted by the Board and be recommended to the May meeting of the General Association.

The Board was reminded of the commencement activities at which it is hostess, and after a delightful tea hour, adjourned.

Respectively submitted,
Helene (Norwood) Lammers, ex-'22,
Secretary.

President's Report

Compilation of All Committee Reports to the Annual Meeting, June 4, 1938

Following the policy instituted last year, it is my duty to summarize the reports of all Alumnae Committees, which have previously been presented to the Executive Board and which will subsequently be published in the July Quarterly. This was begun and is continued in the belief that it increases the effectiveness of the annual meeting. One concise report covering all phases of alumnae activity should give this group a unified view of our work and yet enable us to keep the length of the meeting within reasonable bounds.

Work in the Alumnae Office has continued much as usual, with a great quantity of detailed work to be handled and a constancy of activity not at all realized by most alumnae. A distinct value has been seen in the plan of the two secretaries, both because this provides one who can give some time to planning while the other sees to routine matters, and because many more alumnae contacts are possible since the two secretaries know different age groups among the alumnae. The new departure in the make-up of the Quarterly has met with uniform approval. One of the consistent interests of the office this year has been the location of lost alumnae. It is hoped that the new Directory will come out in the fall, and thanks to the assistance of Dr. McCain, Nelle Chamlee will be working on it all summer.

All activities of the Association really are two-fold, an effort to relate alumnae more closely to Agnes Scott and an effort to relate the Association to the College itself or potential students, or the public. The Radio Publicity Committee this year has attempted chiefly to interest possible students, their parents, and the public. The skit called "Three Girls In a Room" has continued, but incidents of dormitory, campus and classroom life, a picture of various campus organizations, and notices as to occurrences on the campus have all been included. The Newspaper Publicity Committee has supplied news at the customary times, and in addition has begun the keeping of a perpetual scrap book which will be turned over to the Alumnae Office upon completion of the chairman's term.

The Alumnae Week-End Committee brought many alumnae back to the College. Talks on Friday and Saturday, November 19 and 20, the general theme of which was "New Emphasis," were well received. The Local Clubs Committees has spent its energies largely to revive and strengthen already existing groups. There are twenty-seven now active. The suggested fields of endeavor for next year are Griffin, Georgia, and Quincy, Florida, where the conditions seem ripe for the organization of new groups. The financial support of all clubs is an invaluable service, a help to the Committees of the Association, notably the House Decorations, Garden, and House and Tea Room Committees, and an evidence of the loyalty and the generosity of alumnae.

Though there has been no Alumnae Field Secretary this year and Alberta Palmour's work on the campus has been heavy, she has continued as chairman of the Preparatory Schools Committee. She reports that various high schools have been reached, some 3,000 announcements of the March 4th competitive examinations sent, programs at various high schools being managed through the cooperation of local alumnae, and contact with high schools in the Atlanta area being accomplished through a party attended by some 250 girls.

The House Decorations Committee has spent almost $500 during the past two years in the re-decoration of parlor, dining room and hall, largely in new chairs, re-upholstery and rugs. A very pleasing increase in the use of the Alumnae House by parents of students has been evidenced throughout the year. The House and Tea Room Committee is happy to report a fine increase in Tea Room business this year and the return of Mrs. Ethel Kerrison, whose capable management of the tea room is greatly appreciated.

The Grounds Committee last year reorganized the general layout of the gardens. This year they have been filling in as needed. Next year they intend to work chiefly on the front of the Alumnae House using the boxwood which have been saved for that purpose. Almost $150 has been spent on the garden this year, in addition to labor which has been kindly supplied by Dr. McCain and for which the Committee is deeply grateful.

The Entertainment Committee has handled most capably the fall tea for new students and the series of recent senior teas. Their plans are fully made for Alumnae Open House in the garden after Senior Vespers on Baccalaureate Sunday. Their request for an allotment of $25.00 for the purchase of equipment has been met by the Finance Committee.

The Student Loan Committee with its balance from June, 1937, and this year's repayments has had $822.90 to disburse. During the current school year seven loans have been made, amounting to $425.00, leaving nearly $400 to be expended next fall. The Committee has on its books unpaid loans totaling $727.00.

The Constitution and By-Laws Committee has incorporated in the Constitution the changes made by the general meeting, May, 1937.

In closing, I wish to express my grateful appreciation for the cheerful, constant, and untiring cooperation of all alumnae with whom I had contact as Alumnae President. It has been a happy privilege to serve the College and the Association.

Respectfully submitted,
Daisy Frances Smith, '24,
President.

Report of Alumnae Secretaries

After two years of the plan of the two secretaries in the office, we are of the opinion that it does make for greater efficiency for many reasons. There is always such an overwhelming amount of office routine work, as form letters, filing, the duties as hostess of the Alumnae House, that one executive secretary finds herself so deeply submerged in those matters that she cannot exercise herself in the very important matter of planning for new endeavors, personal contacts, and attempts to better the work of the Association. There is also the very valuable asset of the representation of two different periods in the two secretaries, which enables them to reach with the widely different appeal the older and younger alumnae.

Our year's program, beginning in September with the resuming of correspondence of the summer, with the first dues notices, the contacting of all chairmen and club presidents and class secretaries, continued through the fall with special emphasis on Alumnae Week-End; then in January much correspondence was involved in working toward a successful Founder's Day, including, this year, thirty-five notices to club presidents, seventy-five letters to alumnae, asking them to head the meeting in their towns, a corresponding number of six page letters to be used as part of the Founder's Day program and View Booklets to clubs and groups meeting. The arrangement of the radio program is, of course, no small part of this celebration. The third event of importance and requiring much preparation is reunion time, correspondence on this involving personal letters to class presidents and secretaries, five hundred form letters and programs to all reunioners, and much planning for the pleasure and comfort of those who return, particularly as regards their housing.

The Quarterlies of this year have been published in a different form, which, we believe, has been most acceptable to all alumnae. We are indebted to many gifted alumnae who have been so kind in agreeing to write articles for the Quarterlies and those contributions have done much to hold the interest of our subscribers.

It is not within our province to infringe on the reports of the committee chairmen, although it is the delightful privilege of this office to assist in every department of the work whenever and wherever possible. Only in the case of the Alumnae House will we overstep, since the assistant secretary is the official hostess and can make an interesting report of the use of the house during this year. After years of trying to educate the students in the use of the house by their mothers on visits, success has come. This year more parents of students have used the house than alumnae or other guests and this in a year which has exceeded all previous years in financial returns from our rooms. The list of distinguished guests who have stayed in the Alumnae House during the year included: The Grand Duchess Marie of Russia, Mr. H. S. Ede, curator of the Tate Gallery in London; Dr. F. D. Murnaghan, of Johns Hopkins University; Dr. Rufus B. Harris, of Tulane University; Dr. and Mrs. Robert E. Speer, Myra Jervey, of Stephens College, and Dr. and Mrs. Lincoln Long, of Toledo, Ohio.

The assistant secretary reports a total of 5,575 form letters mailed out during the year, that the files are in good condition, due to intensive work in preparation for the new Directory and also because the office has had five Scholarship students for a total of twenty hours weekly.

The one large endeavor facing the office at this time is the preparation of the new directory, which is planned for publication in the early fall. The first step was the sending out of 1500 postcards to friends or relatives of alumnae whose addresses were lost. The results of this contact plus the replies about those whose names were published in each issue of the Quarterly under the caption of "Aggie's Lost Sheep" were most gratifying. Seven thousand double postcards have been sent to the entire alumnae enrollment and as the return cards come into the office, the changes are being noted. The assistant secretary will be in the office all summer working entirely on the compilation of the new directory and we hope it will be ready for the printer by early fall. In order that it may be as perfect as it is possible to make a continually changing record, the office will appreciate any changes of your name and address or that of any other alumna whom you know.

In an effort to make the student body conscious of the Alumnae Association as a very real and vital factor on the campus, we have several endeavors. The tea, given in the early fall to all new students, introduced the newcomers to the Alumnae House and the Executive Board of the Association. The senior teas given in May gathered the seniors in small groups and short talks were made before tea to explain the Association and its work and the organization of the class for alumnae years. We regard our Granddaughters' Club as one of the unique clubs on the campus. It is under the guardianship of the Alumnae Association which entertains these daughters of alumnae, now students at Agnes Scott, at several teas during the year and helps with their banquet with dates which is planned and run by the girls themselves.

And may we close this report with a word of deepest appreciation of the untiring work done by the chairmen of the various committees and their members and by the host of loyal alumnae all over the country who have responded in the most amazingly unanimous way when asked to do great and small services? The Alumnae Office would never have the courage to face the many events and the program of work of the year if the secretaries did not have the confident feeling of hundreds of alumnae willing to help in any way. It is a very humbling thing, this being alumnae secretary, when one thinks that alumnae look to this office for the contact which will hold their hearts and thoughts "Agnes-Scottward" and our constant hope is that we may not fail you!

Respectfully submitted,
Fannie G. (Mayson) Donaldson, '12,
Executive Secretary.
Nelle Chamblee, '34,
Assistant Executive Secretary.

Report of the Newspaper Publicity Committee

Publicity for the school year 1937-38 may be grouped into four points of concentration. The first was the occasion of the Alumnae Tea, in September; the second, the seventh annual Alumnae Week-End, in November; the third, Founder's Day, in February; and the fourth, which is under way at the present time, the graduation season.

Stress has been placed this year on the keeping of a perpetual scrapbook, to be shown at this meeting each May and turned over to the Alumnae Office upon completion of the chairman's term.

Respectfully submitted,
Letitia (Rockmore) Lange, '33,
Chairman.

Report of the Radio Committee

The Radio Committee has attempted this year to focus attention on Agnes Scott in three ways:

First, to interest potential students, we presented each Wednesday afternoon at 3:15 o'clock a skit called "Three Girls In a Room." In this way we tried to bring to them interesting and humorous incidents of dormitory, class room, and campus life.

Second, to interest the parents, and still using the skit idea, we tried to bring a picture of such campus organizations as Y. W. C. A., Mortar Board, Student Government, Athletic Association, Publications, Lecture Association, and Freshman Orientation Committees.

Third, for the benefit of the general public, we announced all dates of campus presentations, such as Black-friar productions, lectures, Glee Club concerts and operettas, campus conventions of national importance, May Day, and commencement exercises.

Of special importance to all alumnae was Founder's Day program on February 22nd, with messages from Dr. McCain, Miss Hopkins, Daisy Frances Smith, Alumnae President, and a skit given by two of the Radio Committee, Carrie Phinney Latimer and Betty Lou (Houck) Smith. The Committee is very grateful to the members of the skit who have so faithfully and cheerfully presented these weekly programs and also to WSB, Atlanta Journal station, for its unflinching kindness and assistance at these broadcasts.

Respectfully submitted,
Betty Lou (Houck) Smith, '35,
Chairman.

Report of the Alumnae Week-End Committee

Since the committee on the annual Alumnae Week-End has for its one project the planning and execution of a program given at Agnes Scott at one specified time during the college year the committee begs to submit a copy of that program as the major part of its report. In addition to the topics listed, through the generosity of the college, we were enabled to have, in the Exhibition Room of the college library, a display of the paintings of wild flowers of Georgia by Mary Motz Wills. The date of the Alumnae Week-End was November 19-20, 1937. The program:

Friday, November 19

10:00-10:30—Chapel Talk, "Indian Impressions," Dr. Mary Ann McKinney.

10:30-11:30—"Cross Currents in the Colleges," Dean Goodrich C. White.

11:30-12:30—"New Emphases in World Affairs," Judge Samuel H. Sibley.

12:30—Luncheon in Rebekah Scott Dining Room with Mr. S. G. Stukes as the speaker.

Saturday, November 20

10:00-10:30—Agnes Scott String Ensemble, Mr. C. W. Dieckmann directing.

10:30-11:30—"New Emphases in the Drama and the Theatre," Dr. Thomas H. English.

11:30 - 12:30 — "Contemporary Poets and the South," Dr. Emma May Laney.

The theme which we attempted to carry out was "New Emphases," and to all those who gave of their time and abilities we extend our thanks. Our librarian, Miss Hanley, had interesting books on display both days. The College was our host at luncheon, and the Alumnae Office, as usual, was the real strength of the committee. Our report is submitted with pleasure as we look back over our two years together, with appreciation to all the alumnae and friends who came to our program, and with best wishes for the new committee.

Respectfully submitted
Emma Pope (Moss) Dieckmann, '13,
Chairman.

Report of the House Decorations Committee

In this, the annual report of the House Decorations Committee, and as my final report as chairman of that committee for a two year term, my sincerest appreciation goes to the alumnae clubs who have made our work possible (since they supply our only revenue), and to the members of the committee for their cheerful and loyal cooperation, and to the alumnae secretaries for unflinching assistance. We have tried to maintain the high standards set for us by the original House Committee, and we feel happy in the thought that some of the most pressing needs have been met in the past term of office.

The Committee, seeing the need of a consistently carried out plan, voted to secure advice and help from an outstanding Atlanta decorator, and since the persons responsible for the original Alumnae House furnishings were no longer available, choice centered on Mary Miller, A.I.D. Her advice and direction has guided our efforts, and since we feel that at all times she had our best interests at heart, we herewith express to her our grateful appreciation.

During the past two years the following clubs have contributed as listed below:

Atlanta Club: two living room chairs re-upholstered (in gold damask), $40.00; 1 living room sofa, $50.00; 1 living room chair, new, $50.00; stair carpet and hall rug, $120.00; living room rug dyed, $18.75.

Atlanta Business Girls' Club: 1 new dining room chair, $35.00.

Decatur Club: 2 dining room arm chairs recovered, $20.00; dining room rug dyed, $18.75; 2 new dining room chairs, $70.00.

Charlotte Club: 1 new dining room chair, $35.00.

New York Club: Towards new dining room chair, $8.75.

One more dining room chair is needed to complete the set of eight. Walls and curtains are in need of attention. These, with many other things, we commend to the loyal enthusiasm of next year's committee and to generous impulses of all alumnae.

In conclusion, please let me thank you for the pleasure I have had in serving in this capacity.

Sarah Bell (Brodnax) Hansell, '23,
Chairman of House Committee.

Report of the House and Tea Room Committee

The appropriation allotted to the Tea Room Committee was spent for ten pairs of curtains and for necessary repairs and replacements in the kitchen.

Nine installations on the General Electric refrigerator have been paid. We gratefully acknowledge gifts made for this purpose by Miss Elizabeth F. Jackson, Cora (Morton) Durrett, Leone (Bowers) Hamilton, Irene Lowrance, the Mississippi State Club and the Decatur Club.

The Committee acknowledges with thanks the following gifts: Linen for the Alumnae House from the Columbia, S. C., Club on February 22nd; many beautiful luncheon sets from the New Orleans, Louisiana, Club; a dozen linen napkins from the Lynchburg, Va., Club; a pretty green pottery bowl from Martha (Schaefer) Tribble.

The Committee wishes to express appreciation to Mrs. Ethel Kerrison for her capable management of the Tea Room; it is a pleasure to report that she expects to return next year and that there has been a fine increase in the Tea Room business this year.

Respectfully submitted,

Martha Stansfield, '21.

Report of the Local Clubs Committee

While the close of 1937-1938 finds us with no brand new club to report, we can say that the Augusta Club—newly organized in 1936-1937—is thriving and that four old clubs which were inactive at this time last year have been revived: Baltimore, Md.; Birmingham, Ala.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; and Charleston, S. C.

There are now twenty-seven active local alumnae groups, some meeting once a year, some three times a year, and others meeting once each month.

With so many demands on the time and energies of our alumnae we found that it was not always practicable to insist on a strict organization with frequent meetings and we have encouraged the banding together of alumnae for the few or even the one meeting during a year. The twenty-seven clubs are as follows:

Atlanta, Ga.
Business Club, Atlanta.
Asheville, N. C.
Augusta, Ga.
Baltimore, Md.
Birmingham, Ala.
Charlotte, N. C.
Charleston, S. C.
Chattanooga, Tenn.
Chicago, Ill.
Columbia, S. C.
Decatur, Ga.
Greenville, S. C.
Hendersonville, N. C.
Jacksonville, Fla.
Knoxville, Tenn.
Los Angeles, Cal.
Lynchburg, Va.
Memphis, Tenn.
Mississippi State
Montgomery, Ala.
New Orleans, La.
New York City
Sheffield, Tusculumbia and Florence, Ala.
Tampa, Fla.
Washington, D. C.
Winston-Salem, N. C.

For the first time in several years there has been no Field Secretary available for personal visits to distant clubs. This lack has not passed unnoticed. On Founder's Day Alberta Palmour and Llewellyn Wilburn were guests of the Augusta Club, and on one occasion the Charlotte Club brought girls down to Decatur. Otherwise, contact with the clubs has been almost entirely through personal correspondence and circular bulletins.

Agnes Scott alumnae, in spite of the distance in miles and years from the college, have continued loyal in their support, morally and materially. To give any itemized list of gifts to the Alumnae Association from the Local Clubs would be an overlapping of this report and that of the House and House Decoration Committees. It is enough to say that the groups are ever generous.

To the incoming Local Clubs Committee, we confess there is much we have left undone, and assure you the fields for cultivation are extensive. There are, according to statistics from the office, two fertile areas which might yield the first crop of new clubs. Griffin, Ga., and Quincy, Fla., are recommended as ripe for organization and some effort in these two localities should bring forth fruit.

To have had part in the committee set-up during the past two years has been a real pleasure, and to have experienced the close contact with and clear insight of the workings of the General Alumnae Association we count as a distinct privilege. During these years we have also come to appreciate more than ever the faithful and efficient service of our two Alumnae Secretaries.

Respectfully submitted,

Sarah Q. Slaughter, '26,

Chairman.

The Report of the Grounds Committee of the Alumnae Association of Agnes Scott College for 1937-38

The Grounds Committee for the past four years has consisted of Mrs. Robert Holt, Frances (Gilliland) Stukes, and Eloise (Gay) Brawley.

We have this year centralized our efforts on beautifying the garden at the rear of the alumnae house by adding, with the help of Monroe Landscaping Company, more background evergreens to our last year's addition of ninety good sized box wood, all of which, with the help of the labor fund of the college, have lived.

Report of the Entertainment Committee

The Entertainment Committee of the Alumnae Association of Agnes Scott College submits the following report of its activities for the year 1937-38.

The customary program of entertainment consists of three large parties during the year; namely, a tea for the new students, a tea for the seniors, and an "Open House" after senior vespers on Baccalaureate Sunday. In addition to these, the Association provides refreshments for the Publicity Committee for Alumnae Week-End, and for the meetings of the Granddaughters' Club. The Entertainment Committee also provides and arranges the flowers for the Trustees' Luncheon during Commencement.

In September your committee, assisted by the executive board, Miss Scandrett, Dr. McCain, and about twenty-five alumnae welcomed the new students to the campus and extended to them the privileges of the Alumnae House. The guests numbered 125.

The committee is now working on plans for the decorations at the Trustees' Luncheon June 4, and for the Open House June 5.

The duty of the Entertainment Committee is indeed pleasant and I have enjoyed it, but it entails a lot of work that could not have been done without the whole-hearted cooperation of each individual member of the committee. It takes time and effort and the committee has been greatly handicapped by lack of equipment. It is necessary to bring from home glassware, linen, trays, silver and china in quantities sufficient to serve 200 people. So from the experience gained after serving for two years as chairman of the Entertainment Committee I would like to submit the following recommendation to the Finance Committee. Namely, that a sum of money, about $25.00, be allotted to the incoming chairman to buy inexpensive glassware, etc., and that whatever equipment is bought be kept entirely separate from that of the tea-room, and for the exclusive use of the Entertainment Committee, unless the chairman of the committee sees fit to rent it to those wishing to use it.

I wish to thank Nelle Chamlee and Fannie G. Donaldson for their many suggestions and great help at all times. To the members of the committee I am deeply grateful for their time, work and cooperation in every way.

List of expenditures to date:

Tea for new students	----	$18.78
Tea for Alumnae Week-End
Publicity	-----	3.43
Tea for Granddaughters' Club		4.56
Teas for seniors	-----	21.04

		$47.81

This leaves a balance of $52.19 to be used for decorations for the Trustees' Luncheon and for refreshments at the Open House on June 5.

Respectfully submitted,
Irene (Havis) Baggett, '17,
Chairman.

Annual Report for 1937-38 of the Constitution and By-Laws Committee

In accordance with the vote in May, 1937, of the annual alumnae assembly, the following changes were incorporated in the Constitution:

1. The following addition was submitted to Article IV, Section 5, Subhead f, of the By-Laws: "The Finance Committee must approve the plans of any committee wishing to raise funds."

2. Subhead c of Section 3 of Article IV of the By-Laws shall be stricken, and "Alumnae Week-End Committee" substituted therefor.

3. Subhead i of Section 5 of Article IV of the By-Laws shall be stricken and the following substituted therefor: "Alumnae Week-End Committee. The Alumnae Week-End Committee shall have complete charge of all plans concerning the Alumnae Week-End."

Respectfully submitted,
Ray (Knight) Dean, '29,
Acting Chairman.

Report of the Committee on Preparatory Schools

Although the college this year has not had on its staff a person as Alumnae Field Secretary, Dr. McCain asked that we maintain any possible contacts with high schools. The following have been possible:

1. In October, approximately 3000 announcements of the annual Competitive Examination were sent to high schools and preparatory schools all over the country. The response was unusually good with the results that 235 girls stood the examinations on March 4.

2. In cooperation with high schools who have scheduled "College Days" we were fortunate to be represented by the following alumnae: Winston-Salem and Greenwood, N. C., Meriel Bull, '36; Port Washington School and Fieldston School, New York City, Dorothy (Hutton) Mount, '29; Morganton (N. C.) High School, Dell (Bernhardt) Wilson, '24.

3. Contact with Atlanta high schools was accomplished through a party on March 4, attended by approximately 250 college preparatory seniors. The program for the afternoon included a tea at which the girls were introduced to the officers of the administration and some of the student leaders, exhibition tennis and swimming, a tour of the campus, skits, and supper around camp fires. The schools whose program did not permit their seniors to accept this invitation were invited for dinner one night and to May Day.

CAMPUS NEWS and OFFICE NOTES

Miss Lillian Smith, Professor, and Beloved Friend of Alumnae

It is with a deep sense of loss that Agnes Scott College announces the resignation of Miss Lillian Smith, for thirty years head of the Latin Department. Ill health forced Miss Smith to take a leave of absence last fall and, although her health is much improved, she thought it best to tender her resignation from the faculty of Agnes Scott, which was regretfully accepted.

Miss Smith is a native of New York state, where she received her early schooling and later attended Syracuse University and Cornell University. Miss Smith won her M.A. and later her Ph.D. degree and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa honorary fraternity.

Coming from the faculty of Northfield Seminary, Miss Smith became a member of the Agnes Scott faculty in 1905, just before the college changed from its Institute standards to those of an accredited college and through the long years of her teaching experience here she was known and loved by many, many alumnae who struggled through the Gallic wars and Roman laws and Latin prose, inspired by her great love for her subject and her inspirational presentation. And not only was the affection of her students won by her teaching but they became aware of the wonderful traits of justice and fair play which always marked her dealings with them. Many little incidents of Miss Smith's appreciation of student problems and desire to help them solve them remain forever in their minds.

Her course included always a freshman course, for she expressed her reason, which was to know the incoming students in the close relationship of teacher and student before they reached the higher classes. Miss Smith also taught advanced courses in Virgil, Lucretius and Tacitus, some sophomore classes in Horace, a teachers' training course and advanced Latin Composition, Roman Comedy, and Pliny's Letters. Her courses in the study of Roman private life and the topography of Rome, illustrated with slides, did much to interest the girls in the "glory which was Rome's" and to give them the background and the glamour which made possible a real interest in the language.

Nor was her contribution to the life of the college confined to her teaching ability for she was always vitally interested in anything which would aid in the growth of the college, taking part in many activities of the college life. Miss Smith had served as chairman of the library committee, chairman of the advanced standing committee, as a member of the curriculum committee. She was a faithful attendant at the many plays and concerts and other events given by the students and always willing to help in any of the undertakings of both students and alumnae.

Many of the older alumnae remember the year when Miss Smith's niece, Dorothea Keeney, came to live with her and to attend the Academy which was connected with Agnes Scott at that time, serving as a high school for the college. At that time Miss Smith moved from Rebekah Scott dormitory to White House and she and Dorothea made their home together in that dormitory. After Dorothea's year at the Academy, Miss Smith moved back into Rebekah Scott until 1918 when she changed to West

Lawn cottage which remained her home until her resignation. Her room there was a pleasant and comfortable spot for her friends and her students to visit and no matter how busy she might be, she welcomed them and made them enjoy their stay.

Following her illness last fall, Miss Smith went to spend the winter with that same niece, now the busy homemaker for her father, Bishop Keeney, in a delightful home which they have bought in Miami, Florida, and there Miss Smith regained her strength in that famed Florida sunshine. Returning to the campus in May, she closed her thirty years connection with the campus. Her permanent address will be 123 N. E. 97th St., Miami, Florida, but her summer address will be 936 Westmoreland, Syracuse, N. Y.

The alumnae would like to express their own appreciation of Miss Lillian Smith's years of service at our college and to tell her that we feel a very keen sense of loss from our faculty and from those on the campus whom our memory holds very dear. Our best wishes go to her for the happiest of years and for the enjoyment of all the myriad of pleasures which leisure and returning health can offer. Agnes Scott will be counting on her visits from time to time to renew old friendships and to keep that close contact with all the associations of the years.

Mr. Dieckmann Wins Award

Mr. C. W. Dieckmann, head of the music department, is the composer of an organ composition which recently won first place in the contest for organ numbers at the Southeastern Convention of the American Guild of Organists at Tallahassee, Florida, May 10. Mr. Dieckmann was honored by the student body at an all-Dieckmann program of music during National Music Week. The selections presented included his organ compositions, "Song of Happiness" and "Song of Sunshine," and the prize winning number, "Adoro te Devote"; "Scherzo" for two pianos; "The Prayer Perfect" and "The Throstle," sung by Frances (Gilliland) Stukes, '24; and a setting for an old Lutheran hymn played as an organ prelude.

Our Sympathy to Miss Jackson

Miss Elizabeth Jackson has the deep sympathy of her friends among the alumnae in the loss of her father May 6. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson had been wintering in Orlando and although both had been in bad health during the winter they were planning to make the trip back to Massachusetts the middle of May. Miss Jackson had spent spring vacation in Orlando with them, and had been down several times for week-ends. Miss Jackson will spend the summer with her mother in their Massachusetts home at South Weymouth.

English Department Honors Miss McKinney

Soon after the beginning of college last fall, the members of the English department began plans to honor Miss McKinney by making possible a permanent fund, the income of which would assure an award to be known as the "Louise McKinney Book Award." This is to be given annually to the student who makes the best collection of books during the year. For many years Miss McKinney has been securing personally through friends of hers and the college an annual sum of $25.00 which was known as the Richard de Bury prize and which was awarded on similar requirements.

Feeling that Miss McKinney's many friends among the alumnae and faculty would want to join with the English faculty, the members of this branch offered her friends the opportunity of contributing. The whole plan was kept a secret from Miss McKinney and no one was more completely surprised than she when the announcement of one thousand dollars given toward this end was made at the commencement exercises and the name of the winner for this year, who was Mary Ann Kernan, '38, was made known.

From the many, many letters which came back bearing contributions to this permanent endowment, which will be kept and so regarded by the college treasurer, there was such genuine and enthusiastic sentiment expressed that we are quoting a few which will please the alumnae as well as Miss McKinney:

"It is a real privilege and pleasure to participate in a tribute to Miss McKinney, whose character and personality have been a constant inspiration to many who, like myself, love her dearly."

"Always I will feel that Miss McKinney has been one of the finest influences in my life and I know that hundreds of former Agnes Scotters feel the same way. Others have fulfilled her ideals to greater extent but I doubt if her helpfulness has meant more in any other life."

"She is indeed a rare person and one whom we all delight to honor."

"We who studied under her will always love her."

"I wish that my contribution could be in keeping with the love and respect I have always felt for Miss McKinney."

"Thank you for giving me the opportunity to contribute to the fund.

It is a beautiful and most fitting tribute to Miss McKinney. . . . In company with every other old Agnes Scotter, I love Miss McKinney very dearly and remember her classes with pleasure."

"Once more I thank you for letting me share in this tribute to my beloved friend."

And so from all corners of the globe came these expressions of love and appreciation and delight in having a share in this new honor for a beloved professor. We feel sure that this fund is the kind of honor that Miss McKinney would choose, for the book prize has long been a cherished idea, this award for the discriminating accumulation of literature, the first step in the accumulating of a worthy personal library. The members of the English department planned well in their desire to pay lasting tribute to Louise McKinney, professor of English and understanding and sympathetic friend of hundreds of girls who have passed through the gates of Agnes Scott.

Retirement of Three Friends of the Alumnae

A total of 64 years of service to Agnes Scott is being completed this June and credited to the loyalty and love of three women who have seen the college weather war and depression and emerge gloriously triumphant as one of the finest in the South.

Miss Emma Miller, who has served as matron for twenty-seven years, came here in 1911 on her first job, and it has been her only one. She has seen the college through the War, and the depression, and reports that to her things seem much the same as they did when she came here in spite of all the changes and new buildings. Miss Miller lives in Beeton, Ontario, and will spend the summer there with her brother and three sisters. She expects to winter in Toronto, which is only forty miles from Beeton, but which is much more livable and exciting in winter, but she will make her permanent home with her brother and sisters.

Mrs. Jennie Dunbar Finnell, house-keeper and dietician, came to Agnes Scott in 1916. She has seen the college grow from three dormitories and two cottages to the present extensive plant with new gym, administration building, and library, not to mention the nine cottages which have been added to the institution. Mrs. Finnell has had the same head cook, John Hill, and the same head waiter, John Flynt, the entire twenty-one years, and is leaving the two splendid servants to her successor. She recalls the time during the last depression when the dining room in White House was reduced to nine tables, with only 88 people, and the banner year when she fed 176 people. She has seen the infirmary moved three times, and has helped straighten out the ensuing confusion of turning the campus upside down as each additional building was put up. She has tended a flower garden between East Lawn and the White House for many years and has kept the dining room tables supplied with flowers during her regime. Now at 68 she is retiring and plans to live in Ellenton, S. C., where she has a home of her own, and with her son and daughter-in-law in Sharpsville, Pa.

Mrs. Lena Davies, housekeeper and dietitian, is completing 16 years of service in this capacity, and while she may continue in another capacity, she will not be in charge of Rebekah Dining Room. Mrs. Davies has been in school work for 36 years, having served at Coker College, Queens College, and Columbia College. She will spend the summer in Barnwell, S. C., with her son and two grandsons, to whom she is devoted.

It is with sincere regret that the administration announces the retirement of these faithful officers. We are deeply grateful for the splendid service and cooperation that has brought Agnes Scott so close to her fiftieth anniversary. From the alumnae and the college goes a sincere wish for most enjoyable years to come for these three friends.

Future Alumnae and Their Beaus

Eloisa Alexander to James Augustus LeConte, Jr., of Atlanta, the wedding to be June 8, in Atlanta.

Mary Malone to John Jordan White, of Atlanta, the marriage having been solemnized April 20, in Atlanta.

Mary Erneste Perry to Dr. Norman George Houston, of Nashville, Ga., the wedding to be in the summer.

Martha Summers to Willard Lamberson, of Huntsville, Ala., and Atlanta, the wedding June 6.

Jane Clark, ex-'37, to Dr. Jackson B. Dismukes, of Fort McPherson, the wedding to be July 6 in Dunedin, Florida.

Mary Pitner, ex-'37, to Henry Tanur Winkelman, Jr., of Memphis, the wedding June 11 in Franklin, Tenn.

Mary Ella Rogers, ex-'37, to Joseph Clement Crocker, of Chicago and New York, the wedding to be in the early summer.

Mary Carlene Wallace, ex-'37, to Grover Cleveland Willis, Jr., of Columbus, Ga., the wedding to be this summer.

Nell Allison to Charles Sheldon, of Atlanta, the date not announced.

Martha Foster to Dr. James T. King, of Quitman and Atlanta, the wedding June 7 at the Emory Chapel.

Margaret Lipscomb to Bill Martin, of Atlanta, the wedding in the fall.

Margaret Morrison to Dr. Mac Morris Blumberg, of Atlanta, the wedding June 15.

Ann Thompson to Ben Lacy Rose, of Fayetteville, N. C., the wedding June 23 in Richmond.

1939

Bettye Sams, ex-'39, to James Wallace Daniel, Jr., of Charleston, the wedding the last of June in Decatur.

Winner of the $700 Scholarship

The $700 scholarship for next year was awarded to Suzanne Kaulbach, of Atlanta, graduate of North Fulton High School. Suzanne is a member of the German, Franch, Latin and Chemistry Clubs, a prominent player in the Dramatic Club, has been on the rifle team for three years, and was manager of the girls' basketball team her senior year, so it is natural that she should have been elected "Miss Versatile" in a superlative contest at North Fulton. The $500 scholarship went to Frances Tucker, of Laurel, Mississippi, who won second place in the competitive exam contest. There were 235 entrants representing practically every state in the union.

Quenelle Harrold Fellowship Awarded

The Quenelle Harrold Fellowship was awarded to Mildred Davis, of Orlando, Florida, with Eliza King, of Columbia, S. C., as alternate. Mildred plans to do graduate work at Columbia University and if she is unable to use it Eliza will have it to work at the Institute of Public Affairs in Washington, where the Rockefeller Foundation is giving apprenticeships in governmental work to young people in America. These apprenticeships consist of work in various departments of the government and a chance to study at the American University. Even if Eliza does not get to use the Quenelle Harrold Fellowship, she hopes to get an apprenticeship to Washington anyway.

Phi Beta Kappa Elections

Elizabeth Blackshear, Hortense Jones, Mary Anne Kernan, and Anne Thompson of the class of '38, and Quenelle (Harrold) Sheffield, '23, were elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa in the election of June 2, with Dr. McCain as president of the local chapter, and the announcement of this was made at chapel June 3rd, with the banquet in the Alumnae House on Saturday evening, June 4th, in their honor.

Hopkins Jewel Award

Carrying out the traditional award of the jewel known as the Hopkins Jewel to the girl whom a committee of the faculty judges most meets the requirements dear to Miss Hopkins' ideals in character, poise, and attainments, the committee gave this cherished token at this commencement to Nell Hemphill, of Petersburg, Va.

1937-38 Sees Two New Life Members of the Alumnae Association

The office is proud to announce the addition of two names to the list of life members of the Alumnae Association this year: Myra Jervy, '31, of Stephens College, Missouri, and Agnes Scott Donaldson, '17, of Colorado Springs, Col.

Martha Marshall Elected President of Granddaughters' Club

Granddaughters' Club announces its new officers for 1938-39: Martha Marshall, '39, daughter of Mattie (Hunter) Marshall, '10, as president; Mary McPhaul, '40, daughter of Ruth Brown McPhaul, Academy, vice-president; and Ellen Stuart, '40, daughter of the late Pearl (Vereen) Stuart, ex-'11, secretary-treasurer.

Hail, New Officers!

The Alumnae Association feels that it is exceedingly fortunate in having such competent and outstanding alumnae as incoming officers for 1938-1940. The entire ballot as elected is presented in another part of this Quarterly but we feel we would like to express our appreciation here for the acceptance by them of the responsibilities of the various offices. The alumnae as a whole wish to assure them of the support and cooperation of the vast body of the alumnae in the many plans and purposes of the Association as they will be carried out during the coming two years. These are to be busy and interesting years for within the regime of these officers will come the celebration of Agnes Scott's Semi-Centennial and the usual broad program of undertakings of the Association will be increased in all probability as ways of helping with this memorable celebration come to the attention of these officers.

We wish for them and for ourselves, as members, two wonderful years of advance in all lines of our program, of helpfulness to our college and all her plans, of joy in our associating together as alumnae and friends of Agnes Scott.

To our president, Anne (Hart) Equen, who will carry much of the responsibility and work of the years, we pledge our individual efforts and our interest in all which she and the other officers undertake. And may the two years bring new glory to Agnes Scott and much happiness to the great body of alumnae in their college and in their relationship to each other as daughters of a great college.

Other Awards

The Collegiate Scholarship to the student with the highest general proficiency was awarded to Jane Salters, of Florence, S. C. The Rich Prize, to the freshman with the best scholastic record, went to Saline Brumby, of Atlanta, Ga. The award of the Laura Candler Medal to the sophomore, junior, or senior making the highest advance in mathematics was made to Lou Pate, of Newbern, Tenn. The Morley Medal, given for the most original work in mathematics, was won by Eva Ann Pirkle, of Jenkins, Ky.; the voice scholarship was won by Virginia Kyle, of Huntingdon, W. Va.; the Spoken English scholarship was awarded to Jeanne Flynt, of Decatur, Ga.; Jeanne Matthews won the science key which is given by the national Chi Beta Phi Scientific Association to each local chapter to be awarded.

We Beg to Report That:

Mary M. Junkin, ex-'28, is directing the Occupational Therapy Curative Workshop, recently opened on Jefferson Street, in Richmond, Va., which is the first of its kind in this section. The workshop has been established to provide for the cure and welfare of needy crippled children and problem cases, through instruction in the crafts requiring exercises prescribed by doctors in individual cases, thus equipping the patients to earn a livelihood. At present there are twenty white children and five negro patients, ranging in age from five to nineteen years, and one older person, forty years old, who receive instruction for certain specified periods through the week. The Curative Workshop was chartered late in January as a non-stock organization for charitable and benevolent purposes. The Workshop has a qualified medical staff and a technician. Mary is directly in charge, as occupational therapist, of the daily activities of the workshop.

Louise Ware, '17, has recently written a biography of Jacob Riis, "New York's Most Useful Citizen," which was published by D. Appleton-Century Company, of New York, in April. The critics term this a well-written biography based on thorough research. Written with the full cooperation of the Riis family, Louise has presented a coordinated and intensely interesting account of Jacob Riis' remarkable career. Louise conducts courses in Social Work and Economic History at Adelphi College, and has been active with the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities and other such organizations in the past.

Leonora (Owsley) Herman, Institute, author of "Rather Personal" and other collections of poems, is painting murals for "Liverton," a country house in Virginia, now. For the past two years Leonora has been working on four murals of dancing and swimming figures and tropical jungle and animals which will be hung in Liverton.

Mary Catherine Williamson, '31, of New York City, is secretary to George Davis, associate and fiction editor of Harper's Bazaar, and does much research work and manuscript reading for him. Harper's Bazaar is one of the nation's outstanding magazines and is made up of fiction as well as fashions. It is one of the oldest periodicals published in this country, and has international prestige. The wonderful photographs featured in this magazine are made abroad as well as in this country, according to Mary Catherine, and therefore it is one of the few American magazines which go into foreign homes. Mary Catherine is soloist in the choir of St. Bartholomew's and does some accompanying for a prominent voice teacher in New York in addition to her work on the Bazaar staff.

Elizabeth (Woltz) Currie, '25, as chairman of the Moore County Maternal Committee for the past two years, led the women of this county in the organization for study and then for remedying the record of maternal deaths in that county, with the result that, according to the Director of Maternity and Infancy of the State Board of Health, theirs is the only county-wide volunteer committee for maternal welfare in the state of North Carolina. Following the appointment of committees representing different sections of the county, a main committee was formed from these and from the leading doctors of the county and the Health Officer. A maternity nurse was secured by this committee through appeal to the commissioners, then prenatal clinics were established in six sections of the county, with one of the committee as chairman in each district. Her duties were to secure the physician for the clinic, to have general charge of the clinic office, with a corps of volunteer workers to help her and the nurse and the patients. Also, the Maternal Welfare Committee undertook to raise money to buy certain needed equipment for the nurse, medicine, and occasionally food for patients. One clinic chairman started a sewing club where layettes are made and packed in a basket with mattress and sheets. The organization has been functioning for less than two years. The time has been a period of experimentation and organization with not enough time yet to look for definite results, but there has been a definite sign of interest among doctors, growing attendance at clinics, and a drop in the maternal deaths. This is the aim: to teach the public the vital importance of maternity care and to secure in cooperation with all existing agencies such care for all expectant mothers. Agnes Scott is always proud of the fine public service which its alumnae are rendering in their communities, of which this is a shining example.

Martha Skeen, '34, made her debut on the CBS hookup Thursday, June 2, on the Kate Smith hour. Martha was prominent in Blackfriars while at Agnes Scott, and since her graduation has played with a group in Boston this summer. Martha is one of the young ladies Kate Smith is presenting to illustrate the potential wealth of the nation in radio dramatic talent. She has played dramatic parts in many productions over the local stations and announced the Agnes Scott radio program during 1935-36. We're wishing her much luck!

Louise (Brown) Hastings, '23, has been made first vice-president of the National Council of State Garden Clubs. This is further proof of her inestimable service as president of the Garden Club of Georgia; in her two year term, she made a wonderful record and aided in a remarkable way the great garden movement in the country which has made America garden-conscious. Her selection to this new honor came at the annual meeting of the Council, which assembled members from forty states at the Roosevelt Hotel in New York in May. She presided over the executive committee meeting and also was a speaker on the radio program of this convention.

Can You Forgive Us?

Knowing that everyone of you turned immediately to the back of the Quarterly for "Concerning Ourselves," we humbly apologize! Due to the tremendous amount of mailing and work entailed in sending out and checking on the cards which was the first effort toward the new Directory, the office felt it could not gather up all the news items and arrange them and type them for this part of the Quarterly and carry on its regular work in the office and in the commencement preparations and events. The Executive Board of the Association agreed to the plan of eliminating all class news in this one issue, not to establish any precedent in future summers, we promise. Class secretaries, who work valiantly all year, were notified in the early spring that they could have a vacation, too, for this issue and we assure you that the fall issue will be so full that you will have to allow days to read it.

It is the ambition of this office to make every issue of the Quarterly mean a great deal to the subscribers and please understand that only the amount of detail work which is involved in making ready this part of the Quarterly added to the swamped condition already existing in the office in sending and receiving thousands of cards for the directory and then correcting changes and separating and sending to others cards returned and undelivered made us consider this omission. The class news of the Quarterly is the part which also takes infinite time, as all reports of class secretaries have to be combined with what the office has collected and arranged alphabetically, names checked very carefully for misspelling, and the final results typed entirely over for printing.

We have tried to redeem ourselves by sending you a most complete story of "Campus News and Office Notes" and the commencement stories. Of course, the usual reports of the General Association are printed in this issue and we believe you will find them interesting and enlightening.

Thanks for your understanding and we solemnly pledge ourselves to more and better class news all next year!

Mortar Board's New Members

Mortar Board elected twelve juniors to membership at an impressive ceremony early in April. Miss Emma May Laney spoke on the subject of scholarship, one of the three ideals of the sorority. Mary Lillian Fairly, president of the chapter, announced the new members, who are: Jean Bailey, of Atlanta; Adelaide Benson, of Jacksonville; Mildred Coit, of Richmond, Va.; Mary Frances Guthrie, of Louisville, Ky.; Mary Hollingsworth, of Florence, Ala.; Jane Moore Hamilton, of Dalton, Ga.; Douglas Lyle, of College Park, Ga.; Emma McMullen, of Hangchow, China; Marie Merritt, of Clarksdale, Miss.; Mamie Lee Ratliff, of Sherard, Miss.; Mary Ellen Whetsell, of Columbia, S. C.; and Amelia Nickles, of Decatur, who will serve as president of the chapter for 1938-39.

Heads for '38-'39 at Agnes Scott

New student officers for 1938-39 were elected early in April and include: Mary Ellen Whetsell, of Columbia, S. C., as student government president; Douglas Lyle, of College Park, Ga., president of the Agnes Scott Christian Association (formerly Y. W. C. A.); Jane Moore Hamilton, of Dalton, Ga., president of the Athletic Association; Mary Frances Guthrie, of Louisville, Ky., editor of the Agonistic; Julia Sewell, of Atlanta, editor of the Aurora; and Adelaide Benson, of Jacksonville, Fla., editor of the Silhouette.

Physical Directors Meet

The Southern Association of Directors of Physical Education for College Women met in Atlanta in April and held a number of its sessions at Agnes Scott. Llewellyn Wilburn, '19, is president of the Association, and presided at the conference. Among the social events honoring the guests was a tea at Agnes Scott given by the Physical Education department.

The Faculty at Conventions

Martha Stansfield, '21, and Miss Catherine Torrance, of the Classics Department, attended the National Convention of Eta Sigma Phi at Ohio State University in May and carried three Agnes Scott girls up with them to represent the local chapter.

Professors Emily Dexter and Katherine Omwake were two of the three women speakers to give papers at the Southern Society of Philosophy and Psychology Conference in Knoxville, April 16. Miss Dexter was elected a member of the Council for the next three years. She presented a paper, "Personality Traits of the Conservatives and Radicals," and Miss Omwake read a paper on "The Ability to Wake at Specified Times."

May Day

"Midsummer Night's Dream," Agnes Scott's first May Day festival to be given at night, was most successfully presented Friday night, May 6, in the Dell. The richly colored silk and velvet costumes of the court gentlemen and ladies and the soft hued gauze raiment of the fairies were enhanced by the unusual lighting effects, and the Dell has never looked lovelier than it did under artificial light. Myrl Chafin, of McDonough, was crowned Queen Hippolyta, and ruled over the pageant with her court of fourteen maids. The production was directed by Eugenie Dozier, '27, and Miss Harriette Haynes, of the physical education department.

Attention, Alumnae! Can You Answer This Call?

The Librarian has asked us to publish a plea for books. Any alumna having books which she thinks may be valuable is asked to write Miss Edna Hanley, the librarian, giving the author and title of the volumes. If the books are not already in the library the college will pay shipping charges.

A set of "The World's Greatest Literature," published in 68 volumes, is particularly desired at this time.

The files of the Agonistic, Silhouette, and Aurora are not complete and if you have copies of any of the following numbers we will be most grateful if they will be sent to the Library.

Agonistic:

- Volume 1, all issues
- Volume 2, numbers 12 and 19
- Volume 3, all issues
- Volume 4, all issues
- Volume 5, all issues

Miss Carrie Scandrett will spend the month of June in Hendersonville, N. C., and the latter part of the summer with her sister in Alabama.

Agnes Scott Business Girls' Club

The Agnes Scott Business Girls' Club has had a very successful year and is proud to report many new contacts with alumnae engaged in business in Atlanta, a definite theme in the programs for the year, a class for alumnae which has met weekly for study, participation in the Founder's Day program sponsored by the local clubs, a tea and benefit bridge party, and sufficient funds raised to make a gift to the Alumnae House.

The program theme for the year has been "World Situations." The speakers have included Dr. J. R. McCain, Daisy Frances Smith, Dr. Gasque, Mr. Walter C. Hill, the exchange students at Agnes Scott, Mr. C. A. Rauschenberg, Dr. Arthur Raper, and Dr. Philip Davidson. Dr. George P. Hayes has taught the alumnae study class and our topic has been the "Modern Novel."

To the local alumnae who are working we would say: If we haven't found you already, please get in touch with us through the Alumnae Office for we are very sincere when we say that we want you to participate in our club's activities.

Respectfully submitted,

Eunice Ball, '28,

President.

Atlanta Club

The Atlanta Club has continued its monthly meetings at the homes of the members. The lectures have been varied and very interesting, some of the subjects being European Dictatorships, Children's Books, Fine China, and Socialized Medicine.

During November we gave a benefit at Rich's, under the chairmanship of Kitty (Woltz) Greene. From this party was cleared $170.00, of this amount $50.00 was given to the Alumnae Garden Committee, and $120.00 to the House Decorations Committee for carpeting the hall of the Alumnae House.

In February the Decatur, Business Girls, and Atlanta Clubs joined for the Founder's Day Dinner at the Atlanta Athletic Club. Eunice Ball, of the Business Girls Club, presided. Short speeches of welcome were given by Daisy Frances Smith, and the other presidents of the two clubs. Dr. McCain spoke briefly. Dr. David Marx was the guest speaker of the evening.

At the May meeting the nominating committee for the officers of next year was appointed. The members of the committee are: Kitty (Woltz) Greene, Mary Palmer (Caldwell) McFarland, Allie (Candler) Guy, Catharine (Baker) Matthews, and Margaret (McDow) MacDougall. They will present their tickets at the June meeting, at which time the election will take place.

Sincerely,

Dorothy (Walker) Palmer, '34.

Augusta, Georgia, Club

This club had only one meeting and that was the yearly banquet on Founder's Day. Llewellyn Wilburn and Alberta Palmour came for this event, Alberta making us feel that we had been back at college with her grand spirit and supply of news, and Llewellyn Wilburn giving us an inspiring talk on the Alumnae House, Agnes Scott, and the possibilities for progress and real service for all alumnae clubs. Had we kept up the spirit she left us with we feel sure we would have contributed large fortunes, not to mention dish towels galore to the Alumnae House! Unfortunately, the banquet has been our only activity and I can only say that I hope the bad beginning will result in a far better ending with greater results for our club and for Agnes Scott. We're certainly going to let you hear from us during the rest of the year!

Mary L. Hull.

Birmingham, Alabama, Club

The Birmingham Club had a luncheon meeting April 2nd and elected new officers for next year. Gretchen Kleybecker, ex-'36, is the new president and Frederica Twining, ex-'35, is secretary. The club is planning a picnic-lunch at Eugenia (Thompson) Akin's father's lovely summer home on a river out from Birmingham for their next meeting. They report that the "alumnae chair fund" is well under way.

Decatur Club

The meetings of the Decatur Alumnae Club have been of great interest this year and we look back at our accomplishments with some satisfaction. Our speakers have been looked forward to with high anticipation and back upon with a feeling that vital additions have been made in our lives. Dr. McCain always opens our year in September with a message for the year—a continued assertion of the forward progress of our Alma Mater. In October Miss Weaver, of the State Health Department, informed us of the activities and problems of health in Georgia. November proved a high spot, in which we not only enjoyed the inimitable Emma Garrett Morris in her review of "Napoleon and Waleska" but had, in addition, a beautiful exhibition and sale of Penland Pewter, sponsored by Gussie (O'Neal) Johnson and Mrs. Robert Holt. About $102.00 worth of pewter was sold in which the club made a nice profit. In January Dr. J. Sam Guy, of Emory University, spoke to us on the "Marvels of Modern Chemistry."

On January 19th the club held its annual benefit bridge at the Alumnae House. The Founder's Day Banquet, held at the Atlanta Athletic Club the evening of February 22nd, with the Atlanta and Business Girls' Clubs, was a delightful experience. The Decatur Club arranged the decorations, lacey old fashioned bouquets in red, white and blue and showered with tiny silk American flags, which centered the tables and with lighted candles formed a scene of beauty. Dr. Marx was the splendid speaker of the evening. For the February meeting, the Decatur Club presented Dr. George Lewis, of Emory University, in a talk on "Bio-Chemistry and Health." Mr. Ruch, of the Wear-Ever Aluminum Company of America, explained a project of Health Cooking to the club, in which the club could benefit by demonstration dinners. This project has been followed during the spring months. Perhaps our most distinguished speaker of the year was Colonel Arthur N. Tasker, M.D., of the U. S. Army Medical Corps, who spoke to us on "National Defense." As one of our members summed him up—he proved himself a poet, a flaming torch for Peace, a missionary and a deep scholar. In April the well known and delightful psychiatrist, Dr. W. W. Young, of Atlanta, spoke to us on "Personality Development." We will end our year with our May meeting when our friend, Dr. Woolford B. Baker, will again return to us.

Of our contributions to the college community we can say less—for our year has been richer in receiving than in giving. However we have purchased a new dining room chair for the Alumnae House (now totaling seven) and have given the Garden Committee $25.00. Our own Frances (Gilliland) Strukes and Mrs. Holt work so faithfully in the Garden that we can rightfully claim it partly our own.

Our annual Children's Party for Alumnae children will usher in Commencement Week, as usual. Two of our own alumnae, Hazel (Wolfe) Frakes and Frances (Freeborn) Pauley, who are active with the Decatur Junior Service League, will present the League's puppet show. With this we close our year's activities. Helene (Norwood) Lammers, ex-'22, President.

Memphis, Tennessee, Club

The Memphis Club had a Founder's Day tea which was reported too late for publication in the April Quarterly. Ten of the alumnae gathered at Margaret (Smith) Lyon's and they report a grand time, although they could not get the radio program.

New York Club

The New York Club is now holding two meetings a year, one a dinner and the other a tea meeting. On February 23rd the officers of the club, Polly Gordon, Mary Catherine Williamson, and Lilly Weeks, arranged for a dinner at the Clipper, an attractive mid-town restaurant. The attendance was gratifying with many classes represented by the thirty alumnae present. This spring former officers of the club are meeting at a tea to discuss and perfect plans for the large tea meeting, under the direction of the new officers: Judy (Blundell) Adler, president; Dorothy Owen, vice-president; and Dora (Ferrell) Gentry, secretary and treasurer. The club sent $8.75 to the Alumnae House Decorations Committee, to be used at the committee's discretion. It should be pointed out that this club has the largest mailing list of any of the clubs and the most transient membership. With at best a small percentage representation at the meetings, a donation and two meetings represent tremendous effort on the part of the officers.

Tampa, Florida, Club

Gregory (Rowlett) Weidman was re-elected president of the Tampa Club at the Founder's Day tea and writes that the club plans to entertain some of the high school seniors interested in Agnes Scott at some social affair in the near future.

Washington, D. C., Club

The Washington Club met for luncheon in Wesley Hall March 12 and had fourteen alumnae present. According to reports the chief entertainment was gossip and getting acquainted; the chief business was electing new officers. Louise (Chandler) Lion is the new president and Patricia Collins the secretary.

On Leaving

By HORTENSE JONES, '38

*None but the moving heart can know the grace
Of joy that while it quickens turns for flight.
The soul uprooted from a quiet place
Must feel the aching bliss of last delight.
Yet boarded happiness cannot deny
Doubts that with the dwindling hours increase:
Where find a light, what answer to a cry?
None but the seeing spirit makes its peace.*

*Here have we found a wall against the wind,
Here a shelter from the shuffling seas;
And yet the ocean's spindle must rescind
Its giant web even from the Hebrides.
Life's the sweeter for its ebb and flow;
The sands are run, the waters shift, we go.*

Calling All Poets

Plans are being made by the faculty, administration and alumnae to make the session 1939-1940 a memorable Semi-Centennial. All extra-curricular festivities will play on the theme of the fifty years of Agnes Scott's history and achievement. The last Quarterly of that session, it is hoped, will be devoted to historical matter and will include an outstanding poem of college significance and of alumnae authorship, written with the Semi-Centennial as its inspiration.

Through Miss McKinney and Fannie G. (Mayson) Donaldson have come suggestions for conducting a poetry contest among alumnae to secure many poems about Agnes Scott and to make the selection of the one mentioned for the July, 1940, Quarterly. To many of you no better appeal can be made than through the medium of the Quarterly, and it is to you particularly that this page is addressed.

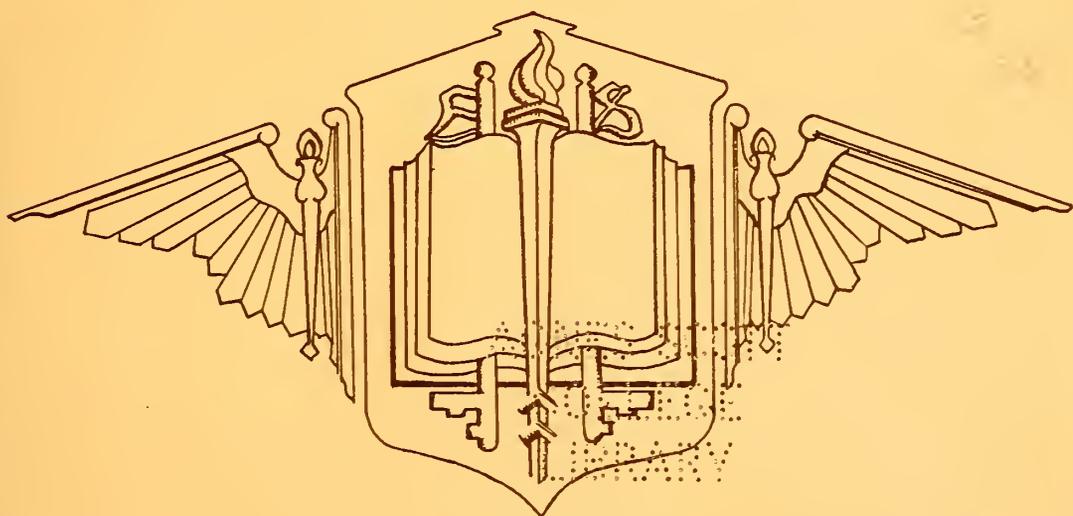

Our college is rich in physical beauty. Pictures of the May Day Dell and the silhouetted tower of Main and lesser images were stamped on impressionable minds and stamped indelibly into those memories. Beyond the physical, Agnes Scott is possessed of a wealth of traditions commemorative with Investiture, Book Burning, and lesser occasions. And beyond the campus and the ceremonies stand the well loved personalities who have guided the policies and shaped the destiny of the college. In the hush of the Main parlor is the little lady whose name was given new meaning and lustre by the son who gave it to our institution. And nearby is that other gentle lady whose strength and sweetness are real on canvas for all generations of freshmen to see and for all alumnae of the present to remember. And in Buttrick is the whimsical gentlemen in grey, whose eyes seem to flicker and whose lips beneath their white mustache seem about to smack out an affectionate "doctor" to the younger man who regards him with unequivocal poise from the canvas opposite.

Yes, all of these pictures have been and are there for us. And as the artist has captured through photograph and portrait something of these timeless images for all of us, it is hoped that we of ourselves may capture much with pen and paper and through the reading of alumnae poems give posterity "a safe kept memory of a lovely thing."

The cool of some summer haven and the leisure the season enforces should find your particular Muse attuned to your images and our suggestion. But should your imagination require some anchor of fact, of tradition or personality, please write and give me the opportunity of doing a little research for you. I shall be awaiting your entry eagerly.

The Alumnae Week-End Committee is offering a novel program this year which it hopes will appeal to the alumnae. For some years we have had the usual subjects, such as the arts, literature, sciences, and current events. This program makes use of some very interesting newspaper personalities who are available from nearby papers and we present for your enjoyment the newspaper slant on matters. The committee extends its heartiest wishes for your return for this program and for your pleasure when you come.

COME AND "SEE BY THE PAPERS"!

"EVER BEEN TO AN ALUMNAE WEEK-END?"

ARAMINTA (EDWARDS) PATE, '25

Chairman of Alumnae Week-End Committee

The Alumnae Week-End Committee, using a great deal of local talent, will launch its program this year by presenting at chapel exercises, Friday, November 18th, at 10 A. M., Evelyn Hanna, author of "Blackberry Winter," currently popular novel of the South. Many Agnes Scott alumnae will remember Evelyn in the class of 1923 and have probably been reading with a great feeling of reflected glory the splendid press reviews her book is receiving.

Kenneth A. Fowler, in the New York Herald Tribune, speaking of the "sweep and power of the book," continues by saying, "The splendor of this book is dark like the lives of its people, dark like the blown smoke of the Merriman Cotton Mill, but shot through now and then with leaping sparks of gold." In concluding his estimate of Evelyn's ability, Mr. Fowler tells us, "Evelyn Hanna is no stinting dilettante, pinching of beauty, sparring of words. What she does she does abundantly, with a careless spendthrift largess, crowding her pages with a wealth of character and carrying her story through the period covered by the years 1800-1870."

Following Evelyn Hanna, all of the speakers with the exception of Carrie Scandrett will be newspaper men. It can be said that the theme for the alumnae week-end this year will be not only "world events as seen through the newspaper man's eyes," but "the importance of the press in the lives of its readers."

Herbert Porter, Publisher of the Atlanta Georgian, will talk from 10:30 to 11:30 A. M., Friday, the title of his address being "Responsibility of the Press Toward the General Public." His subject will cover in large measure the general idea of the program and will lay the foundation for the more special subjects to follow. Mr. Porter stands not only at the top in his profession in Atlanta, but is greatly sought after as a speaker.

Following Mr. Porter in the hour from 11:30 to 12:30, Ralph Jones, Associate Editor of the Constitution, will be presented to the audience. His talk, "Letters to an Editor's Desk," bids fair to be not only instructive but amusing. His column "Silhouettes" is read daily by a large following who enjoy his philosophic comments upon the passing scene. Many of his verses in this same column are considered quite clever and original.

Following Mr. Jones will be the luncheon in the dining room to which all alumnae are invited as guests. At the conclusion of lunch, Carrie Scandrett, new Dean of Students, will give a general survey of news of the College.

Saturday's program will start at 10 o'clock in the morning with a program of music by the Agnes Scott Ensemble. For those of you who are unfamiliar with the workings of the Ensemble, a word should be said about its make-up. It is composed of both students and faculty who have worked together under the direction of Mr. C. W. Dieckmann. They have already started practicing for their performance and from comment here and there, their program will be one of the outstanding features of the week-end.

At 10:30, following the Ensemble, Ralph McGill will talk on his European travels. Mr. McGill, who is Executive Editor of the Constitution, only recently returned from studying in Scandinavia and traveling in the European countries which are so much in the news today. The Week-End Committee is particularly proud that Mr. McGill will be with us, for he is considered not only one of the most widely read newspaper men in the city, but also one of the cleverest and most promising.

Next, from 11:30 to 12:30, Tarleton Collier will be the speaker and will be presented as the writer whose column, "Behind the Headlines," appears daily in the Atlanta Georgian. Many authorities consider his column a fine example of intellectual journalism combined with a deep insight into the meanings behind many present day problems. Mr. Collier is considered one of the brilliant journalists in Atlanta.

Following Mr. Collier's talk, many groups will no doubt plan to have lunch together in the Tea House. Lunch will be served at a moderate price and there will be no definite seating arrangement. In the past, many have found this hour a time for informal conversation and the renewing of old friendships. The afternoon will be free of any planned entertainment. There will be a performance of Blackfriars in Bucher Scott auditorium that night at 8 o'clock. This will be under the direction of Miss Gooch and will be the final event of the Alumnae Week-End.

Some of the Decatur and Atlanta alumnae have already decided that the Alumnae Week-End will be an ideal time to have old Agnes Scott friends visit them. Other alumnae, who do not have close friends living in Atlanta and vicinity, can make reservations in the Alumnae House by writing Fannie G. Donaldson. The Alumnae Association is expecting a large group of its out-of-towners back.

The committee offers each of you the planned events of the week-end; old friends among your classmates and faculty; and the everchanging scene on the campus itself. Under the able direction of Dr. McCain, there has been continual progress and constant growth. If you haven't been back for a number of years, breath-taking surprises await you.

From Two Presidents

"OUR GIRLS"

Every student who has attended Agnes Scott, whether as Decatur Female Seminary or Agnes Scott Institute or Agnes Scott Academy or Agnes Scott College, and whether or not a graduate, is always given a hearty welcome to our campus. As the father of six children, some of whom are scattered, I feel a warm glow of happiness when we may have the whole McCain tribe (including a grandson) around the family table, and can clasp hands to make a real family circle. We are longing for just such an experience in our Agnes Scott family for next Commencement.

We have a large number of College daughters as we approach our fiftieth anniversary, and a remarkably fine group of "granddaughters," also. At the next Commencement season, we are hoping to have so many of our wandering daughters and our local ones that we may clasp hands and make a circle big enough to enclose all of the present Agnes Scott buildings. We are hoping to make the exercises of Commencement the most interesting we have had for many years. We are planning not to ask for money on this occasion. We are hoping very earnestly that Miss Hopkins may come back and Miss Louise McKinney and Dr. Mary F. Sweet and Miss Lillian S. Smith and others who are away from us just now, so that we may have a grand and glorious occasion in many ways.

Full details will be sent later, either through the Alumnae Quarterly or directly by mail. I am giving this notice now, so that you may put on your calendar, for this special Homecoming, June 2-6.

Cordially,
J. R. MCCAIN,
President.

ALUMNAE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Dear Alumnae:

This year Agnes Scott opens for her fiftieth session with a student body of approximately 500. Moreover this year's student body is the most carefully selected in the school history. Although space was available for only 175 new students more than 3,000 made application or were specifically recommended for freshman commission. From this large number Agnes Scott chose her students. Such a condition didn't "just happen" at the College, but is the result of 50 years growth in building up a good reputation. It must be gratifying to all those who have labored to put Agnes Scott in the position she now holds. Not all colleges enjoy this privilege. It's unique, to say the least. Back in the "olden days" when some of us were girls, Agnes Scott couldn't be so "choosy" about her students. In the first place she had yet to win recognition from other institutions of higher learning for women. In the second place the young women of the South had not fully aroused to the importance of a college training, nor were they academically prepared for the heavy courses Agnes Scott sought to offer. However, this is just between us! And with space at Agnes Scott at such a premium today we can hold our heads still higher for it means more and more each day to be a graduate of an institution that can pick and choose its "daughters."

For 50 years Agnes Scott has been making for herself a

ANNE (HART) EQUEN, '21

"place in the sun." For just as many years she has been giving to young women an opportunity to make their places in the world. Today she ranks with the best universities in this country and her graduates experience no difficulty in adjusting themselves to life. Therein lies her greatness. For what is the good of higher education if it does not lead to a richer, happier way of living?

There's hardly a state in the union where loyal "Agnes Scotters" are not to be found, but particularly dear is this College to Georgia. Here may be found her "daughters" in largest numbers. She is the pride of the South. All that the Southern gentlewoman cherishes is to be found within her walls. She is the South at its best.

Maybe all this sounds like boasting, coming as it does from an Agnes Scott graduate, but then it's all in the family! Anyway it's quite proper to say pleasant things on birthdays, and this is Agnes Scott's fiftieth anniversary. Moreover it wouldn't be right to let our Alma Mater's birthday go by unnoticed, so this is an appeal to all alumnae, wherever you may be, to come back to College at Commencement time and help us celebrate. Let's make this the greatest Commencement in the College history. Wonderful plans are under way to make you have a good time. No stone is to be left unturned to make you enjoy yourself. Decide now to attend. Let nothing prevent you from taking part in all the festivities for it's to be your party.

MISS NANNETTE HOPKINS RESIGNS AS DEAN

Probably no other single statement as a headline could bring sorrow to so many alumnae, for Miss Hopkins was during almost fifty years of service the first contact for the girls who came as freshmen and the memory of her welcome and her good-bye as her girls left the portals of Agnes Scott is a very real and very dear one.

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Agnes Scott College, held in Atlanta on September 7th, her resignation as Dean of the College was presented and very reluctantly accepted. For at least ten years, she has been suggesting retirement, but each time the proposal has been rejected.

Miss Hopkins has been blessed with unusual health, and until last autumn had not missed a day from her desk in more than nine years. She is not ill now, and is able to engage in the routine of home life and to ride each day, but her physicians feel that it would be unwise for her to assume the heavy duties of her office. We were entirely willing to lighten her duties or to have her live on the campus without assuming such a responsibility, but she would not listen to such a plan. It was only because of her special request that action about her retirement was finally taken.

She will continue to serve Agnes Scott in an advisory capacity, having been elected Dean Emeritus, and she is still a trustee of the College. We are looking forward with keen interest to having her back at Commencement of 1939 both for the Board meeting and for the Alumnae Reunion. In the meantime, she will live with her sisters in Staunton, Virginia.

Miss Hopkins has had one of the most remarkable experiences in the educational history of the South. When our College started in 1889 as Decatur Female Seminary, the trustees thought of securing a man as principal. On investigation, they found that the very best person was a woman—Miss Hopkins, and she was the first teacher ever employed by the school. She became principal in September, 1889, and continued in this capacity until 1897. When Dr. Gaines was elected president on that date, she took the position of Dean, and has held it continuously to date.

When she came, the school was only on paper—a subscription list of $5,000. It began as a day school of grammar grade level. Later it developed into the academy or high school stage, and later still into the Institute, or junior college level. In 1906, it became a college of high rank. In all of these stages of development, Miss Hopkins was at the forefront, leading and inspiring the improvements. She has arranged all of the assigning of rooms and roommates for our 6,500 students. She has administered all the social regulations from the days when she had to see personally that every girl wore her flannel petticoat and rubbers to the present when clothes are not the major problem of the Dean's office.

Miss Hopkins has exercised the greatest single influence in the history of Agnes Scott. She has served longer than any other person, and has been at the very heart of the influences that mould character and determine ideals.

The following excerpt from the DeKalb New Era published on September 15th pays high but deserved tribute to Miss Hopkins:

"Decatur and DeKalb County have had many high and outstanding men and women in the past, but it would be impossible to imagine any of them, even in the richness and influence of their honored lives, remotely approaching in their influence on others the life of Miss Hopkins. Theoretically she has left the College but actually she will live on there for untold decades. For an indefinite time many phases and facts in the existence of Agnes Scott will be a perpetual monument to this great and loving woman. The lives of women throughout the world, influenced for good by her, are but other living reminders of what a loyal, conscientious Christian life can do. That influence will survive we are quite sure for generations. The citizens of Decatur are glad that we have had the privilege of knowing her and seeing her work through the years and we speak the voice of all when we wish for her many more years of enjoyment of a quiet life in her retirement."

The Trustees found that it was impossible to replace Miss Hopkins with one person, and so the problem was settled by dividing the work into two divisions, creating the position—Dean of the Faculty, and another, Dean of Students.

Professor S. G. Stukes, connected with Agnes Scott since 1914, was elected Dean of the Faculty. As Registrar, he has exercised great influence for a number of years in the life of the College; and, as Professor of Philosophy, he has been a favorite teacher. He is a graduate of Davidson College, Princeton University, and Princeton Theological Seminary, and studied extensively at Yale and at Columbia University. During the World War, he was instructor in aviation for the United States army. He has long been prominent in the civic and religious life of Georgia and the South.

Carrie Scandrett was elected Dean of Students. She has been Assistant Dean for a number of years, and has been very efficient and much beloved. She is a graduate of Agnes Scott, being in the Class of 1924. During her senior year, she was President of the Student Government Association, and she made one of the best executives that office has ever had. She took her Master's degree at Columbia University. She has also served as Assistant Dean at Syracuse University.

Commencement time has always been the time when returning alumnae looked forward eagerly to seeing and being greeted by Miss Hopkins in her office on the first floor of Main and Miss Hopkins also enjoyed these homecomings. No one appreciated more keenly the reminiscences of the alumnae, their tales which invariably grew the better for the telling, of their days at Agnes Scott, from those who could tell of midnight serenades of the Decatur boys under the windows of Main or of the shopping expeditions to Atlanta in those early days when nervous faculty chaperoned groups of girls and attempted to keep a watchful eye over them in the dangerous city, of the guarded walks through Decatur and to church each Sunday, down to the girls of the last few years who have to tell other interesting tales of the pranks of school days, lacking the thrills of restricted rules of early days! Many were the details which Miss Hopkins could add when some girl's memory faltered over those stories and merry was her smile as she watched the alumnae turn back the years in reviving old days and old tales.

And so another Commencement in 1939 will have as its central figure Miss Hopkins and once more alumnae from far and near will gather back at Agnes Scott to see the College, to see each other, yes—but above all to greet Miss Hopkins and to have her welcome them to the campus. Fortunate, indeed, are we who can claim this privilege and no one who can possibly arrange her household, her job or her plans will fail to be at Agnes Scott for the celebration of Miss Hopkins' fiftieth year of continuous connection with Agnes Scott and her fiftieth commencement.

Agnes Scott's Great-Great Granddaughters

J. K. Orr, Beloved Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Passes

Mr. J. K. Orr, beloved trustee of Agnes Scott College and for twenty-four years chairman of the Board of Trustees, died of a heart attack at his home in Atlanta in his eighty-second year on Sunday afternoon, September 18th, bringing to a close a long and successful life.

Mr. Orr was a native of New York City, receiving his early education in private schools there, also attending the College of the City of New York. After leaving college, he began his business career with the H. J. Libby & Co., in New York, moving a year later to Columbus, Ga., where he was associated in business with his uncle. Later he organized the J. K. Orr Shoe Company and moved his business to Atlanta in 1897, maintaining a large factory until his retirement one year ago.

Mr. Orr's influence extended far beyond the bounds of his chosen city and state. He sponsored and brought to pass the Knights Templar Foundation, a loan fund for deserving college students which has grown to five million dollars and has helped thirty thousand youths to realize their hopes for advanced education. Many institutions of learning have known him as a valued counselor and friend. He was a trustee of the Peabody School for Teachers at Nashville, Tennessee, of the Berry Schools at Rome, and for almost a quarter of a century chairman of the Agnes Scott Board. Through such connections and activities he rendered services that were south-wide and nation-wide in their usefulness.

At the opening exercises at Agnes Scott on September 21st, a service at which he was to have been present and to have spoken, Mr. George Winship, from the Board of Trustees, gave the following expression of affectionate tribute to Mr. Orr:

"Mr. J. K. Orr became interested in Agnes Scott through his friendship with Mr. S. M. Inman. On the death of Colonel George W. Scott, who was the founder of the College and Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Mr. Inman was elected to the chairmanship of the Board. His first act was to secure Mr. Orr as a fellow-worker for the Institute, as Agnes Scott was then called. Accordingly, Mr. Orr was elected a member of the Board of Trustees on February 9, 1904.

In 1914, when Mr. Inman was entering upon his last illness, he offered to pay half of the indebtedness of the College on two conditions: first, that the remainder of the debt would be entirely paid; and second, that Mr. J. K. Orr should accept the chairmanship of the Board. These conditions were fulfilled, and he became the active chairman on December 26, 1914. One of his first acts in January, 1915, was to engage the services of J. R. McCain as an assistant for Dr. F. H. Gaines, then President of the institution.

When Mr. Orr accepted the leadership of Agnes Scott, there were many difficulties to be faced. It was during the first year of the World War, and economic problems were numerous. While the money for the College indebtedness had been subscribed, it had not been paid, and the $65,000 carried heavy interest charges. Agnes Scott had received recognition as a college, but still had difficulty in securing students on account of its high standards, which were not then appreciated. Its enrollment for the first year was 271.

The endowment of the College was $175,000. Its buildings, grounds, and equipment amounted to $492,000. The total assets were only $683,000. Its salary scale was low, most of the full professors receiving only $1,000 a year.

With characteristic energy, Mr. Orr and Dr. Gaines, the President, set themselves to balance the budget, to promote the recognition of the institution throughout the country, and to increase its student attendance and its financial resources.

During the twenty-four years of Mr. Orr's leadership, a great deal has been accomplished. The reputation has been widely established. It has been put on the approved list of the Association of American Universities, and it has been granted membership in the American Association of University Women. It has received charters of Mortar Board and Phi Beta Kappa. Its work is universally recognized and accepted, both in the United States and in other countries.

The student body has reached the capacity of the plant, and is as large as the Trustees desire, having almost doubled during these years, being approximately 500 now. The faculty and officers have likewise increased, the number being approximately double what it was in 1914.

The assets of the College have increased five-fold during the twenty-four years, being now approximately $3,500,000. The buildings, grounds, and equipment total $1,700,000. The endowment is nine times what it was in 1914—$1,600,000. Most of the increase in financial strength has come through special campaigns in 1909, 1919, 1921, 1929, and 1934. In all of these efforts, Mr. Orr was either the active or the honorary chairman, and a very active participant.

During the twenty-five years of the life of the institution under its various names—Decatur Female Seminary, Agnes Scott Institute, and Agnes Scott College—there had been only 132 graduates. The classes were small, and the importance of continuing through the College to graduation was not realized. During the twenty-four years of Mr. Orr's administration, there are 1,751 College graduates whose diplomas he has signed.

Aside from helping with the material achievements, Mr. Orr has rendered notable service for Agnes Scott. His popularity in Atlanta and throughout the South, and even other sections of the country, has been freely used to advance the interests of the College. He has had the confidence of his fellow Trustees, and also oftentimes has guided deliberations through difficulties to a happy conclusion. His ready wit and good humor have often banished discouragement and pessimism.

He has been much interested in the spiritual life of the College, and has used every effort to promote right attitudes towards the finer things of life.

He has given lavishly of his time and thought. He always attended the opening exercises, the Commencement occasions, and numerous other events of the session. No speaker was more popular with students and faculty than he. At the opening exercises of Agnes Scott on September 21, he was to have addressed the audience in behalf of the Trustees, and by special request of the older students, was to talk on "Modesty." One of his favorite quotations, and one memorized by every Agnes Scott student, was the refrain: "The truest test of woman's worth, the surest sign of noble birth, is modesty."

The following resolutions were adopted by the Agnes Scott Alumnae Association:

Whereas, Joseph K. Orr, Sr., who departed this life September 18, 1938, was a beloved trustee of Agnes Scott College from 1904 until the time of his death, and served as chairman of the Board of Trustees during the last twenty-four years of that period;

Whereas, his years of service were marked by unselfishness, wisdom, untiring zeal and constant allegiance;

Whereas, by his friendly counsel and sympathetic humor

he endeared himself as a personal friend to all those whose lives he touched;

Whereas, he is missed sorely, and his absence is noted with sadness, and his passing has brought irreparable loss to Agnes Scott College;

Resolved, that the Alumnae Association of Agnes Scott College send this expression of appreciation to the family of Mr. Orr, and that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Association.

Sincerely yours,

ANNE (HART) EQUEN,

President, Agnes Scott Alumnae Association.

OPENING DAY

*Again the organ sweeps across young hearts,
Uplifted eyes in awe still seek that spot
Where stately march of faculty imparts
The formal opening of Agnes Scott.
The line our own beloved Dean still leads Passes hushed aisles as fifty years before.
Symbolic colors show their learned creeds.
Bowed heads divine guidance now seek once more.
The chairman brings the Trustees' counsel clear:
Saint Peter's motto on your hearts engrave
To emulate the founder's Mother dear,
Add to your faith, knowledge and virtue brave.
In mind, her daughters who have not forgot
Assemble there to honor Agnes Scott.*

ELIZABETH (WOLTZ) CURRIE, '25.

CAMPUS NEWS and OFFICE NOTES

The 50th Commencement at Agnes Scott, 1939

Now that Dr. McCain and Anne (Hart) Equen have welcomed you back for reunion time, we beg our chance to tell you some more about it.

It has been decided that this commencement shall be the alumnae's celebration rather than the following one, which will close the Semi-Centennial year. Although alumnae will be as welcome as the proverbial flowers in May at that 1940 one, this is the one when everything is yours!

If you will turn now to the inside back cover of this issue, you will notice that to the usual number of classes which would celebrate their reunions this coming June, according to the Dix system, have been added all classes which are celebrating their five, ten, twenty, etc., years, and, in addition to them, the first class to graduate, the class of 1893. The two members of this class are Mary (Barnett) Martin of Clinton, S. C., and Mary (Mack) Ardrey of Fort Mills, S. C., and we are hoping that we all may have the pleasure and honor of knowing these two first graduates of Agnes Scott at this coming commencement.

And now a word to all alumnae! Whether this is your year according to anybody's system, this is a very special invitation to every alumna to come to the 1939 commencement at Agnes Scott. We want you of every class, graduates and non-graduates, all of those who love Agnes Scott and wish to see her celebrate her fiftieth commencement.

Miss Hopkins is to be back with us for this celebration, which will be her fiftieth commencement at Agnes Scott and she is our most honored guest on this occasion—although none of us can call Miss Hopkins a guest for she is Agnes Scott itself to us! We want all of "her girls" back to honor her and we know they will want to be here on this great occasion.

The program of regular events will be enlarged; there are many plans afoot, not quite ready for publication yet, but we assure you that never until that centennial one will you be able to have such a round of entertainment and edification as will be offered at this commencement. As soon as possible the complete program and, if possible, the speakers' names will be given to you but, just between ourselves, does that matter?

Much planning is to be done to make all alumnae comfortable, to see that they are housed and met and entertained and to that end, we hope that even now you will begin writing in to the Alumnae Office that you and your friends to the number of such-and-such will be back and that you want to be enrolled now for that event. Don't wait for the other fellow to write you; do what many are already doing, write your friends and tell them that great doings are ahead and how about meeting at Agnes Scott on June 2nd for that biggest and best commencement yet celebrated at your college?

Faculty Changes

Many changes in the faculty have taken place this year. Margaret Phythian of the French Department has returned after her two years' leave of absence spent in studying at the University of Grenoble, France. Miss Kathryn Glick, formerly of the faculty of Wilson College, Penn., is a new member of the Latin Department. Miss Mildred R. Mell, who has been a teacher and Dean at Shorter College, Ga., is in the Economics Department.

Miss Laura Colvin is back with her Masters in Library Science from the University of Michigan. Another addition to the staff of the library is Miss Evelyn Houck, a graduate of the Emory University Library School.

Several Agnes Scott graduates are among the new teaching and administrative members. Charlotte Hunter, '29, is the assistant in the Dean's office. Ann Worthy Johnson, '38, is in charge of the Book Store and the mail room. Jeanne Matthews, '38, is a fellow in Biology. Laura Steele, '37, a former editor of The Agonistic, is a secretary to the President.

Miss Jessie Harriss heads the Dietetic staff with Miss Mildred McElreath as her assistant. Mrs. Margaret Hartsook is assisting the dietitians. Mrs. Roy Smith is in charge of the residences.

In Memoriam

Martha Stansfield, '21, died at Tampa, Florida, on June 23, 1938. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. J. M. Stansfield, and two brothers, Harold and William, all of Tampa. She was connected with the Latin department at Agnes Scott from her graduation until her death, and was then associate professor of Latin and Greek. Martha received her doctorate at the University of Chicago in 1932, where she has also served as a Fellow.

But the account of her honors and her work is only part of any attempt to honor Martha Stansfield. She had served the College and the Alumnae Association in many and varied ways and in every one of these duties she always showed such a high sense of responsibility and loyalty that the memory of her years on the campus will be treasured ones for her associates in the faculty and alumnae groups. No position, whether great or small, but received, when it was her responsibility, the best and promptest attention.

But not even the story of her devoted work at her College begins to round out the history of her life, for to her many, many friends the memory which will linger ever is of her sweet and thoughtful nature. Her days were filled with little attentions to her friends who were sick or who were celebrating birthdays or to those who were in distress or sorrow. Her faithfulness to her church in Decatur was also one of her great qualities. Her friendship was a cherished possession of her friends and their loss is the greater for having had this experience of a truly unselfish and thoughtful friend.

Our sympathies are extended to Martha's mother and to her brothers and we assure them that our sorrow is great in the loss which is theirs.

Alumnae Books

"Blackberry Winter," Evelyn Hanna; C. D. Dutton & Co., New York.

Evelyn Hanna, ex-'23, has entered the ranks of our alumnae authors with her first book, "Blackberry Winter," which is receiving high praise from all. We quote from the New York Times Book Review: "The Civil War plays a very different part in Evelyn Hanna's novel than in Margaret Mitchell's. It is not central to the story, rather it concludes the destruction which was, perhaps, already implicit in the character of the Merriman family, whose ruin and fall she describes. . . . "Blackberry Winter" has a rather more solid intellectual content, is packed with dramatic action. . . . It remains an able and brilliantly embroidered piece of story telling which will probably find plenty of enthusiastic readers."

"A Study Guide to Biology and Southern Wild Life," McCallie and Cooper; Franklin Printing Corporation, Publishers, Atlanta, Ga.

Edith McCallie, '23, and Belle Cooper, '18, collaborated in the writing of this work book and we quote from a review of this edition in the Georgia Educational Journal: "The authors are both masters in their field and have produced a work book that will be of immeasurable value to classes engaged in this subject. The book is built up from actual experience, providing for the teacher a guide that will be a time saver and therefore of tremendous service. At the same time, the questions, which are arranged in work book fashion, are simple and clear and will serve as an aid to the pupil. The drawings of the wild flower life of the Atlanta area and the common protozoa are the work of one of the co-authors, Miss Cooper. In the closing pages of the book there are included tables of the food value of some of our common foods, a listing of Georgia Health Facts, which will be of interest to teachers and pupils."

"Memo to Timothy Sheldon," Marian Sims; J. B. Lippincott Co., Publishers, Philadelphia, Penn.

Marian (McCamy) Sims, '20, has just had her fourth book published and it has been most favorably received by the critics. Some of the criticisms are: "Mrs. Sims writes briskly, with humor, verve and understanding . . . She has the gift of evoking the poignancy and meaning of simple incidents. . . She has also the gift for making people human and alive and very likeable." "Marian Sims should be a popular and successful novelist; the growth manifested in her books suggests that she will also be very much more so."—New York Tribune.

Her story of the problem which confronts Lynn Sheldon "is one of the duality of human nature. . . . Marian Sims handles the subject thoughtfully but with an uncompromising honesty."

The "New" Agnes Scott!

From the student viewpoint:

(Quoted from the Agonistic)

"Yes'm, this is what I call the NEW Agnes Scott!" So says Ella and so are we all convinced! Of course it had to begin some time, but what a pity the freshmen couldn't have had the privilege of seeing it both before and after! They would appreciate it all the more, but certainly that new cheerfully cream-colored lobby of Inman could hardly draw any more exclamations of wonder under any circumstances. Even Dr. McCain was heard to exclaim "My, it's rather yellow!" And then along came Miss Gooch and diaphragmatically breathed, "My heavens, it's rather striking!" And so it is, n'est-ce pas?

But of all the changes that have stunned the world since the fall of the Roman Empire, undoubtedly the new dining room innovations are the most appalling—from the ivy on the walls right on down to the itsy-bitsy coffee spoons. Grace Ward, the social success of Gaines Cottage, objects to the sugar spoons because they are too large to stir the demi-tasse. And it seems the iced tea coasters are causing quite a sensation—Mrs. Smith overheard one of the waiters discussing the "gliders" with one of the other boys.

Can you imagine why the crowds at the reception were densest around Mrs. Smith and the new dietitians? I even heard one grateful Hottentot say she felt mean giving them just a mere handshake, she wanted to brave the madding crowd and give them all "a great big hug."

Just one thing hurts us though. They say that absence makes the heart grow fonder, so I guess we will continue to love the dear old moose head in Rebekah lobby in increasing proportion, even though it has gone the way of all flesh! Ditto the hat rack in the hall of Main!

Oh, well, life may be boring for a termite, but there's never a dull moment for us any more—not so long as going to meals is more fun than going to town and so long as such startling things as new brooms are being introduced into our rooms!"

* * *

And as an alumna sees it:

"Yes, this is what we call a new Agnes Scott," says us, agreeing with Ella and the rest of the campus. It doesn't seem quite the same place but we must admit that we like it even more than the students!

The tendency toward a more gracious manner of living is making itself strongly felt at Agnes Scott. From the innovations in the dining room to the new faculty furniture we can see it. Having an official hostess for each dining room in addition to the faculty and senior hostesses at each table makes for greater hospitality toward visitors and more efficient service for every table. The omission of the hand bell before meals lends more dignity to the occasion, and the wonderful food with the new china and excellent service makes us feel as if we're at the Biltmore. We really don't need the hand bell, for everybody is so anxious to see what we're going to have for dinner that they get there ahead of time! Can you imagine roast duck with cranberry sauce, and watercress salad for Wednesday night dinner? Even the best steak of yesteryear has lost some of its charm by comparison. And the demi-tasse is just too good to be true! Every menu is perfect in itself, and some of the girls with matrimony in the back of their heads have started writing down each day's menus for future reference.

The new faculty furniture is grand! An old world knee-hole desk with a Windsor chair, a beautiful walnut dresser with three large drawers, a studio bed, a Windsor arm chair and all the trimmings are making the faculty who live off the campus positively jealous. What with the excellent cuisine our Alma Mater advertises these days, and the beautiful rooms, faculty rooms are renting at a premium! It isn't altogether internal improvements that are delighting the faculty, either, because all of the Candler Street cottages have been painted white, the same shade too, and the row of faculty houses is most impressive.

One of the new luxuries to which we aren't yet accustomed is the pressing room in the basement of Main. Mimie, laundress-de-luxe of by-gone days, has been given a position as presser for the community. For the insignificant sum of one nickel she will press a plain dress, and even the most elaborate evening gown will get attention for 15c, which means no more Wednesday night rush for the ironing board. Lingerie and hose and even blouses and sweaters can be washed and ironed, one day service usually, and picked up by you in time to pack your bag for the week-end migration.

Agnes Scott has started the fiftieth year with a bang, and we hope that each succeeding year will bring even more improvements.

Tune In On Your Radio For A. S. C.

The radio committee, Ellen Douglass Leyburn, chairman, is anxious to establish closer touch with all the alumnae who are within reach of the station, WSB. The hour of the broadcast is to be 4:45 o'clock each Thursday afternoon.

We are calling these programs "Campus Silhouettes," with the idea of trying to bring to you and to the general public actual Agnes Scott personalities and through them some immediate contact with what is going on at the College. The emphasis in the fall is to be academic; in the winter students will be presented in characteristic activities; and in the spring we shall call upon various ones of our own alumnae who are engaged in interesting undertakings.

Carrie Phinney Latimer, '36, is to be the announcer and she and Jeanne Flynt, '39, will appear on most of the programs in the characters of the senior sponsor and the freshman to whom the campus silhouettes are being shown.

If you will listen to the programs and let us know what you think of them, we shall greatly appreciate your interest and suggestions. Your writing us in care of WSB, Atlanta Biltmore, Atlanta, Ga., will be a real service to the College as emphasizing the importance of Agnes Scott in the eyes of those who control the station.

Silhouettes for the fall are:

October 6: Dr. McCain.

October 13: Miss Alexander.

October 20: Miss Florence Smith.

October 27: Dr. Hayes.

November 3: Miss MacDougall.

November 10: Miss Gaylord.

November 17: Miss Harn.

November 22: Miss Dexter, Miss Omwake.

December 1: Miss Phythian.

December 8: Dr. Raper.

Have You Written That Poem Yet?

Dear Alumnae:

The response to my appeal for poems in honor of Agnes Scott's Semi-Centennial has been gratifying as to quality if not overwhelming as to quantity. We are publishing in this issue the fine sonnet Elizabeth Woltz Currie, '25, submitted, and hope that it will serve as an inspiration to many of you in your own writing.

The College has decided to make the year 1938-1939 the official celebration of the Semi-Centennial for the alumnae. To give our full cooperation to this change in plans, it is necessary to set the deadline for our poetry contest as Commencement of 1939, although the poems selected will be used in alumnae publications throughout the following session and the original idea of publishing the prize winning poem in the July, 1940, Quarterly will be adhered to.

Please, alumnae, rally. Surely each of you from time to time runs across a college publication or a campus picture that rekindles memories of happy hours and beloved people. Let us have your thoughts on these.

With cordial good wishes and the hope of hearing from many of you soon, I am,

Sincerely yours,
DOROTHY (HUTTON) MOUNT.
(Mrs. J. Edward Mount)
124 East 84th Street,
New York City.

Mrs. Alma Sydenstricker, Chautauqua Speaker

Mrs. Alma Sydenstricker of the Bible Department of Agnes Scott was among the distinguished speakers at Chautauqua this summer. She spoke on "Some Ancient and Forgotten Lore of India," which has a very intriguing sound.

Among the other speakers on this program were: Miss Emily Louise Plumley, vice-chairman of the Board of Trustees of the General Federation of Clubs; Dr. Josephine L. Pierce; Mrs. Victoria Booth Demarest; Dr. Ben Graham; Miss Mary Frances Bestor, Department of Child Study, Vassar College; Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Sir Herbert Ames, who has often been a speaker on the Agnes Scott campus; and many other speakers of note.

HARRISON HUT OPENED

This delightful place near by to the campus affords an ideal retreat for the girls to go for the planning of campus activities or for a week-end of fun and camp life. The above picture, which appeared in the Sunday American of Atlanta, Ga., was one taken when the members of the Student Government Association met at the beginning of school to chart freshmen orientation. Conveniently located in the woods behind the campus, and free from the disadvantage of distance which the former Stone Mountain camp suffered, the cabin is making a place for itself in the life of the students.

The new camp has been named the George W. Harrison, Jr. Hut, as a memorial to Mr. Harrison, who left Agnes Scott twenty thousand dollars in his will. Originally built by Frances Kennedy, ex-'22, now Mrs. J. Frank Kelly, the hut is suitable for afternoon or evening parties of campus organizations or for independent groups of girls.

Rules for the use of the camp will soon be announced and a small fee is charged for use of the camp to provide equipment supplementary to that given by the College. Among the early improvements planned is construction of a shelter for outdoor cooking.

Is Your Alumnae Club a Satisfactory Organization?

Let's talk about alumnae clubs, their problems, their prospects, and their plans. The Alumnae Office knows that each locality has its own particular problems and ambitions and that we can only be of the most indefinite assistance to the clubs but at the risk of boring the club officers who have been functioning successfully for the past years, we proceed!

The local club bears a relationship to its own membership and community, to the College, and to the Alumnae Association. What can be done to strengthen these relationships and aid the club in meeting these responsibilities as regards the Alumnae Office? The Office can furnish a correct list for the clubs, can keep the members informed about college activities (for the informed alumna is the interested alumna) through the securing of speakers from the campus for club meetings, when requested, or through letters prepared for the meetings filled with college happenings, through a suggested program of study or projects, if desired. Of course, the Alumnae Quarterly brings to the clubs pages of information about the College and alumnae events, such as Alumnae Week-End, Founder's Day, Commencement, etc.

What can the alumnae clubs do to meet this three-fold relationship?

1. One of the most worthwhile services in relation to the College is that of keeping Agnes Scott in the eye of the public in the towns where clubs are organized. Good newspaper notices of meetings are well worth the effort as publicity, pictures of the new officers attract attention of the general public to our college alumnae of the town. Outstanding events at Agnes Scott can be used as articles for the papers in the towns with much advantage to the College. And, above all these, the service which the clubs can render in interesting the best students of the towns in Agnes Scott is not to be estimated. Teas for seniors in high schools, bulletin boards of Agnes Scott material in the schools, personal contacts with the girls whom alumnae would like to see come to their College, participation in College Day in the local high schools—all these and many more plans will be invaluable to Agnes Scott.

2. Keep your own club members informed about the College by keeping in touch with the Alumnae Office, arranging meetings, if possible, when faculty members can be your guests, discussing at club meetings general College affairs, such as plans for the Semi-Centennial, new buildings, etc. See that copies of the Alumnae Quarterly are available at each meeting for the perusal of alumnae who may not take it. Remember that, for many of your members, your club is the social contact in a new city and that you have a wonderful opportunity to make them happy as they meet other Agnes Scotters. The responsibility of the club to its members is of prime importance for only as they enjoy the meetings and the alumnae contacts will the club grow and prosper.

3. The alumnae clubs are the backbone of the Alumnae Association. Through their support, the new furnishings for the Alumnae House are bought; the Alumnae Garden is dependent in a large measure for its continued beauty on their financial help, as well as their gifts of plants. The linens of the House and Tea Room are mainly contributed by the clubs. It is to the clubs that the Alumnae Association looks when it is planning for the Founder's Day dinners and teas for it knows that the efforts of these groups for meetings at that time make for the real success of the broadcast and the celebration. If the club president could assign one meeting a year at least to a resumé of the work of the General Alumnae Association, its committees, its need of paid members, its Quarterly, its House and Garden, we feel sure that much good could be accomplished in enlarging the number of paid members and in the general interest in the Association. So much of the time, it seems an intangible, not very well understood organization and sometimes the interest in the local clubs seems sufficient to many very loyal alumnae because they do not understand the large field which the program of the Alumnae Association covers.

And having talked and talked, we close with the remark that each group of officers can probably work out the problems in each club much better than a distant alumnae secretary can suggest! But so often the Alumnae Office is asked by club officers just what are the duties and expectations of the clubs that it seemed an appropriate time, since the year is just beginning, to outline some of the aims from the General Alumnae Association's standpoint.

American Association of University Women GRADUATE FELLOWSHIPS FOR 1939-40

These fellowships are awarded in general to candidates who have completed two years of residence work for the Ph.D. degree or who have already received the degree. The greatest importance is attached to the project on which the candidate wishes to work, its significance, and the evidence of the candidate's ability to pursue it. Applications and supporting materials must reach the office in Washington by December 15, 1938.

These fellowships come under two main headings:

I. National Fellowships: Fellowships open to American women for study in the United States or abroad.

II. International Fellowships: A fellowship for a Latin American woman to study in the United States, and fellowships open to members of the International Federation of University Women.

I. NATIONAL

The Fellowship Crusade National Fellowship of $1,500, for graduate study or research.

Dorothy Bridgman Atkinson Fellowship of $1,500, limited to the arts, sciences, and literature.

Lecture Association Announces Program

The Agnes Scott Student Lecture Association announced the following lectures on their program for the year:

"Four Hundred Years of the English Bible," by Dr. Edgar J. Goodspeed, on November 10, and "The Art of Biography," by Andre Maurois, on March 27.

Dr. Goodspeed has taught the New Testament for many years at Chicago. He is best known for his "The New Testament, an American Translation," published in 1923. His most recent books are "The Story of the Bible," "New Chapters in New Testament Study," "An Introduction to the New Testament," and "The Curse in the Colophon," which is a study of manuscript hunting. In 1927 he found in Paris the most richly miniaturesd Greek New Testament yet discovered, which he and his colleagues published as "The Rockefeller-McCormick New Testament." He has been a frequent contributor to the Atlantic Monthly.

Andre Maurois, famous French biographer and novelist, has just been elected to the French Academy. He is a member of the London Legion of Honor, is a Commander Order of the British Empire, and has honorary doctors' degrees from Edinburgh and Princeton. He is famous for his biographies of Disraeli, Dickens, Byron, Voltaire, and Shelley, but is equally respected for his ability to write novels. He believes that the new biography should differ from the old, and he wants to build them into works of art, something that is alive.

In line with the policy of the Lecture Association to get only the best for lecturers, negotiations with other speakers in the same class are in progress and the next Quarterly will carry announcements about further programs.

Virginia Montgomery, from China, made the highest score of fifty-one out of a possible sixty in the freshman math placement tests given this year for the first time.

The test that was used was the same as that given to new students in nearly every college in Georgia and in many colleges in several states.

All of the scores were much better than the math department expected, ranging from ten to fifty-one, with a median grade of twenty-eight. This median is exceedingly high and is expected to compare favorably with the scores obtained from other colleges. In all probability there will be similar placement tests in the future.

Alumnae Quarterly Art Editor

The Alumnae Office is very much indebted to Leone (Bowers) Hamilton, '26, for the beautiful cover design on the front of this issue and we are delighted to be able to announce that she will work out similar designs for the three other issues of this year. This design is similar to the book plate which Leone worked out for the Agnes Scott Library and is from the seal used over the entrance doors of Buttrick. The Quarterly editors have enjoyed the guidance of this talented alumna for several years in planning the covers of the magazine and we are glad to have this opportunity of acknowledging our debt to her not only for her assistance in the coming year but for many years past.

That First Reunion at Thanksgiving for '38!

Thanksgiving this year to the members of the class of '38 is a very special Thanksgiving from any which has come before or will come after, for it is at this time that all the seniors of June will come back for the first time to the campus as alumnae at reunion. This custom of a unique fall reunion for the baby class of alumnae is entirely Agnes Scott's idea and came about because so many first-year-out alumnae wanted to come back at Thanksgiving any way for the first visit and this dinner which is held in the Alumnae House was made a feature of that week-end to give them a chance to get together for one good old time session gathered around the dinner table as of yore!

Eliza King will be writing you all and local alumnae of your class will have charge of the plans here but this is just to invite you to come back to Agnes Scott for that week-end and to make reservations by phone or letter with the Alumnae Office for that grand get-together dinner in the Alumnae House, Friday evening, November 25th, at 6:45 P. M. And knowing that whether we dress or not is always the question to the female of the species, we'll state some do and some do not, depending probably on which is newest, the street or the evening ensemble! There will be a lovely table with soft candle light, good food, all the latest bits of gossip freely distributed, and if the class feels in a singing mood, you'll have the Tea House to yourself by that time and can make the rafters ring.

And did we mention that the dinner will be eighty cents? And it will be a real Thanksgiving dinner, we promise!

Co-Recreation For Girls and Dates!

One of the most interesting features of the "new" Agnes Scott is the co-recreation program sponsored by the Athletic Association and the Physical Education Department. Heretofore the Tennis Club has had the privilege of inviting dates out for afternoon games in tennis on the college courts; the Outing Club has gone on hikes with the men and women in the Appalachian Trail Club; but this is the first definite step that has been taken toward building a regular program around sports together.

The Murphey Candler Building has rescued many a puzzled damsel with an answer for the "what to do with the Saturday night date when you stay on the campus" question. The interesting evenings that are spent there playing ping-pong, bridge, or checkers and roasting marshmallows or making fudge have given just the proper background for making time with the Tech and Emory boys. The gym is giving the girls a real help though, by sponsoring Saturday night recreation hours. Bowling, badminton, table and deck tennis, darts and aerial darts will furnish amusement for many a couple this winter.

Alumnae Go Back To School

A study course for alumnae has been one of the Agnes Scott Business Girls' Club projects for a number of years, but this year the course is exciting particular interest. Miss Emily Dexter, professor of psychology, is giving the first series of lectures on modern psychology.

Miss Dexter's topics include: The "New" Psychology; Physiological Bases for Behavior; Measurement; Child Psychology; Psychology of Abnormal Behavior; Psychology Applied to Law; Psychology Applied to Advertising; Getting Along with Associates; and Extra Sensory Perception (Rhine's Work at Duke University).

Miss Louise Lewis, head of the art department, will give the second half of the course, beginning a series of lectures on the history of furniture, antiques, modern furniture and interior decorating immediately after Christmas.

* * *

At a recent meeting of the senior class, Charlotte Hunter, '29, was unanimously elected sponsor for the class, to take the place of Martha Crowe, former sponsor. Little Sarah Christian, daughter of our professor of physics and astronomy, was chosen as class mascot, and Virginia Tumlin was elected secretary of the seniors.

Home Coming Commencement

Come One, Come All

JUNE 2nd---JUNE 6th

Reunion Classes of 1939 according to the Dix plan:

'04; '05; '06; '07; '23; '24; '25; '26; '38

Classes who are celebrating unusual reunion years:

'93—Oldest Graduating Class

'94—45th Reunion Year

'99—40th Reunion Year

'04—35th Reunion Year

'09—30th Reunion Year

'14—25th Reunion Year

'19—20th Reunion Year

'24—15th Reunion Year

'29—10th Reunion Year

'34—5th Reunion Year

And never forget that no matter what the year, if this year suits your plans and your desire to come back to Agnes Scott, you are most welcome as a member of the great CLASS-AT-LARGE.

This commencement is to celebrate Miss Hopkins' fiftieth year of service and the fiftieth commencement of Agnes Scott. It is to be the greatest reunion commencement of all times here, with hundreds of Miss Hopkins' "girls" back to express their love and appreciation of a half-century's record. The best plans are being made for your entertainment and comfort during reunion days and you'll hear more and more of the details as this year wears on. In the meantime, begin planning now to come. Write that old roommate that you are coming and will meet her here; start plans among your crowd for a general march on Agnes Scott in June, 1939. You'll never see another commencement like this until 1939 rolls 'round and why gamble on that?
