Excellence

by Dr. James Graham Leyburn

James Graham Leyburn, brother of Agnes Scott's late Ellen Douglass Leyburn, delivered the Founder's Day address on February 20, 1974. A distinguished sociologist, Dr. Leyburn retired in 1972 from Washington and Lee University where he had been both professor and dean. It was Dean Leyburn who, in 1951, engaged young Marvin Perry to be a member of the Department of English at W. and L. Prior to going to W. and L., he was for twenty-two years in the Department of Sociology at Yale where he rose through the ranks to a full professorship. In retirement Professor Leyburn lives at "Spring Hill," his ancestral farm near Martinsburg, West Virginia.

Twenty-five centuries ago Plato profoundly observed that "the unexamined life is not worth living." His observation makes us realize how many millions of people experience decades of mere existence. Because their lives are unexamined, they have small perception of rich possibilities they are missing. They know few exaltations of the human spirit. They do not see the worlds that lie beyond the horizon of dailiness.

If the individual who aspires to a life worth living must examine that life, it is all the more imperative that our great institutions come under examination. They provide the stage on which we play our parts; they are the background and setting for the enactment of our roles; and like other theatres, they have lives of their own. We readily acknowledge that we are personally responsible for our own individual lives; and if we are thoughtful, we examine ourselves, especially in times of crisis. Our institutions, on the other hand, are impersonal and abstract; they seem to perpetuate themselves, while we participants in them come and go. They are there, indeed, even before we are born, and they will exist when, having played our parts, we leave the stage.

Who, then, will examine the life of an institution, to see whether it is worthy? Who checks and guides it, and who holds it to its professed purposes? Our recent history has shown us the peril of leaving government unexamined for even a few months. We know, too, what can happen to the life of a corporation, a church, a city, when its policies and its methods are not constantly checked against the realities of changing circumstances.

Our colleges and universities, more than any of our other institutions, need to follow Plato's admonition, for they are, more than most institutions, protected from critical surveillance because of sentiment and affection. Whose duty, whose privilege, is it to examine the life of Agnes Scott College, to be sure that it keeps its ideals vivid and that all the means of attaining those ideals are provided? Is this examination the perquisite of your administrative officers and trustees, of your faculty, of the students, of the thousands of alumnae? As one who has spent five decades in academic institutions, and who has been not only student and alumnus, but faculty member, administrator, and trustee, I have often pondered this question of responsibility.

The glory of a college consists in the fact that it inspires loyalty in almost everyone connected with it. One is born into a nation and a local community, perhaps even into a church; our economic institutions, like our social and political ones, are externalities that are, for most people, simply "there," to be accepted. But one chooses his college. Almost every person identified with Agnes Scott, from president to freshman, from professor to dowager alumna, selected this particular institution and loves it. The college thus requires, for its well-being, the constructive concern of everyone connected with it.

If this be so, we are confronted with the fundamental question of self-examination: why does this college exist, and how does it justify itself? Has the vision of the founders in 1889 validity for Agnes Scott eighty-five years later, or do ideals change with the times? Such questions lead to larger ones. Agnes Scott is a liberal arts college; but what is the value of liberal arts in 1974? Do we merely say we believe in higher education because that affirmation is an accepted part of the American convention, and that liberal arts colleges are traditional for women?

To me, the one criterion that justifies the existence of any college is excellence; and therefore my reason for fifty years of advocacy of the liberal arts, for men and women alike, is that these conduce to excellence. Such a generalization, however much agreement it may elicit, is nebulous unless we say precisely what we mean by excellence in a college. In my opinion, we follow Plato's counsel, and discover whether the college's life is worth living, by examining the nature and uses of the liberal arts.

If I tell you the personal answers I have arrived at in my reflections on the excellence of a college, I do so, not to try to impose my answers upon you, but to invite your own self-examination, your own justification for the life of this college. Let me begin by a brief account of the people who probably lived the richest and fullest and happiest lives the world has ever known.

By common consent, the Greeks of the fifth century B.C. reached a pinnacle of civilization. For ages they have been held up as an example of what can happen when people try to live life to the fullest in all its aspects. Within a few decades — actually only two generations — the small city of Athens, about the size of St. Petersburg or Richmond, produced such men as Themistocles and Pericles, Socrates and Plato, Aeschylus and Sophocles and Euripides, Herodotus and Thucydides, Phidias, Aristophanes, and dozens of others whose names ring down the centuries. How could all this happen?

First, I think, because the Athenians had a clear ideal to strive for. They called it arete, which means "excellence in all that is admirable." They never thought it enough to be pretty good; from the time a youth started to school he was inspired to excel. Another part of the ideal was versatility. They trained their bodies; they exercised daily and strenuously (in fact, they invented the gymnasium); they played constantly (once again, they started the Olympic games, and were the first people in the world to have competitive sports). More than that, they all participated in the public affairs of Athens, as soldiers, jurors, officials chosen by yearly lot, as voters deciding public policy. It was the Athenians who first of all discovered and daily practised democracy. They loved beauty and creativity, and were supreme artists and architects: they built the Parthenon during this time.

But what makes them most memorable and admirable is the way they used their minds. They seemed to have infinite curiosity, and they discovered that intellectual exercise was by all odds the most stimulating and rewarding part of life. They were always eager to learn something new. When Herodotus came back from Egypt and Persia, the Athenians gathered daily in the agora to ask him about how these other people lived and thought. When Socrates showed up in the gymnasium, young boys left their exercise and games to query that wise man: "What really is truth, Socrates? What is beauty? What is worth living for?" Their curiosity and imagination made them the first scientists the world had known, the first men to work on the hypothesis that there might be law and order everywhere in the universe, with regularities that could be discovered and then counted upon. They also had tremendous courage of mind: they dared to be skeptical and questioning in an age of faith, and went to witness the great tragedies that challenged what had always been regarded as eternal verities.

One could go on and on about these great Greeks; but you can see why Edgar Allan Poe spoke of the glory that was Greece. It was glory — because these Athenians lived in a perfect ferment of the mind and found it exciting. Now for my point: I do not for a moment believe that these Athenians had any better minds than ours. I am certain that Agnes Scott students are quite as intelligent as Athenians of the fifth century, quite as quick and as capable; and surely you actually know far more than they did. They made an imperishable name for themselves and their little city because they exercised their minds and creative imaginations to the fullest, not content to be merely good; and because they had an ideal that inspired them to live rich personal lives, but to dedicate themselves to a superb institution, their city, their polis. And so they discovered the joy of excellence.

It is disappointing, of course, to recall that Athens had its flaws, some of which proved fatal — slavery, subordination of women, and, worst of all, susceptibility to the sin of hubris, the kind of arrogance that tempts one to believe in his own infallibility and superiority. We should like our heroes to be perfect, of course. Our immediate point, however, is not to account for the decline of Athens but to examine the causes of its greatness.

To me, the phrase "liberal arts" is a synonym for arete. Explore the varied meanings of the adjective "liberal" and the richness of the noun "arts," and we have the justification for higher education. More than that, we have the idea for the college: excellence in all that is admirable. Let us pursue our Platonic self-examination a bit further, however, by asking a specific question. If you were called upon to name the qualities that most notably characterize the "excellent" people you know, the ones who come nearest to arete in their personal lives, what virtues would be at the head of your list? Those qualities would, I think, be the ones inherent in the liberal arts and in the college that is dedicated to these arts.

Before we name the paramount components of arete, we must make a few disclaimers. First, we recognize the fact that geniuses, saints, and heroes are endowed by their Creator with special gifts, and that not even the liberal-arts college can improve upon their endowments. Next, it would be redundant to suggest that high devotion to scholarship should be the mark of a college's excellence. We take that commitment for granted in every reputable institution of learning. Still another disclaimer: little is to be gained by suggesting such an ideal as wisdom, for that admirable quality is abstruse and so subject to cultural definition that it eludes our academic cultivation.

I take the liberty of suggesting three qualities which characterize the men and women I most admire, three qualities which, therefore, I should wish upheld by any college of which I am a part. To me, these qualities are liberal and are truly arts; and they can most certainly be stimulated by higher education. My suggestions may not be yours; indeed, the cause of arete may be furnished by disagreement and argument. With proper diffidence, then, I offer my suggestions of the irreducible minimum of admirable qualities inherent in the pursuit of the liberal arts.

First, versatility. We have suggested the range of mind and spirit among the great Greeks, and we marvel at the sheer delight they took in cultivating all that they regarded as excellent. Consider other periods of history that likewise make our hearts leap with excitement, the Renaissance, for example. (Note, parenthetically, how Wordsworth's summary springs to our minds when we think of Periclean Athens or the Renaissance or any other period when the liberal arts flourish: "Bliss was it in that dawn to be alive.") We use a complimentary phrase, "the Renaissance man," to epitomize the ideal of versatility. We expect the Florentine lady and gentleman, or the Elizabethan, to respond to poetry, painting, sculpture, and drama, to ponder the great issues of religion and philosophy, to play an instrument and sing a part, to speak several languages with grace, to play games and engage in sports with vigor, to seek adventure in new worlds (both geographical and intellectual).

Perhaps most of us have known the delight of companionship with a person whose conversation ranges and stimulates, who is always ready to explore new continents of the mind, who delights in symphonies and ballet and sports, whose very personality beguiles because of its unending surprises. Such people of versatile minds seem, at least in my experience, to flourish on university campuses. Some of them are professional scholars, but many of them are drawn to the college community because of the invigorating atmosphere in which darting minds strike brilliant sparks from spirits of men and women of wit, insight, and reflection. It has been my good fortune to know a number of persons who possess in abundance this quality of arete — Arnold Toynbee, for example, and Thornton Wilder, Richard Niebuhr, and Dame Myra Hess. And certainly your own campus, with which I have been familiar for decades, has been rich in such personalities, resident and non-resident — such remarkable people as May Sarton, Robert Frost, Davie Napier, and Marvin Perry. An evening with any one of these persons may mean vicarious visits with Bach and Theocritus, Tallulah Bankhead and Kierkegaard, Gertrude Stein and Petrarch, Camus and Boulez; it may produce discussions of contemporary international politics, the last Beethoven quartettes, abstract expressionism, classical archaeology, or any number of other inspiring subjects. With old Terence, any one of these versatile people would say, "Nothing human is alien to me."

Next to versatility in my canon of excellence as a product of the liberal arts is responsibility. The Athenians gladly shouldered all the exigencies of citizenship in their dear city, their polis, because they gloried in it; but also they saw it as the arena in which they might display their arete. Here was something bigger than self to live for; and the more honor one achieved personally, the more brilliant the reputation of the city, and the prouder one was of being an Athenian. There may be higher motives for assuming responsibility. I think there are. Yet I believe that the mark of admirable persons, from the beginning of history, has always been the willing acceptance of duties, the generous assumption of obligations that need to be borne. One has only to ask whether one's true heroes are not chosen chiefly because they went far beyond the call of duty. By assuming responsibilities not actually required of them they sometimes changed the course of history, and always lifted the human spirit. Think of Abraham, of Jesus, of Luther, of Gandhi, of Martin Luther King; think of Joan of Arc, Robert E. Lee, Gautama the Buddha; think, indeed, of any true hero and of why you consider that person heroic.

We who are college students and graduates are an educated minority; by that fact we are the persons best able to deal with the complex problems of the disturbed era in which we live. Our very presence in these halls of Academe should be our announcement to the world that we accept unusual responsibilities. As the educated minority we are especially equipped to shoulder the problems of our communities, our nation, even our world. We have a special duty, whether we like it or not. Like Shakespeare's Prince Hal, who through no choice of his own was born to be king, we are compelled by a profound obligation to pay the "debt we never promised." Matthew Arnold's phrase, "the saving remnant," for the cultivated few, may have to our ears a slightly arrogant, mid-Victorian sound; but this is in fact what we are — or what we can be if we will set ourselves to the task of being saviors of the time and not just a little self-complacent enclave of culture isolated from the agony of the world.

The third quality which to my mind is inherent in arete and in the liberal arts is magnanimity. That sonorous word, a favorite of Milton's, means literally being great-hearted, large of soul and mind. It means having compassion; it means showing consideration and being courteous; it means having the grace of sensitivity to the needs of others. To me it suggests the quality displayed by noblemen who were truly chivalrous — and that quality has for many years persisted in my mind as a concomitant of a liberal education. The motto of the authentic nobleman was "Noblesse oblige" — nobility obligates! No enacted law required privileged aristocrats to take responsibility for those less fortunate, for the welfare of their immediate neighborhoods and communities, for going forth from their strongholds to right wrong: only the intangible code of generations of aristocracy reminded a well-born person of his compelling obligation. Noblesse oblige — and of him who hath, much shall be required. In our democratic age, we college and university people know ourselves (and surely the world knows us) to be privileged: we are rich in personal endowments, in knowledge, in creative ability. More than that, we have not only idealism, but a realistic eye to see clearly what is evil and to know what is good. Therefore, noblesse oblige. If our democracy is to work it will be because we — we the privileged of this earth — accept our obligation and show magnanimity.

All our cherished phrases inspire constant reflection because of their richness; and each re-examination rewards us with new insights. Who can say the last word about "faith, hope, and love," or "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness"? So with the words of our educational commitment, the "liberal arts" to which we have dedicated ourselves. How resonant those two words, "liberal arts," prove to be! "Liberal" means free, ranging, generous, liberating, befitting a free person. As for the "arts," the long story of man's awakening mind is his history of discovery of the boundlessness of the human spirit: the arts are whatever enhance the human personality; the arts range from theology to the music of the spheres, from poetry to philosophy, from the quickening word to the perception of order never before perceived.

Our devotion to the liberal arts is at once a commitment of the spirit and a high moral dedication. As James Russell Lowell once put it [in Among My Books, 1st series, p. 177], "[Our study] is fitly called a liberal education, because it emancipates the mind from every narrow provincialism, whether of egoism or tradition, and is the apprenticeship that every one must serve before becoming a free brother of the guild which passes the torch of life from age to age."

Versatility, responsibility, magnanimity — and if there be other qualities of arete, think on these things. From the first day of our entrance into the realm of higher education, our hearts exult, as if we heard the words of King Henry V on the eve of Agincourt: "We few, we happy few, we band of brothers . . . will stand a-tiptoe when this day is named!" ▲

Robert Frost Centennial

A Celebration of the Poet 1874-1974

It is appropriate that a tribute to Robert Frost on the 100th anniversary of his birth would be a celebration of the poet. The most important gift Frost gave to Agnes Scott, from 1935, when he began his visits, until 1962, when he made his last, was a glimpse of the man who is one of America's best-loved poets. During the centennial celebration, the college community spent two days reminiscing about the man who loved Agnes Scott and reliving the experience by studying his poetry and the poetry of another outstanding poet, Richard Wilbur.

The Robert Frost Centennial opened on Tuesday, October 15, with an introduction by Mrs. Margaret W. Pepperdene, Professor of English and Chairman of the Department of English, and opening remarks by President Marvin B. Perry. The first speakers were Frost's long-time friends, Kathleen and Theodore Morrison, who reminisced about the poet. Frost's secretary and recent biographer, Mrs. Morrison related anecdotes about Frost and talked of the book she had vowed never to write, Robert Frost: A Pictorial Chronicle. Her book was published last summer by Holt, Rinehart and Winston. Mr. Morrison, who is himself a poet and Harvard Professor of English, Emeritus, read and discussed some of his favorite Frost poems. When he read, in a voice surprisingly like Frost's, the spirit of Mr. Frost seemed to pervade the room. One could close his eyes and see Frost, with his shock of white hair and twinkling eyes, reading his own poetry.

Tuesday night, Mrs. Linda Woods, Associate Professor of English, introduced Cleanth Brooks, renowned critic and Yale Professor of English, who gave a paper entitled "Nature in the Poetry of Robert Frost." Written especially for the Celebration, Mr. Brooks' paper is his first critical essay on Robert Frost. Perceptive and lively, the essay was interesting and enjoyable even for the layman.

The Wednesday morning activities began at 10:30 a.m. with Agnes Scott speech and drama students and DeKalb College Singers speaking and singing Frost's poetry. Miss Margret Trotter, Professor of English, was responsible for arranging that part of the program.

At Convocation, President Perry introduced Dr. Wallace M. Alston, who gave a delightful, moving talk about Frost, the man and poet. Dr. and Mrs. Alston had the rare privilege of knowing Frost as a friend who obviously felt comfortable and relaxed in their home. Dr. Alston spoke especially of Frost's late hours, of his habit of walking the campus alone at night and of the poem "Acquainted with the Night," which came out of those solitary nocturnal treks.

On Wednesday afternoon the activities continued as Mr. Jack L. Nelson, Associate Professor of English, introduced Mr. Brooks and Poet Richard Wilbur. They talked informally about Frost and his poetry from the point of view of the critic and the poet.

That evening, Mrs. Pepperdene introduced the final event of the Celebration — Richard Wilbur reading his own poetry. Wilbur, who has won numerous prizes for poetry, including the Bolingen and Pulitzer Prizes, is Professor of English at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Connecticut. Mr. Wilbur's reading was an appropriate way to close the Centennial. He was, as he made clear in his conversation of the afternoon, a great admirer of Mr. Frost; Mr. Frost, in turn, once named Wilbur as one of America's most important young poets. It was even more appropriate, however, to end the celebration with the poet saying the poem, with this poet affirming in his poetry, the sense of "known life" that is the essential ingredient of poetry. ▲

Students and visitors request autographs from Mr. and Mrs. Morrison, who opened the Centennial Celebration on Tuesday, October 16

Mr. Brooks and Mr. Wilbur answer questions after their informal talk entitled "Conversations on Frost," on Wednesday afternoon, October 16.

Leaves from Our Books

Thirty-One Banana Leaves
Winifred Kellersberger Vass '38
John Knox Press, November, 1974
341 Ponce de Leon Avenue, NE
Atlanta, Georgia 30308, $3.95

"Thirty-one sketches celebrate the exuberance of rugged African life. Winifred Vass views Zaire's dynamic native culture with loving delight tempered by profound respect. She admires the adaptability of the crusty old tribespeople coping with Western technology. She smiles at a pompous chieftain regally pouring his lemonade on her living room floor. She accepts her church choir's appetite for raw termites and cooked rats. Thirty-One Banana Leaves opens windows to a potpourri of customs, childhood pastimes, missionary outings, and life's tragedies. Pleasure and pain shape African life as sun and rain give a banana leaf its battered beauty." (from a review in the John Knox Press promotion brochure)

Winifred Kellersberger Vass was born in Africa, to missionary parents. After she was married to the Rev. L. C. Vass, they went to the Congo, as missionaries for the Presbyterian Church. In 1971, they returned to this country to live in Dallas, Texas.

Poodles are People
Molli Oliver Mertel '41
Exposition Press, 1974
Jericho, New York 11753, $3.50

In Poodles are People, Molli Oliver Mertel writes with great love of life from the point of view of a toy poodle named Ginger. Accustomed to the good life, Ginger eats chicken and liver from sterling silver plates, wipes his mouth on Grand-mere's antique Sarouk rug and travels with his Army family over the United States and Europe.

Ginger's life is disrupted when Coco, a baby poodle, is brought into the family circle. Soon, however, they become fast friends as the responsible, well-mannered Ginger shows him the ropes. They prance and explore together until tragedy strikes and Coco dies. Ginger then must follow again his mother's advice to "take courage" and resume his job of frolicking about the house, supervising the preparation of his nightly chicken and loving and guarding his family.

Molli Mertel was born in Worcester, Massachusetts, graduated from Dana Hall, Wellesley, and Agnes Scott. She has worked for WRBL-TV, Columbus, Georgia, and has been a reporter for the Wellesley Townsman, the Boston Globe, the Worcester Evening Gazette and the Frankfurt-American, Frankfurt, Germany. Poodles are People is her second book.

Confederate City: Augusta, Georgia, 1860-1865

Florence Fleming Corley '54
University of South Carolina Press,
Second Printing, 1974
Columbia, South Carolina 29208,
$9.95

The reprinting of Florence Fleming Corley's Confederate City: Augusta, Georgia, 1860-1865 makes this interesting account available again to readers who would like to learn more of this city or period. The author's account traces the effects of the war years on life in one of Georgia's important cities. The reader can sense some of the pressures war brought and can almost feel a part of the community's life. Her well-chosen illustrations add to the value of this volume.

Florrie Fleming Corley was born and raised in Augusta, Georgia. She received her M.A. degree from Emory University, where she studied under Dr. Bell I. Wiley, celebrated Civil War historian, who writes the introduction for this book. Florrie is teaching American History at the Westminster Schools, in Atlanta, and serving as co-chairman of the history department. A local historian and lecturer, she lives in Marietta, Georgia, with her husband, James Weaver Corley, Jr., and their five children.

The Golden Needle Award Festival

"A thinking person is a creative person — never more so than in the arts. That the alumnae of an institution of higher learning should choose to sponsor a festival of the art of needlecraft seems, then, most appropriate. ALL the proceeds from 'The Golden Needle Award Festival' will be applied to student needs at Agnes Scott College, toward the building and nurturing of MORE creative thinkers in all fields of endeavour."

This statement expresses the purpose of The Golden Needle Award Festival, opening at Rich's, Thursday, April 17, and running through Saturday, April 19, 1975, coinciding with Agnes Scott's Alumnae Weekend. Led by Betty Lou Houck Smith '35 and Anita Moses Shippen '60, the steering committee is made up of Atlanta and Decatur Club members who have already spent almost a year making plans and setting the wheels in motion for this sensational event.

The Festival will feature, along with the needlepoint and embroidery entries, a display of heirloom pieces and an exhibition of needlecraft by celebrities. The celebrity show will include works by Mrs. Lyndon Johnson, who plans to send the covers of her book and Mr. Johnson's book done in needlepoint; Mrs. Herman Talmadge, who is sending a needlepoint canvas of the seal of the state of Georgia; Mrs. Howard (Bo) Callaway; and Mrs. Ernest Vandiver.

Another interesting aspect of the Festival is the "V.I.P. Program." Penny Brown Barnett '32, Contact Coordinator, has been in touch with club officers and interested alumnae in almost every town within a 150-mile radius, requesting that they organize a bus-load of local alumnae to attend. As a part of Rich's "Spend-the-Day" Party Program, the alumnae will attend the Golden Needle Award Festival, shop in the store and enjoy a tea and fashion show before they board the bus for home.

The exhibition is open to ANY interested needlecrafter who wishes to enter his or her work; therefore, the Festival committee asks Agnes Scotters to tell all their non-alumnae friends about the event. And certainly all alumnae are urged to attend the Festival, whether they enter or not. Not only will alumnae enjoy what may be the most exciting show ever staged by the Atlanta Alumnae Club, but they will contribute to the education of young women at Agnes Scott.

Exhibition entry forms have been printed on the following two pages for your convenience. Please clip them and present them to your needlecrafting friends.

The Renaissance Ideal

by Carey Bowe

Katherine Woltz Farinholt, '33

When Kitty Woltz Farinholt retired from The Westminster Schools in June, 1974, she retired from only one phase of her multi-faceted life. For she is truly a Renaissance woman. Scholar, teacher, leader and alumna extraordinaire, Kitty has that rare combination of energy, talent, leadership and femininity which has allowed her to be a volunteer worker, a career woman, a wife and a mother.

The 1972-73 edition of Who's Who of American Women lists the biography of Katharine Woltz Farinholt, counselor and Principal of Girls' Junior High School at Westminster. She had also been elected an Honorary Director of the Child Service and Family Counseling Center of Metropolitan Atlanta, in recognition of twenty years of service as a member of the Board of Directors and a former President of the Child Service Association.

In 1967, Mortar Board, National Honor Society for Senior College Women, honored her achievements and years of service as a national officer, section director and member of the National Council, with a certificate of recognition at their fiftieth anniversary celebration. Kitty was the President of the Metropolitan Atlanta Girl Scout Council in 1953, and following her term of office, she was awarded the highest honor offered adults in national Girl Scouting, the "Thanks Badge." Another national honor came from Phi Beta Kappa who elected her to honorary membership in 1949.

Kitty has also distinguished herself as an Agnes Scott alumna, having served as President of the Alumnae Association from 1944-45. During her term, the Alumnae Association changed its development approach from that of membership dues to an actual fund drive. She and President James Ross McCain wrote letters published in the Quarterly, appealing to alumnae to make contributions to the college. Later, Kitty was the general chairman of the Greater Atlanta Agnes Scott Alumnae Campaign in 1949.

As an integral part of Agnes Scott and her heritage, Kitty walked in the academic procession of the Inauguration of Dr. Marvin Perry, as the representative of the National Association of Women Deans, Administrators and Counselors (N.A.W.D.A.C.), just as she had represented Mortar Board at the Inauguration of Dr. Wallace Alston. Of her college, she says, "I am deeply indebted to Agnes Scott for giving me a rich heritage, and I shall always use my best efforts in her behalf."

Kitty has been prominent in church and civic affairs too, having served several years as a member of the Board of the Atlanta Music Club, as President of Women of All Saints' Episcopal Church and as a Trustee of the Appleton Church Home for Girls in Macon, Georgia.

After many years of extensive volunteer service, her career began in earnest, in 1964, when, after receiving a master's degree at Emory University, she became principal of the Girls' Junior High School at Westminster, where she had been teaching English. She had the longest tenure of any principal in Westminster's history. When she retired, President Emeritus William B. Pressley wrote to her, "Your grasp of the academic program of the total school, and particularly of the Junior High, made it possible always for you to make an outstanding contribution to the intellectual development of each student under you and, ultimately, to each student in the entire High School. I shall always consider you as one of the chief motivating forces in bringing Westminster to its academic preeminence."

Despite her staggering list of accomplishments and honors, Kitty is a very human, down-to-earth person. As petite and feminine as her nickname suggests, she is a warm, courteous woman — easy to talk to and joyful to be around. In fact, she appears to embody all the positive traits of traditional womankind, without sacrificing her identity and personal goals.

Also, it is obvious that Kitty was always very involved in the life of her children. Her daughter, Caroline Green Jervis attended Sweet Briar College and was graduated from the University of North Carolina. Her son, Holcombe Green, Jr., was graduated from the Taft School, Yale University and the University of Virginia Law School. Her stepson, Lewis Farinholt, whom she has had since he was seven years old, was graduated from Virginia Tech in June, 1974, and is now working for General Electric in Charlotte, N.C.

In the 14th, 15th and 16th centuries, the ideal was the person who was interested in learning, in the arts, in spectacular achievements and in the reaffirmation of life, hence, the individual. In every sense of the word, Katharine Woltz Farinholt is a Renaissance Woman. ▲

It's a Matter

Dr. C. Benton Kline, Jr., President Columbia Seminary and Conference Moderator, sits (at left) on panel following lecture by William J. Curran (to right of Dr. Kline).

Genetic manipulation and the right to die were among the topics discussed at the Conference on Bioethics sponsored by Agnes Scott College, November 6, 7 and 8, 1974. Directed by Agnes Scott professors — chemist Alice Cunningham, biologist Sandra Bowden and philosopher Richard Parry — the Conference was financially assisted by the National Endowment for the Humanities through the Georgia Committee on Public Programs for the Humanities.

Over 1,000 off-campus lay persons and professionals in law, medicine, theology, public health and government, as well as Agnes Scott students, attended the two-day symposium. Housewives, professionals, college students and retired persons from nine southeastern states attended sessions on current genetic technology and genetic counseling, the right to die, human experimentation, medical ethics and legal problems connected with these issues.

Prior to the Conference, Agnes Scott faculty in biology, religion and philosophy held brief seminars to acquaint students, faculty and staff with issues discussed at the symposium.

At the Conference the keynote speaker was Dr. Daniel Callahan, Director of the Institute of Society, Ethics, and the Life Sciences at Hastings Center in New York. A philosopher and psychologist, Dr. Callahan stated that technology in all fields, including medicine and biology, seems always to carry with it undesirable side effects. Thus, he said, a public ethic is needed to balance the beneficial and the detrimental effects of medical research and biological technology for society and the individual. He questioned the value of the Western ethic of individualism in dealing with this technology that can affect future generations of mankind.

Another speaker, Dr. Bruce Wallace, Professor of Genetics at Cornell University, spoke on current technological capabilities and theories in genetic research. He considers the goal of genetic manipulation to be the control and eradication of genetically caused diseases, rather than the production of the ideal human.

The right to die and the quality of death were the topics of a speech by Dr. Jonas B. Robitscher, Henry R. Luce Professor of Law and the Behavioral Sciences at Emory University. He and a panel made up of a chaplain, a hospital psychiatrist and an attorney discussed whether the right to die, when and how one chooses, is as inalienable a right as those of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Dr. Thomas C. Chalmers, President of Mount Sinai Medical Center and Dean of Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York, sent his taped speech, which was played for the audience along with his slide presentation. His talk dealt with ethical contrasts between clinical research and medical practice and the patient's right to know all possible side effects of drugs and medical treatments administered in a clinical trial or in medical practice. To ensure the safety of patients participating in clinical trials for testing new drugs and the comparative effectiveness of treatments, Chalmers proposed the establishment of a board of impartial examiners to review the studies before and during their implementation.

The last session of the Conference was a talk by Dr. William J. Curran, Frances Glessner Lee Professor of Legal Medicine in the faculties of Medicine and Public Health and Lecturer in Legal Medicine at Harvard University. He spoke to the legal problems surrounding medical practice and research, especially in cases of euthanasia and in clinical trials. He sees a basic conflict between legal regulation of medicine and medical ethics which demands that the physician will not be the instrument of his patient. A balance, he said, is needed between too little and too much legal interference in the patient-doctor relationship. ▲

A Christmas Remembered

Panorama view of Young Atlanta Alumnae Club Bazaar shows first shoppers.

Christie Theriot Woodfin '68, president Young Atlanta Club

Activity begins early at Bazaar.

Handmade toys attract children and mothers.

Handmade Christmas wreaths and ornaments, childrens' clothes and toys, flower pots, art works, original design needlepoint, decorator items, home-baked cakes, breads, brownies and pickles were just a few of the items offered for sale at the Young Atlanta Alumnae Club's 1974 Bazaar. Drawing on the nostalgia theme so popular today, "A Christmas Remembered" called on old-fashioned memories on Saturday, November 2, at Phipps Plaza, from 10:00 a.m. until the merchandise ran out in the afternoon.

They attracted many alumnae who were interested in doing their Christmas shopping and in helping Agnes Scott, as well as non-alumnae who had heard of the bazaar on TV or in the paper or who happened by as they shopped in Phipps. Also the alumnae, from all three Atlanta clubs, who had served on production or planning committees, came to give more time and to buy a few Christmas gifts themselves.

The results? They grossed over $5000, and after their bills are paid, they plan to give all the proceeds to the college.

Thanks, Young Atlanta Club and all Atlanta alumnae who helped. Agnes Scott is proud of you!

Letters

To the Editor:

One Saturday night, several of us Agnes Scott alumnae found ourselves together talking about Agnes Scott. We had one common complaint about the Alumnae Quarterly: finding too little about "real" people. The composite picture painted therein is not at all realistic. Consequently, we know little about the minor triumphs or disappointments of our classmates.

In answer to this problem, we have composed an appeal which we would like printed in the Quarterly. We invite your criticism and response.

* * *

When far from the reach of thy sheltering arms. . . . We still want to hear from you despite the fact that you may not have enriching or challenging experiences to relate. Not everyone is married to a brilliant, successful, oft-promoted man. Not everyone has a lucrative, exciting job she deems imminently necessary. Not everyone has a scheme for and the dedication to serve the world. Not everyone has made a pilgrimage to the Holy Land or even seen the recent shows in New York. Not all of you have children who are National Merit finalists and can select their own colleges and scholarships.

We also serve who only stand and wait . . . on tables.

To the Editor:

Much praise must go to the Alumnae staff for the recent Quarterly. It is beautifully done as to format, illustrations and content. After reading it I wished that I could become young again and apply at once for admission to ASC! It had lure. Also, the design consultant must share in the praise and appreciation for it is a periodical of which all alumnae can be very proud. It's alive, alert, relevant. Dr. Perry's Report says it all.

To the Editor:

The Alumnae Quarterly is always great, but Fall, 1974, is excellent. I look forward to receiving it and my friends are impressed that it is so informative and personable. The photographs are an added bonus.

Thanks for keeping us in touch with ASC. Wishing everyone well.

To the Editor:

It's probably just touchiness, but I can't love being a "mature student!" I'm sure you had the phrase thrust upon you by someone whose job it is to find names for things, but "mature" has just got to be the most painful euphemism going. Couldn't we just be "older students" or even "middle-aged" ones?

I'm only joking, really. I truly enjoyed the article, "Lampposts and Liberal Arts," and the whole Quarterly.

We're at Your Service

What is an alumnae office? Last spring after being appointed the new Director of Alumnae Affairs, I was startled when a friend inquired, "Is your position honorary, or do you put in regular office hours?" The Alumnae Office is open from 8:30 to 4:30 Mondays through Fridays. There are four of us in the office, and we are there to be of service to you.

The College has a few more than 9,000 living alumnae. We keep records of names and addresses of all these alumnae. Did you know that you have an individual file folder in our collection of records? These folders hold correspondence, news items and pertinent information on your life. To make these files more complete we respectfully solicit all newsworthy items about you or other alumnae.

The Office disseminates information about the College and alumnae through The Alumnae Quarterly, through letters by Executive Board Officers and Chairmen, Class Presidents and Reunion Chairmen. Copy for these letters is stenciled, mimeographed and mailed from the College. By the way, all Class Presidents who haven't yet sent out their annual letters to classmates will receive speedy assistance from us whenever they are ready to communicate.

The Alumnae Association, organized in 1895, having as its purpose the "furtherance of the aims of the College intellectually, financially, and spiritually," is composed of those former students who have earned academic credit at Agnes Scott College. Many of these Association members work actively to assist the College. The Director of Alumnae Affairs is liaison between College and Alumnae.

This year we are striving to strengthen the national structure of the Alumnae Association by assisting in the formation of new clubs. In Georgia new Alumnae Clubs have commenced in Dalton, Gainesville and Griffin. The Macon alumnae have regrouped. Other new Agnes Scott alumnae groups to elect officers and begin functioning are in New York City, Boston and Philadelphia.

When informal groups of alumnae — say ten or more — get together in distant cities, they should elect officers and send us a report or minutes of their meeting with a list of officers and those present. We have a Coordinator for Services to Clubs who will send you helpful information for programs and projects. She will also send invitations and provide you with a list of alumnae in your area if you are planning a meeting.

If there is an Alumna Admissions Representative in your city, we would like for her to be on the Executive Board of your club; for we want all alumnae volunteer work to be coordinated. The Alumnae Admissions Representatives will receive special instructions from the Admissions Office about recruiting. We are hoping the Alumnae Clubs will be supportive of this quest by the College for prospective students and that the Clubs will publicize Agnes Scott College. Really well-organized groups will raise funds to help send good students from their communities to attend Agnes Scott.

Clubs can make money simply by being agents for salable items from their regions: Boston rockers, Georgia pecans, Florida citrus fruit, Philadelphia historical merchandise. What is typical or representative of your region? At the Alumnae Office and available to clubs for sale are the crewel kit of Main Tower and the Agnes Scott cookbook, Food for Thought.

Of course an objective of the Alumnae Office is to cooperate with the Development Office in seeking to obtain increased participation by alumnae in annual giving. Last year 33% of our alumnae gave financial support. Large gifts are needed and are gratifying; but do not be embarrassed if your gift is small, for the percentage of participation by alumnae is an important guideline to foundations when they are judging a college as a possible beneficiary.

To complete a discussion of the Alumnae Office we should mention that we are located in the Anna Young Alumnae House which is the international headquarters of the Alumnae Association and the guest house for the College. Alumnae are encouraged to patronize the guest house when coming to Decatur or Atlanta for visits.

In wishing you a happy New Year I would remind you that 1975 is International Women's Year, and we urge you to join with educated women throughout the world to effect enlightenment and equality for womankind.

A Personal Note

I dislike sentimental good-byes almost as much as I dislike cleaning ovens and ironing shirts. And, generally, I avoid them just as diligently. But "ends of things" always seem to offer irresistible opportunities to express hitherto unspoken feelings and thanks.

As many of you know, I am "retiring" this summer, at least temporarily, from alumnae work. Despite my rapidly advancing years and appalling lack of maternal instincts (children scare me to death), I'm about to embark on the adventure of parenthood. Although I look forward to the "little one," I'm very sad to leave the Quarterly, the Alumnae Office and the special excitement I've had in getting to know so many Agnes Scott alumnae.

Nevertheless, it's time to go and I want to say three thank yous. Thanks for your support and guidance when things were busy and decisions difficult. As the Letters to the Editor Column shows, you have cared enough about Agnes Scott and the Alumnae Association to have opinions and suggestions. If sometimes they proved the Editor wrong, so much the better. I worried much more when you didn't write (and probably didn't read).

Thank you for the opportunity to edit the Quarterly. I have felt personally stretched in the process. I will be forever grateful to the alums, students, faculty and staff who were good enough to guest write many fine articles and to those faithful readers who continued to follow the progress of the magazine quarter after quarter.

Finally, I want to say thank you for being the finest body of women I have ever met. Aware, involved, sensitive and open, you seem to make the world you are part of more vital. Because of what the College helped you become, you are part of what she is and can become. I am proud to be an Agnes Scott alumna.

Letters

To the Editor:

I am still a very loyal Agnes Scotter. The year I was allowed to stay at ASC as a German Exchange Student has proved to be the most fruitful of my life. I went on studying when I returned to Germany in 1936 and passed my exams as "philologist" in 1940/1941. I'm convinced that I owe the good results at the University of Tübingen, as well as when teaching foreign languages in a German college, to a very large part to the good academic training I got at ASC.

My best wishes to the College growing in importance.

To the Editor:

The air-conditioning of Winship, the library and Presser Hall auditoriums reveals an appalling lack of concern for today's energy priorities.

Kathy Triplett '71
Cashiers, North Carolina

To the Editor:

I thoroughly enjoyed the Winter Quarterly. The letter concerning the Quarterly's unreal composite picture of us is interesting. However, we all live lives filled with sorrow as well as joy and I guess in a publication one wants to share the joy and keep the sorrow for close friends.

Kay Toole Prevost '39
Anderson, South Carolina

To the Editor:

I have moved from Savannah, Georgia, to Atlanta, Georgia. The Quarterly was forwarded to me here. I always thoroughly enjoy it. It is a fine magazine. I loved my years at Agnes Scott and always like to hear about it.

Cornelia Hutton Hazlehurst '20
Atlanta, Georgia

To the Editor:

I am ever grateful for the quality of education provided at Agnes Scott, but most of all for the strong Christian influence made possible by dedicated faculty, administration and student leadership. I count my years at Agnes Scott among life's greatest blessings.

Maurine Bledsoe Bramlett '27
Asheville, North Carolina

To the Editor:

The Quarterly gets better all the time. I read every word of the one just received, and even though I don't know the people I scan the names under all the pictures. And as I am a very busy person, this should demonstrate my continuing interest in ASC.

Lucile Little Morgan '23
Heflin, Alabama

To the Editor:

I received my Winter Quarterly last week and the special bulletin this morning. As always, I enjoyed them and the other correspondence from Scott.

It has occurred to me that publications, etc. from Scott are the sole items that come to me now that are still addressed to Mrs. Donald S. Hauck. It's laughable to me, and I would like to request that from now on everything sent to me be addressed to Mrs. Margery D. Hauck.

Frankly, I find it a little absurd to have to make the request. Have you not considered automatically changing all your addresses to their names instead of their titles?

Margery DeFord Hauck '57
Austin, Texas

Thank you so much for your interest. The Alumnae Office staff will change with pleasure any name upon receiving a written request from the alumna. Please include whole name — first, maiden and married (if desired) — and class in these communications.

Agnes Scott students interested in teaching are involved in a tutoring program with nearby Beacon Elementary School

by Carey Bowen Craig '62

Perhaps the best things a person can give away are his heart — if he truly cares — and his knowledge — of books, of ideas, of experience, of love and hate, of joy and sorrow. At least these may be the only things that matter.

If this is true, the greatest philanthropist of all is the teacher. He gives the gift that allows another person to become more than he is or at least to develop his potential; and in the giving, the giver himself may grow.

Because Agnes Scott women have been nurtured in the liberal arts tradition, the tradition of concern for human beings, they are natural teachers, either casually or vocationally. They may teach their children, their fellow workers, their acquaintances or their pupils. They may teach by the book or simply by example.

In the spirit of this heritage, Agnes Scott has begun a program designed to give the Agnes Scott student practical teaching experience while it helps youngsters who need more help than they can receive in overcrowded classrooms. This is a cooperative tutoring program sponsored by Agnes Scott College and the Decatur Public Schools, in which Agnes Scott students tutor elementary students at Beacon School.

The seeds for this program were sewn a couple of years ago when, in the winter of 1973, Professor and Chairman of the Department of Education Margaret P. Ammons and Assistant Professor of Education Lawrence R. Hepburn discovered nine unused classrooms at Beacon. They met with Mr. Henry Brown, Principal of Beacon School, and with his direction and the cooperation of the Decatur Schools, they planned a new program. It was a no-cost program designed to offer remedial and enrichment help to the elementary school student and pre-student-teaching experience to the college student. The program would receive no funds from the College — only human resources — and no funds from Beacon — only the cooperation of the teachers and the raw material, the students.

In the fall of 1973, Agnes Scott students enrolled in education, child psychology and physical education began tutoring fifth and sixth graders both in the classroom with the teacher and separately in the renovated rooms. They helped especially with math, science, social studies and communications, including all aspects of language development, although the tutors were prepared to deal with anything the child or the teacher needed.

That first quarter, 135 children were involved. There were tutors every hour during the school day. The children, the college students, the teachers and the administration were pleased. And that was almost two years ago.

The form the tutoring takes is as varied as the imaginations of the tutors and the responsiveness of the children. They work on an individual basis, in small and large groups, sometimes entire classes, depending on the subject and the kinds of problems the children have. One example of a project in the communications area is a film directed by the Beacon students and supervised by the Agnes Scott tutors, using the movie equipment owned by the College. The tutors are free to use, on a rotating basis, any instructional material in the education lab.

Another exercise which Marsha Thrift, a senior music major, has used to help her students at Beacon involves the use of the telephone directory. She asks them questions which can be answered by looking through the directory. This process teaches the alphabet, helps with spelling and seems to foster a sense of community, says Marsha.

If the exercises seem a bit unconventional to those outside the field, the whole approach is rather unorthodox. The students are usually free to move about as they please, even to sit on the floor. In fact, they use little conventional classroom furniture. In one room, there is an automobile set up with all working parts. But, after all, isn't a car an appropriate desk for a young American?

Each Agnes Scott student keeps a log of her activities with the children; therefore, she can make specific evaluations at the end of the quarter. Also, the tutoring is conducted as a laboratory: they plan their exercises or mini-lessons, conduct their "experiments" and bring their notes and problems to the classroom the next day for critique or explanation. In this way, the students are able to test the theories and facts themselves, rather than merely absorbing them from the book. Marsha compares the program to the work-study co-op program at Georgia Tech, where the students work a quarter and go to school a quarter. She believes that the Beacon School program is "very good field experience."

In the same way that practical experience supplements classroom learning, it also provides an excellent screening ground. Because any Agnes Scott student can volunteer for one or more hours a week, Beacon School offers a place to "try one's hand" at teaching before signing up for practice teaching or even for an education course. And because the tutor frequently works with a child in the classroom with an experienced teacher, she cannot do very much damage if she is unable to cope with a child's problems or if she simply does not like the work. Perhaps this kind of "trial run" will eliminate some of the people who enter the profession, only to find, sometimes too late, that they are unhappy, ill-suited teachers.

And what have been the results of this program for the Beacon students and the Agnes Scott students? For many years, tutoring, especially on a one-to-one level, has been recommended for students having difficulties. Now, authorities are beginning to feel that the teaching process is just as beneficial for the teacher as it is for the learner. According to the magazine American Education, statistics have shown that both "teacher" and "pupil" profit from a tutoring experience, even when the tutor is young and untrained. Both learn more about the subject and more about themselves.

Principal Henry Brown believes that the program has been quite beneficial to the elementary students at Beacon. He is especially pleased that the Agnes Scott students have worked so well with the children.

As for the tutors themselves, Marsha Thrift says that the program has not only given her the opportunity to learn about teaching, it has also changed her attitude about it. Now she definitely plans to enter the teaching field. She maintains that she "never realized before how exciting it can be."

Junior history major Barbara Clark is very enthusiastic about the program. Although she needed no convincing that teaching was her calling (she has "always wanted to teach"), she feels that the Beacon program has given her a great deal of necessary experience, especially with "slow learners" and children with discipline problems, both of whom she particularly enjoys working with. The excitement of the challenge lighted up her whole face as she said, "No matter how bad I feel, I always come out smiling."

According to Professor Ammons, the program will continue. It is now a course requirement for Elementary Education and Child Psychology, although many girls work more than the necessary one hour a week, and students who are not enrolled in either course continue to volunteer their time for the program. The premise appears to be that not only do they want to learn something — how to teach and whether or not they like it — but they also want to give of themselves and their knowledge. These Agnes Scott students seem to be saying to the Beacon youngsters, "I care enough about you to help you." And like Chaucer's virtuous Clerk, "gladly wolde [they] lerne, and gladly teche."▲

Report of the

April, 1974, Jane King Allen '59 was elected president of the Agnes Scott Alumnae Association. Her two-year term of office began July 1, 1974.

As national head of the Agnes Scott alumnae, Jane is responsible for leading and coordinating the work of the Executive Board, the elected board of officers and committee chairmen who serve as spokesmen for the entire alumnae body. She represents the Alumnae Association on special occasions, presides over alumnae gatherings and, along with the other members of the Executive Board, works closely with the alumnae office staff to implement Association policy and acts as a liaison between the College and the alumnae.

Since graduation from Agnes Scott, where she was a philosophy major and a member of the executive committee of student government, Jane has been active in alumnae work. She served from 1972-1974 on the Executive Board as vice president for region III (Georgia, Florida and Tennessee). She is also past president of the Nashville Agnes Scott Alumnae Club.

An elder in St. Luke's Presbyterian Church in Dunwoody, Georgia, Jane is coordinator of their college group, former chairman of the Christian Education Committee and has served as a commissioner of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States. She is a member of the League of Women Voters in Georgia.

Jane and her husband, Bona, live in Dunwoody, a community about twenty miles from Atlanta. They have two children, Bona King, 14, and Frances Elizabeth, 11.

Being leader of 9000 plus alumnae might seem overwhelming for the pretty, petite Jane, but anyone who knows her realizes that crowds, concerns and responsibilities are "right up her alley." The poise and confidence as she conducts a meeting, the ease and good humor when she plans a conference and the understanding and warmth with which she approaches her friends and family all reveal the qualities which make her an excellent choice to lead the Agnes Scott alumnae.

Alumnae President

Jane King Allen '59

I welcome this opportunity to report to you, the alumnae of Agnes Scott. As a preface to my report, I wish to share with you a view of our alumnae which I have heard Dr. Perry express on several occasions. He has remarked how very impressed he has been with the Agnes Scott alumnae whom he has met both in Atlanta and in his travels around the country. He believes that the quality of the lives and the achievements of these women bear a strong testimony to the excellence of the liberal arts education which they received at Agnes Scott. This education, in an atmosphere of Christian commitment, has very obviously played a significant role in making our alumnae what they are today. You, therefore, provide one of the means by which we can most effectively advertise Agnes Scott as the very fine liberal arts college which it is. You can see how valuable you are!

Virginia McKenzie, who is the director of alumnae affairs, the alumnae office staff and the Executive Board of the Alumnae Association act as liaison agents between you and the College. Our purpose is to serve you and the College, to keep you informed and involve you in alumnae activities. The Executive Board is comprised of the officers of the Association, chairmen of standing committees and the two alumnae trustees of the College. The presidents of alumnae clubs, the alumnae fund chairman and executive members of the alumnae staff serve as ex-officio members.

The Executive Board holds three meetings each year. The fall meeting was held in October, 1974, in conjunction with the Alumnae Council. The Alumnae Council provides an opportunity for alumnae leaders to return to campus, to hear from Dr. Perry, various administrative heads and students and to participate in workshops led by board members and college personnel involved with alumnae in fund raising and the alumnae admissions representative program.

The officers of the Association are the president; secretary, Eleanor Lee McNeill '59; treasurer, Caroline McKinney Clarke '27; and four regional vice-presidents: Dorothy Porcher '62, Nancy Edwards '58, Mary Duckworth Gellerstedt '46 and Margaret Gillespie '69. The standing committee chairmen are career advisory chairman, Adelaide Ryall Beall '52; class council chairman, Nell Allison Sheldon '38; club chairman, Charlotte Webb Kendall '65; education chairman, Ellen Middlebrooks Davis '62; entertainment chairman, Sarah Cheshire Killough '67; house chairman, Nelle Chamlee Howard '34; nominations chairman, Betty Smith Satterthwaite '46; projects chairman, Christie Theriot Woodfin '68; and publications chairman, Betty Medlock Lackey '42. The alumnae trustees are the two past presidents of the Association, Gene Slack Morse '41 and Memye Curtis Tucker '56. The alumnae fund chairman is Sis Burns Newsome '57.

The treasurer of the Association has procured books for the Agnes Scott library in honor of last year's retiring faculty members. She is also working with the projects chairman to conceive ideas for use of the money raised from the sale of the crewel kits. The possibility of national projects is being considered.

The four regional vice-presidents, the club chairman and the alumnae office have been hard at work establishing new alumnae clubs and encouraging those already in existence. Virginia McKenzie, Dr. Perry and faculty members have traveled to many of these clubs to talk with them about the College. We are proud to inform you that there are now 27 active alumnae clubs. The club chairman is currently involved in the revision of the club handbook which will be very beneficial in organizing and sustaining our alumnae clubs.

The clubs in the Atlanta area have worked cooperatively on the Bazaar, sponsored by the Young Atlanta Club, and the Golden Needle Award Festival, sponsored by the Atlanta Club. Alumnae attending Alumnae Weekend this year were able to benefit from both of these projects because items from the Bazaar were on sale in the Hub and the Golden Needle

Award Festival was held during this very eventful weekend.

The Shadow Program sponsored by our career advisory committee, the career planning office of the College and the Dana scholars provides opportunities for Agnes Scott students to shadow people in various professions in order that they might see first-hand what those particular jobs entail. Last year 90 students requested this service, and there have been 64 requests this year.

The class council chairman heads class officers in their work for the Association and the College. She has written letters to all class presidents reminding them to write annual letters to class members. She also reminded reunion class presidents to appoint reunion chairmen. Her job further involved introducing reunion classes at the luncheon in April.

There have been four continuing education courses offered for alumnae and friends in the Atlanta area. These are non-credit short courses taught by members of the Agnes Scott faculty and people of the Atlanta academic and professional community. There have been courses on the United States Government, motherhood, modern woman and modern poetry. Clubs in other areas may want to explore the idea of providing similar educational experiences for local alumnae. They perhaps could be led by professors from colleges in their towns or by other people in the community.

The entertainment chairman has worked this year to plan refreshments and meals for the Alumnae Council, the Executive Board meetings and Alumnae Weekend. She makes arrangements to secure any necessary tables and equipment for these affairs.

We hope that any time you are in the Atlanta area you will avail yourselves of the opportunity to visit the Agnes Scott campus. I know that you are aware of many physical changes which have been made. We also want to call your attention to the hard work that has been done in the alumnae garden. The results which you will see have been accomplished by the efforts of a garden committee of the alumnae under the direction of the house chairman on the Board, who has agreed to serve as garden chairman. There are also improvements planned for the alumnae house.

Each year the nominations chairman selects a committee comprised of representatives from four decades and, if possible, the last three presidents. This year the chairman sent a questionnaire asking for suggestions of persons qualified to fill the necessary positions. The chairman met with her committee and the director of alumnae affairs and drew up a slate of officers which was presented at the annual meeting of the Alumnae Association in April.

The publications chairman acquired books by alumnae which were exhibited for the Alumnae Council. She continues to work on this project and would appreciate any help from you.

One interesting duty that I, as president of the Association, have been asked to perform is, along with three other alumnae, to serve on the Long-Range Planning Committee for the College. This committee, comprised of people from the Board of Trustees, the President's Advisory Council, the administration, faculty, students and alumnae will be making plans for Agnes Scott's second century. There are three subcommittees — academic program, student life, and finance and development. I have been placed on the student life subcommittee whose chairman is Dean Martha Huntington.

It is my hope that this report has been beneficial in acquainting you with the activities of the Alumnae Association. We would welcome and appreciate any ideas, suggestions and concerns which you may want to share with us. We are anxious to know of ways that we may better serve you and Agnes Scott. ▲

News of and about ASC

New courses, guest professors and research projects are expanding learning opportunities for Agnes Scott students this year and next.

Economics

This year Dr. William M. Vandiver, a visiting professor from the graduate faculty of the Georgia State University School of Business, is teaching a two-quarter course in accounting and economic decision-making. Students from diverse disciplines are taking the course, which introduces them to basic concepts and procedures of accounting, the language of business and its application to all types of economic entities.

Dr. Vandiver emphasizes the interpretation of information and its use and limitation in making economic decisions. Students learn an orderly approach toward analyzing and solving economic problems in general, whether they involve personal and household management or organizational finance.

History

In history, Dr. Bell I. Wiley, world renowned American Civil War historian and professor emeritus of Emory University, is historian-in-residence at Agnes Scott. A recognized author of numerous histories of the Civil War, including Confederate Women, he is teaching a Civil War course in which he emphasizes the social and economic life of women on the home front during the war years. The military history of the war is being illustrated with a two-day field trip over General Sherman's route through Georgia to Savannah, where the class will visit Fort Pulaski and other significant war sites.

Sociology

In an urban sociology course taught by Dr. Paul Mills, chairman of the economics and sociology department, students are helping the City of Decatur develop a plan for improving a poor neighborhood.

The students are interviewing the adult residents to determine their needs and interests in housing, recreation, sanitation, education, medical care, transportation, day care centers and other possibilities for federal funding, which the City has requested for neighborhood development. The students will analyze their data and present a report to the City Planning Board on improvements the residents would support.

In the classroom, after having attended a City Planning Board meeting and having visited a planned city, the students will draw up their own plan for effectively improving the neighborhood. By the end of the course, the students will have participated in, or observed, the steps involved in urban planning.

Biology

This summer eight students will study desert biology in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and southern California under the supervision of Dr. Harry Wistrand, assistant professor of biology. Camping out along the way, the group will travel the 7,000 mile roundtrip in the College minibus.

For 25 days they will study plant and animal adaptations to desert conditions. They will study with guest lecturers at the University of Oklahoma Biological Station and Arizona State University. They will conduct field work in the Chihuahuah Desert at Big Ben National Park, Texas, and in the Sonora Desert of Arizona in the Madeira Canyon and around Phoenix. In San Diego, California, the group will visit Scripps Institution of Oceanography and hear lectures at the University of California. On the return trip they will visit the American Museum of Natural History Field Station in Portal, Arizona.

Political Science

Next fall the history and political science department will offer a course in politics and the environment. The instructor, Dr. David Orr, assistant professor of political science, has planned five field trips within a 100-mile radius of Atlanta to sites of environmental problems or on-going projects. At the sites, the students will make first-hand observations and evaluations of the problems. In the classroom, the students will study the political process in environmental policy making.

Chemistry

One or two ASC chemistry students will have the opportunity this summer to work with faculty researchers at Agnes Scott and Georgia State University. Aided by an $11,000 grant from the National Science Foundation's Undergraduate Research Participation Program, the two institutions will involve six undergraduates in laboratory research in progress in the two chemistry departments. The grant provides, in addition to materials and overhead expenses, an $800 stipend for each student.

Each student will choose the research problem on which she wishes to work and will be carefully oriented to that research and the methodology being used. Then, according to Dr. Marion Clark, project director for the program and chairman of the Agnes Scott chemistry department, each student will be encouraged to plan her own experiments on some aspect of the on-going research problem and make her own interpretations of the data.

Fine Arts Department

In the art department this spring, visiting lecturer Mrs. Evelyn Mitchell is teaching an art history course, "The Arts of Africa." An artist herself, her drawings and wall hangings are on display in the Dalton Galleries of the Dana Fine Arts Building, along with an exhibit of pieces from the William and Robert Arnett Collection of African Art. Mrs. Mitchell, who was director of the Afro-American Cultural Center and assistant professor of art at Cleveland State University, Ohio, is now slide librarian for the Georgia State University art department and a guest lecturer at the Atlanta High Museum of Art.

Music

In addition to its annual fall and spring concerts, the Agnes Scott Glee Club has sung a pops concert with the Georgia Tech Glee Club, a concert with the Davidson College Male Chorus and a concert at the Decatur Presbyterian Church. In April the Club performed for the state convention of the Georgia Association of Eduactors. The Madrigal Singers shared a concert with the Duke's Men of Yale in March at Agnes Scott.

Dance

The Agnes Scott Dance Group, directed by Mrs. Marylin Darling, dance instructor, performs in May with the Emory University Consort and the Emory University Chamber Chorus. Dance group members are choreographing the dances, some of which will be accompanied only by the Consort (instrumental group) and others only by the Chorus. The work, "Carmena Burana" by Orff, will be a combined effort by singers, dancers and instruments. Also, together, the three groups will perform Bach's "Cantata No. 78."

Drama

The Agnes Scott Blackfriar's musical production of The Grass Harp was selected this winter as first alternate for the southeastern regional competition of the American College Theatre Festival. The Blackfriars' production of the Truman Capote play was selected along with six winning plays from among 38 college and university productions. Agnes Scott was the only woman's college represented among the winners and alternates. Director of the play was Dr. Jack Brooking, visiting professor of speech and drama from the University of Kansas.

Also honored was Agnes Scott actress Susan Stigall, who played a character role in The Grass Harp. She was one of eleven students selected by the American College Theatre Festival to compete for a $500 scholarship awarded on the regional level. Susan is a senior biology major from Columbus, Georgia.

SUMMER IN ENGLAND

On-site learning in England, Scotland and Wales awaits 32 Agnes Scott students who will take a six-week course this summer in the "Social History of Tudor and Stuart England." Teaching the course will be Dr. Michael J. Brown, a native of England and chairman of the Agnes Scott history and political science department.

The first two weeks the students will study and sightsee in London, where they will stay at University College. Then the course will move successively to other cities, where the group will stay at universities, including the University of Exeter, Oxford University, York University and the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. Distinguished British historians will serve as guest lecturers and conduct tours of historical sites related to their lecture topics. Tours will be made of Parliament, Stonehenge, Stratford-on-Avon, art museums, famous palaces and cathedrals and other historically significant sites.

According to Dr. Brown, the students will also have time "for getting to know another country and people in ways that cannot be duplicated in the distant classroom or by the hurried summer tourist's trip."

They will have time to attend the theatre, including two performances at the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre, and they will have time for walking in the countryside and exploring new places.

The course has no prerequisites, so any Agnes Scott student in good standing academically is eligible.

DUAL DEGREE PROGRAM IN ENGINEERING

Training in engineering is now open to Agnes Scott students through a dual degree program in engineering with the Georgia Institute of Technology. In this program, a student may combine three years of liberal arts studies at Agnes Scott with two years of specialized work in an engineering field at Georgia Tech. Upon completion of this five-year liberal arts/professional program, she will have earned a bachelor's degree in engineering from Georgia Tech and a bachelor of arts degree from Agnes Scott. A highly qualified student may complete a master's degree from Georgia Tech rather than the bachelor's degree.

One advantage of the dual degree program for the Agnes Scott woman is the opportunity to learn in an environment focused on women and their needs, before entering the professionally-oriented classroom on a coeducational campus.

A second advantage is the freedom to explore other interests before beginning specialized technical studies. At Agnes Scott, a student can take courses oriented for the liberal arts major in fine arts, literature and languages, philosophy, history and the social sciences, in addition to math and the natural sciences.

A third advantage is the breadth and depth of knowledge about mankind earned through a liberal arts education that will make the engineer more sensitive to the effects of her decisions on society. Her liberal arts education will also prepare her to hold management positions requiring innovative thinking and sensitivity to other people.

The engineering fields included in the dual degree program at the bachelor's level are aerospace, ceramic, chemical, civil, electrical, industrial, mechanical, nuclear and textile engineering, textiles, textile chemistry, engineering science, engineering economic systems and health systems.

Leaves from Our Books

The Story of Decatur: 1823-1899

Caroline McKinney Clarke '27
Higgins-McArthur/Longino &
Porter, Inc., 1973

Atlanta, Georgia 30344, $6.50
Written for Decatur's

Sesquicentennial Celebration,
The Story of Decatur is, in the author's own words, "an informally told story of some of the people who participated in its life, and of some of the incidents and events which have occurred." It is, indeed, an interesting, very readable account of the pioneers and the happenings of the years between 1823, when the country town of Decatur was born, to 1899, when the town began to emerge from the horrors of a devastating war.

The Story of Decatur is composed of many delightful, small portraits of people, chronologically displayed, which fit together to give a realistic picture of events and atmosphere of the times. For example, there is a report of a Decatur woman and her servant walking through the night behind the retreating Confederate cavalry from Atlanta to her home and then of the destruction of her property by the "Yanks." This and other individual accounts combine to make an excellent description of the effect of the destruction of Atlanta and Decatur by Sherman's army. The author describes the hunger, the fear, the horror of Sherman's "scorched earth policies."

The book is not filled with sorrow, however; there are light-hearted stories too. And like herself, the author's anecdotes are clever, funny and yet insightful. She writes with love of the everyday life of people in her town.

Caroline McKinney Clarke is herself a native Decaturite, still living in the house in which she was born. As a member of two of Decatur's oldest pioneer families — the Candler and the McKinneys — and as a scholar and lover of history, she is well-qualified for the task of writing the book which was published to commemorate Decatur's 150th birthday.

Until her retirement in 1972, Caroline was the director of the DeKalb County Department of Family and Children's Services. She had been with the department for 28 years. She has one daughter, Louise Hill Reaves '54, who lives in Marion, South Carolina.

Something More: In Search of a Deeper Faith

Catherine Wood Marshall '36
McGraw-Hill Book Company, 1974
New York, New York, $6.95

In Something More, Catherine Marshall again reveals to her readers the insights she has gained through her struggles with some of the most difficult questions the Christian can ask. She explores the problems of suffering and death; the reality of evil, the "unholy spirit"; the conquering of fear and the effectiveness of prayer for spiritual, physical and material help from God.

She writes candidly of her personal battles with doubt and grief, especially after the death of two of her grandchildren. The chapter, "The Golden Bridge of Praise" describes her realization that praising God in every situation, good or bad, is "faith in action." Another subject comes from her personal knowledge of the "generation gap": her step-daughter's involvement with the "Youth Revolution." "Forgiveness: The Aughts and the Anys" and "The Law of Generations" offers advice for parents and children and husbands and wives who have become estranged in today's uncertain, fear-ridden world.

Finally, she deals with the presence of the Holy Spirit in the world. From her acquaintance with many young "Jesus Freaks" and her knowledge of the Pentecostal Movement, Catherine is not afraid to examine the causes — even as they reflect negatively on the modern church — as well as the pitfalls of the emotional approach to Christianity.

Because of her many experiences, her constant research and her faith in God, Catherine Marshall is able to write convincingly of the results of her search for a deeper faith. She continues to believe that God "holds out to us the exciting promise of something more."

One of Agnes Scott's best-known alumnae, Catherine Marshall has shared with her vast public the experiences of her life since she published A Man Called Peter.

Author or editor of twelve books, she has written of her late minister-husband and of her struggle to regain life after his death.

To Live Again offers good, healthy advice to widows. Recently, she has written of her spiritual "self" in Beyond Our Selves and of her delightful mother in Christy. But always she writes of her faith in God.

Catherine is now married to Leonard LeSourd, editor of Guideposts magazine. They live in Boynton Beach, Florida. C.B.C.

What She Was Doing Always Got Done—Margaret Whitton Ray '64

By Randy Norton Kratt '58

She should have known better than to get involved. It certainly wasn't the safe thing to do. But then Margaret Whitton Ray never was one to sit by and watch while her city was sliding into a thicket of dissent and negativism. So, she did an extraordinary thing which is why she, at 33, was named Charlotte, North Carolina, Woman of the Year in January, 1975, and her face has become a familiar feature of everyday's newspaper.

In many American cities, the matter of school desegregation is a tangled and potentially stormy issue.

It was no different in Charlotte. The court had ordered a plan to be submitted by May, 1974. The plan that the school officials had devised, however, included massed busing, which was not acceptable to many concerned citizens. After meeting to make their views known to the School Board, the spokesmen for individual groups decided to combine forces to draw up an alternative plan for the Charlotte and Mecklenburg County public schools.

Margaret took on the thorny job as Chairman of the CAG with its widely divergent countywide representation. Feelings were so high she wasn't sure the committee could even communicate, let alone come up with any recommendations. So her idea was to meet first over dinner where "Southerners have been taught to be polite." It worked. They began to talk and began an arduous month's long effort of meeting day and night to hammer out inequities, problems and their own attitudes. One of the chief problems was coming to a proposal which would satisfy the Federal Court of Appeals Judge James B. McMillan's order for desegregation in actuality, yet not shift children from school to school yearly across town to maintain balance. Working with the staff of the school system, Margaret and her committee made recommendations to the School Board which they, and later Judge McMillan, endorsed. Their recommendations were put into effect in the fall of 1974.

There still remain problems, but the community consensus is that the plan Margaret and her committee worked out is infinitely fairer and more stable than the chaos which preceded it.

Margaret admits that during this grueling time her family suffered. Her toddler son, three-year-old daughter and lawyer husband did not see much of her. But now she is resting until something else comes up, no doubt.

Earlier Margaret spearheaded the founding of a Street Academy for teenage public school dropouts, a casual creative skill-building place for students who are discipline problems and cannot seem to make it in conventional classrooms. This project too is alive and well in Charlotte, thanks in part to Margaret's energies.

Betty Hutchison Cowden '67, 1974-75 president of Charlotte's Agnes Scott alumnae club remembers Margaret from Agnes Scott days. "She seemed very quiet, but what she was doing always got done." That must be Margaret's secret. ▲

Barbara Caldwell Perrow '54— All Education is Continuing

Barbara Caldwell Perrow '51 is one of those rare people who has developed an interesting job and a concern for the community into a full-fledged career. Working in community agencies, such as the Girl Scouts and the Y.W.C.A., she became interested in public administration. Now, two degrees and a few years later, she has been appointed Executive Director of the Summer Session and Evening College in the College of Continuing Education at the University of Southern California.

Barbara's responsibilities include directing the operation of the on-campus credit programs during the summer and evening. The students are the regular USC students who want to accelerate or to take some particular summer offering and special students, such as professional groups returning to summer school, or part-time students studying while they work.

In the 70's, most universities and colleges are looking beyond their walls for better ways to relate to a greater public. Continuing education programs are very important to this end. According to Barbara,

"Continuing Education is the arm of the university that allows it to penetrate its environment and go out into the community to fill needs there." Presently, she and her staff are in the process of developing an innovative extended degree program for upper division undergraduate degrees for full-time working people.

Even before she became director, Barbara was searching for educational systems designed to meet community needs. While she was a faculty member in the School of Public Administration, she directed a program which made possible the earning of a master's degree by minority students who were at middle and upper management levels of neighborhood health centers across the country. The program had an intensive semester format, supplemented by her visits to each student on the job.

Previously an assistant professor in USC's School of Public Administration, Barbara received her Master of Public Administration degree and her Ph.D. from USC. Between college and graduate school, she worked for the Girl Scouts, the YWCA and the Volunteer Bureau.

Barbara has authored and co-authored papers for the Alfred Sloan Foundation and the International Congress of Gerontology. (Her doctoral study included a minor in Gerontology.) She is an Associate of the Danforth Association, whose members are selected for their concern for quality of teaching and human relations.

As have other Agnes Scott alumnae, Barbara has excelled in a largely male-dominated field. When she first began her studies, she was one of the very few female students in the School of Public Administration. Although the situation has changed somewhat, as more women move into typically men-oriented areas, she has been regarded as "a little bit strange."

Barbara has not only proved herself in a "man's world," she has combined her "outside" career with that of wife and mother. Her husband, Maxwell V. Perrow, holds his Ph.D. in Telecommunications from USC and is a Presbyterian minister. They have one seven-year-old child, Douglas. She maintains that although there are problems with three roles — professional, wife and mother — mainly because one is always tired, she is rarely bored. "Having too many roles can be frustrating, but so can having too few. On balance I guess I'm recommending the combination."

Barbara Caldwell Perrow likes her work; she enjoys the challenge of devising educational systems pertinent to today's needs, and she likes working with the university administration. Her philosophy about continuing education is that all education is continuing. "In order to survive, we as individuals, as well as our institutions, must continuously learn. If we can develop a system that encourages continuous learning for individuals and organizations, we can perhaps create a society that can renew itself."

CLUBS FAR AND NEAR

Dallas

Dallas alumnae have shown great enthusiasm, meeting twice in the span of three months. On November 16, 1974, thirteen met together in a luncheon-planning session. "Illustrious but modest" alumnae in their midst were authors Winifred Kellersberger Vass and Virginia Gray Pruitt, Jerry Kay Foote with a Master of Music degree and Bonnie Prendergast, a C.P.A. with her own accounting practice.

More than doubling their attendance in honor of college speaker Dr. Nancy Groseclose, professor of biology and chairman of the department, twenty-eight alumnae attended a luncheon on Founder's Day, February 22, 1975. Alumnae from as far away as Texas appreciated the first-hand information about the College. Professor emeritus Henry Robinson visited the club meeting as their "male alum." Officers of the club for 1975 are President Lucy Hamilton Lewis, Secretary Susan Watson Black and Treasurer Bonnie Prendergast.

Birmingham

In celebration of Founder's Day, fifty-seven alumnae and guests gathered in Birmingham, Alabama, on February 22, 1975. The program featured Dr. Perry as speaker, emphasizing the greater need for a woman's college due to new roles for women in today's society. Admissions Office representatives were there to spark enthusiasm for the College. According to club president Mary Vines Wright, the personal touch of telephone calls as well as mailed invitations "created a diffusion of interest and made some 'drop-outs' return to the fold." Pauline Willoughby Wood, serving as vice president, Betty Young von Herrmann, as secretary, and Grace Brewer Hunter, as treasurer, complete the Birmingham slate of officers. Plans for the future include helping admissions representatives entertain high school seniors at an October tea.

Attending the meeting were Marilyn Abendroth Tarpy '67, Margaret Batton Terry '49, Frances Bitzer Edson '25, Dorothy Bowron Collins '23, Bunny Brannan Hamrick '47, Grace Brewer Hunter '67, Lela Anne Brewer '48, Lucy Chapman '69, Pamela Coffey '74, Jane Davis Mahon '67, Lucy Durr Dunn '19, Kate Durr Elmore '49, Florrie Erb Bruton '36, Rose Anne Ferrante Waters '71, Elizabeth Forman '36, Christine Fulton Baldwin '71, Louise Gehrken Howie '49, Mildred Goodrich '20, Julia Harvard Warnock '44, Jessie Hodges Kryder '50, Gary Horne Petrey '40, Sallie Horton Lay '25, Genie Blue Howard Mathews '22, Florence Kleybecker Keller '33, Gretchen Kleybecker Chandler '36, Sara Lee Jackson '41, Eloise Lennard Smith '40, Margaret Lorz '33, Myrtice Marianni Donaldson '48, Margaret McRae Edwards '53, Anna Meade Minnigerode '23, Suzie Miller Howick '72, Mary Anne Murphy Hornbuckle '69, Betty Noble

Central Florida

Renewing old ties and establishing new ones, Central Florida alumnae gathered for the first time in Winter Park, Sunday, February 23, 1975. Most important of the business functions was the election of officers: Mary Love L'heureux Hammond, president; Jane Woodell Urschel, vice president; Libby Wilson Blanton, secretary; Carroll Rogers Whittle, treasurer. After the organizational matters, guest of honor Virginia Brown McKenzie, alumnae director, brought the Agnes Scott of 1975 closer for those at the meeting by means of a slide show and personal notes of information.

Presiding over the club for the year 1975-76 is Nancy Barrett Hayes, with Margaret Hartsook Emmons as secretary/treasurer. to the dinner in the Harvard Faculty Club.

Dr. Perry talked of his plans for Agnes Scott, and alumnae were very impressed with both Perrys. Melissa Holt Vandiver '73, assistant to the director of admissions, was also present to answer questions about the admissions situation at the College.

Macon

In February, 1975, club officers and the alumna admissions representative met for lunch at the home of the president, Sara Beth Jackson Hertwig '51. They talked about ways of letting prospective students know what Agnes Scott is like. Money-raising projects were considered and rejected. Everyone seemed to like the idea of sponsoring a seminar open to all who wished to come, and it was agreed to have a club meeting in the spring to get the members' reactions to a seminar next winter.

New Mexico

Although they are 1400 miles away, the alumnae in New Mexico are a loyal group. Ten alumnae (almost half the number living in the whole state) gathered on November 6, 1974, in Albuquerque, in the home of Margie Erickson Charles '59, for dessert and coffee and talk about the College. Assistant Dean of Students Mollie Merrick '57, who was attending a professional meeting in Albuquerque, showed the Robert Frost slide show and told the alumnae firsthand some of the exciting new programs at Agnes Scott.

'21 Secretary and Fund Chairman: Sarah Fulton, 205 Columbia Dr., Decatur, Ga. 30030.

Praise from the Secretary: "As facts worth repeating about the '73-'74 Fund — 1921 ranked ninth in dollars donated ($4,797) and first in percent of class contributing (53% with nearest competitor 48%!) Agents responsible were Thelma Brown Aiken, Eleanor Carpenter, Lois Compton Jennings, Betty Flooding Morgan, Melville Jameson, Sarah McCurdy Evans, Lucile Smith Bishop and Margaret Wade. Except for Lucile, whose eyes are a problem, all are serving again, most for the seventh time! Heartfelt thanks to them and to every donor. Can't we break this noble record in '74-'75?" . . . Notes of sympathy went to Elizabeth Enloe MacCarthy and Rose Chambers Thornton following the deaths of their husbands. Each sent an appreciative acknowledgment. Elizabeth wrote of the pleasure she and Mac took last year in having the grandson and his wife in Chapel Hill, while he was finishing his B.A. "His special interest is anthropology and he plans to do graduate work with a view to teaching. Our other six grandchildren are all girls, the oldest (about to graduate from UNC-Asheville) interested in dramatic literature and criticism, her two sisters interested in music. The other grands, under 15, live in N.Y. and have spent part of every summer in Maine." . . . Va., Charlotte was associated with Ivylyn in the early 20's (when Sarah Fulton, Aimee D. Glover Little, Mary Ann Justice Miracle and Elizabeth Lovett '20 were also on the faculty). Congress in Washington and is sponsoring the Bicentennial activities. Anna's family had a reunion at her house last Easter, 140 strong — the 140th year of the house. She planted 140 dogwoods. 'What's past is prologue'

The alumnae, having received the academic and spiritual heritage of Agnes Scott College, go their separate ways to achieve greatness, to serve the community, to teach another generation or to procreate and nurture new lives for perpetuity.

There is no greater testimony to the Agnes Scott experience than an alumna's sending her own daughter to alma mater. We are the daughters of Agnes Scott College; therefore, our daughters who attend are "granddaughters." On campus this spring were 55 eligible members of the Granddaughters Club.

Recently we invited these "granddaughters" to visit us at the Alumnae House and lined them up on the front steps for a photograph. Below, you see those who were able to appear at the appointed time. The most often repeated exclamation was: "I didn't know your mother went to Agnes Scott!"

How many of you can look at those bright, spirited young women and recall the achievements of their mothers when they were on campus? The "granddaughters," in turn, may want to save this picture to show someday to their own Agnes Scott daughters.

The
1974-1975
Agnes Scott Fund Report

Paul McCain, Vice President for Development, goes over current Fund figures with Dr. Perry.

A special word of gratitude...

... to the alumnae and friends who have strengthened the programs of the College with their generous contributions of time and gifts to the Agnes Scott Fund. During the 1974-75 year the College received $890,849 from 2,853 alumnae and 1,001 other donors, including the 642 firms that gave through the Georgia Foundation for Independent Colleges.

Dedicated volunteer leadership is responsible for the success of the Agnes Scott Fund. Led by Blythe Posey Ashmore '58, General Chairman, and Sis Burns Newsome '57, Alumnae Chairman, 61 Class Chairmen and 455 Class Agents contacted their fellow alumnae on behalf of the Fund.

Except for those who preferred to give anonymously, all individuals, foundations, and businesses who made their gifts directly to Agnes Scott are listed on the following pages. These donors made their gifts to the College from July 1, 1974 through June 30, 1975; gifts received after the latter date will be shown in the report for 1975-76.

The Tower Circle is that group of donors whose gifts were $1,000 or more. Symbols after the other names indicate membership in the other special donor groups: the Colonnade Club (CC) for those who gave $500 or more, the Quadrangle Quorum (Q) for donors of $250 or more, and the Century Club (C) for donors of $100 or more. The asterisk (*) in the class listings indicates an alumna who served as a Class Agent for the Fund. The double asterisks () indicate donors who are now deceased.

Please let the Agnes Scott Fund Office know of any corrections which may be needed, so that we can be sure our records are accurate.

To worker and donor alike, our appreciation for your response; the entire College community welcomes this opportunity to thank you.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPORT

FOR 1974-1975

AMERICAN EDUCATION 1975: ENDS AND MEANS

THE DECADE NOW ENDING has seen in the United States as searching and dramatic a questioning of the basic assumptions and institutions of our society as has any decade in our history. The sum of the consequent changes still underway in American social, political, and cultural life can only be described as a revolution. We may deplore the term revolution — as overly dramatic or over-worked — but the questioning and the calls for change continue.

Much of the discussion and the action have had to do with the setting of priorities and the distribution of power in the social and political areas of our national life. It is not surprising that much of the debate, with its accompanying pressures for change, has centered in our schools and colleges. For educational institutions from their founding and by their nature have been, and should be, seedbeds and centers of change. Sometimes, indeed, they have served not as the agents but rather as examples of the need for change, or even as victims of change.

For several years now, American campuses have been almost totally free of the unreason and violence which convulsed many of them during 1967-70. Nonetheless, on our relatively peaceful and even apathetic campuses today, the questioning and the debate still go on. Today's atmosphere, however, is rarely one of confrontation and polemic, but rather of quiet, and in some quarters, despairing crisis.

Let me say at once that, in my judgment, there is abundant reason throughout American education for a sense of urgent concern, even of crisis, but not for despair. I do not discount the very serious financial problems which threaten many school systems and many colleges and universities. Indeed, the financial crisis in education has been with us for several years; and, despite current signs of recovery in the national economy, the educational sector shows few signs of imminent relief. Most of us in the colleges and universities expect this crisis to continue for at least another decade, and our plans for dealing with it are shaped accordingly.

Serious as it is, the lack of money is only one of several conditions which threaten American education today at all levels. A number of forces in recent years — war, racism, poverty, campus unrest, inflation and recession, declining moral values, to mention the most obvious — have together resulted in a widespread questioning of the aims and effectiveness of our entire educational system, and especially of traditional collegiate, i.e. liberal arts, education. The result has been a loss of education's credibility among students, parents, and the general public; a confusion as to educational aims and values among both academics and the public; a weakening of our sense of purpose and our faith in education as the best and surest route to individual fulfillment and a better society. Taken together these several current conditions can well be called higher education's crisis of identity and purpose.

It is deeply gratifying to be able to report that Agnes Scott has so far largely avoided most of the problems which beset a majority of our sister institutions in 1975. Blessed with strong resources, which have been administered with both prudence and imagination by a wise Board of Trustees, the College continues to operate with a balanced budget which annually has provided for salary increases, larger allotments for library and instructional equipment, an enviable student-faculty ratio, and needed improvements to buildings and grounds. With careful planning, we have reason to face the future with cautious optimism.

Like all educational enterprises in these troubled times, we have shared in the current concern as to our own proper institutional purposes and the effectiveness of the total educational experience we seek to offer at Agnes Scott. Yet among students, faculty, and staff, I sense no weakening of our commitment to the liberal arts, to strong academic standards, to superior undergraduate teaching, to our Christian heritage and the Honor Code, and to our ideal of a lively and caring community of learning. Rather, I sense a strong willingness to reaffirm our traditional commitments and to continue the self-study and self-evaluation of our programs and policies in order that they may have new strengths and a fresh appeal and relevance for today's young women. The reaffirmation of such aims and the implementation of procedures and programs for realizing them with fresh action and renewed dedication have consumed a major share of our time and energies during the past busy year.

THE 1974-75 YEAR

To most of us in college communities, every year seems busy and full, usually too much so. All of us lament the pace of activities, the pressure of deadlines, the lack of time for creative thinking, and even creative loafing! Yet, in retrospect, we remember many days and evenings of fun and achievement, much shared happiness, some treasured hours of quiet thought for reminiscence and for dreams. The 1974-75 year, even for these demanding times, was an unusually full and busy one: a rich academic and cultural program, continuing changes in policies and procedures, much discussion and debate, some misunderstandings and frustrations, but withal much hard work, much solid achievement, and all in an atmosphere of courtesy and reason. On balance, it was a good year; and I am especially grateful to my colleagues on faculty and staff, and to our students, who made it so. Their support was loyal and generous; their dissent, when voiced, was constructive, courteous, and equally loyal. I am grateful also to the Board of Trustees and to our alumnae, whose continuing leadership and support have also helped significantly to make 1974-75 a sound and positive year.

In reporting to the Board of Trustees at our November, 1974 meeting, I listed five key areas of continuing concern in my hopes and plans for Agnes Scott. They were, and are, the following: (1) an educational program, in keeping with our Christian heritage, which combines traditional liberal arts strengths and disciplines with flexible and imaginative opportunities for young women interested in further training and in careers; (2) an enlarged student body of 650-700 undergraduates with no sacrifices of academic quality; (3) faculty and staff salaries and benefits commensurate with Agnes Scott's resources and stature; (4) a student financial aid program sufficient to maintain a student body of character and ability regardless of means; (5) equipment, physical plant, and grounds adequate for a superior educational program and for efficiency, comfort, and beauty. In each of these important areas, I believe we have made progress this year.

Agnes Scott's academic program continues to be comprehensive and demanding. Degree requirements still include satisfactory work in each of the three traditional areas of the liberal arts: humanities, social sciences, and natural science and mathematics. Evidence of competence in composition and reading, knowledge of at least one foreign language, and some understanding of the Judaeo-Christian dimensions of Western civilization (through a course in Biblical literature) are also required. Increasingly in recent years, students have been allowed greater flexibility, a larger selection of course offerings, and more opportunities for independent work and interdepartmental programs; but the Agnes Scott degree is still built around a liberal arts core. For example, this year the Faculty reduced the maximum number of hours allowed in the major field (from 80 to 72), thereby encouraging a student to range even more broadly beyond her major field; but work in at least one of the fine arts (art, creative writing, music, theatre) was added as a degree requirement.

Among other academic program changes this year let me mention two of special note. Last fall, the Faculty approved a combined degree program with Georgia Tech, whereby young women interested in engineering may obtain both an Agnes Scott liberal arts degree and a Georgia Tech engineering degree in five years. The program will be supervised by members of both faculties, and candidates will meet each institution's degree requirements. While we do not expect a rush of Agnes Scott students to engineering, we do consider this new program a significant broadening of our curricular offerings in a day when young women are increasingly interested in career opportunities. We also welcome this closer academic relationship with an old friend and outstanding educational neighbor.

A second curricular development I wish to report is our recently expanded program for "women beyond the usual college age," now known as the "Non-traditional Student Program." We launched this venture last fall with about a dozen women, and by year's end there were 26 enrolled. We expect at least 50 in the program during 1975-76. These women range in age from the mid-twenties to the sixties, their academic backgrounds vary from high school equivalency to a Ph.D., but most have had some previous college work. Most have children and are juggling babysitters and car pools in order to return to college, and a few are employed full-time and have worked out arrangements which enable them to come to campus for a course. Half of them are receiving financial aid from Agnes Scott in the form of work scholarships or tuition grants. They are taking a wide variety of courses for academic credit, all are in regular college courses, and some are degree applicants. Although most were apprehensive about "returning to college," all have done well so far. In addition to the benefits they receive, they have made real contributions in maturity, motivation, and spirit. Faculty who teach them and students in their classes have responded to their presence with enthusiasm. The Non-Traditional Student Program has had a most successful first year, and we look forward to its growth as an opportunity to serve the educational interests of Atlanta-area women of all ages.

No mention of the Non-Traditional Student Program would be complete without an expression of appreciation to this year's Administrative Intern, Conway Henderson (Mrs. A. J.), a Randolph-Macon alumna, who, with the able assistance of Dean Julia T. Gary and Director of Admissions Ann Rivers Thompson, developed and directed the program through its initial year.

As for the Administrative Intern Program for Women in Higher Education, which I announced in last year's President's Report, it has had a most promising initial year. Launched by Agnes Scott and fifteen other leading women's colleges, with financial support from the Carnegie Corporation, the program has placed a young alumna of each college on another member campus as an administrative intern to gain in-depth exposure to a variety of college administrative responsibilities. Our intern, Ann Roberts Divine (Mrs. Jay) '67, worked in the President's Office at Mary Baldwin College, while Connie Henderson worked at Agnes Scott in Dean Gary's office. Each intern also had opportunities to learn something of the general operation of other administrative offices, including admissions, student affairs, business, and development. We have enjoyed having Connie Henderson here and have benefited from her stay with us. She will be succeeded at Agnes Scott this fall by Harriet Higgins, a Wells College alumna, who will work chiefly in the Office of the Vice President for Business Affairs. Our own alumna intern, Patricia Ann Stringer '68, will be at Goucher College.

In addition to class preparation, teaching, and counseling with students, much of the Faculty's remaining time this past year has been absorbed in more than the usual number of faculty meetings, in which, with exemplary patience and goodwill, the Faculty discussed, revised, and finally adopted a completely new set of Faculty Bylaws, based on those recommended by a Temporary Executive Committee of the Faculty which had been at this demanding task for about two years. Through appropriate committees responsible to the Faculty, the new Bylaws provide for the administration of Agnes Scott's academic program, under the President and the Dean of the Faculty, by those who are most intimately concerned with it, our full-time teachers. The Faculty Bylaws conform with the revised College Bylaws adopted by the Board of Trustees last fall. Together these two instruments provide a current and comprehensive statement of administrative organization and procedural rules and policies for both administrative and faculty operation. Like any such instruments, our Bylaws will undoubtedly be adapted and clarified as experience with them may require; but they represent a sound base for action, and I am most grateful to all who shared the arduous task of putting them together and working for their adoption.

Despite the pressures of a period of heightened uncertainty and change, in education and throughout our national life, teaching and learning remain top priorities at Agnes Scott; and both, in my judgment, are continuing at a high level of dedication, competence, and concern. Both Faculty and students have resisted the temptations to follow dubious new vocationally oriented programs, voicing instead a renewed commitment to the liberal arts and, at the same time, a receptiveness to sound innovation and experiment. Some of the latter I have already mentioned; space forbids a complete listing, but a few others may be noted here as characteristic. The courses in Accounting and Economic Decision-making introduced this past year were well received and enjoyed full registrations. Historian in Residence Bell Wiley's course on the Civil War and Reconstruction was deservedly popular, as were his public lectures and field trips. Our summer seminars in Europe continue to be a value adjunct to the campus curriculum, with the summer of 1974 featuring trips to Germany under Professor Gunther Bicknese (German) and to Spain under Professors Constance Shaw (Spanish) and Marie Pepe (Art). In 1975, Professor Michael Brown conducted a seminar in Britain on Tudor-Stuart England (with more than 30 students), and Professor Theodore Mathews took the Agnes Scott Glee Club for a symposium and study in Vienna, with side trips and appearances in several neighboring countries. A new trip this past summer was Professor Harry Wistrand's Desert Seminar, in which he and several Agnes Scott biology students, traveling in the new College mini-bus, explored desert areas in Arizona, California, Oklahoma, New Mexico, and Texas.

With the close of the 1974-75 academic year, Agnes Scott lost through retirement the full-time services of two outstanding faculty members, Professors W. Joe Frierson and Michael A. McDowell. Professor Frierson taught in the Department of Chemistry from 1946 until his retirement, serving for twenty-seven of those years as Chairman of the Department. A dedicated and popular teacher, he is also a recognized research chemist and author. When the William Rand Kenan, Jr. Professorship of Chemistry was established at Agnes Scott in 1969, Dr. Frierson was its first incumbent. Professor Frierson can never be replaced, but he has been succeeded by his able colleague Professor Marion T. Clark as Kenan Professor and Chairman of the Department.

Professor Michael McDowell, Chairman of the Department of Music, joined the Agnes Scott faculty in 1950. An accomplished pianist and organist, and a skillful teacher, he has not only enriched the cultural life of our campus but of the entire Atlanta community. I am glad to report that he will continue to teach piano students here in the coming year. Succeeding Professor McDowell as Chairman of the Department of Music is Dr. Ronald L. Byrnside, who arrived this past summer from the University of Illinois. He received his musical training at the Cincinnati Conservatory and Yale before earning his doctorate at Illinois, where he was recently recognized as one of the University's most popular undergraduate teachers. Combining many talents in both classical and contemporary music, Professor Byrnside has composed and written in a number of musical fields.

The college-wide Long Range Planning Committee, with representatives from the trustees, faculty, administration, students, and alumnae, has been meeting periodically since January. Its three sub-committees — on the academic program, student life, and finance and development — have been collecting information and eliciting suggestions from the College community through open hearings and discussion groups. Plans now call for an accelerated pace in the coming year, culminating in the drafting of a report in the summer of 1976. Suggestions are still welcome and may be addressed to the Committee in care of the President's Office.

In another major area of our concern, that of student admissions and enrollment, we continue to make encouraging progress. Like most American colleges, especially those in the private sector, Agnes Scott experienced a gradual decline in enrollment in the early '70's. While the rate of student attrition remained constant in this period (1969/70-1972/73), with more than 60% of each entering class graduating four years later, freshman classes were successively smaller. In September, 1974, however, that trend was reversed, with an entering class which was slightly larger than its predecessor. It is most gratifying to report that this year's freshman class will in turn be larger than its predecessor by about ten per cent. There is further reassurance in the additional fact that, even in these restless and peripatetic times, attrition in the upper classes approximates the percentages of those of the past five years. Also encouraging are the recent national indications of a renewed interest in women's colleges.

We are tremendously grateful to Director of Admissions Ann Rivers Thompson and her imaginative and hard-working staff, as well as to our faculty, students, and alumnae who have shared in various ways in the search for new Agnes Scott students. There is reason for satisfaction, but none for complacency. Rebuilding our student body to its average size of recent years (approximately 650) will be a slow and difficult job in the face of a still declining national applicant pool and of our determination to keep standards high. But we are on the way!

Adequate financial compensation of faculty and staff continues to be a major priority, and in this important area the past year has also seen progress. Despite current economic uncertainties and the increasing cost of almost everything (food, utilities, supplies) — indeed, in recognition of such conditions — the Board of Trustees has approved increases in faculty and staff salaries and wages for 1975-76. Individual increases are based on a combination of across-the-board and merit adjustments, and average better than 8% for faculty (where our national ranking is still least favorable) and about 6% for staff. Increases of 10% have also been approved for retired personnel receiving pensions from the College. The average faculty base salary for 1975-76 will be more than $1000 above last year's average, and the top of our faculty salary scale will again show an increase of $2000 over the top of the preceding year. Fringe benefits for faculty and staff will average more than 15% of base salary in 1975-76.

Adequate financial aid to students who need it remains another high priority at Agnes Scott. Rising costs affect students and their families as well as faculty and staff.

Along with virtually all colleges and universities, public and private, Agnes Scott has found it necessary to increase tuition and fees in recent years. Three facts should be emphasized, however, with respect to these increases: first, our increases have been less than the upward rate of inflation; second, our total tuition and fees are still the lowest of all the top-ranking women's colleges; and third, we have each year increased our student financial aid budget by a larger percentage than our increases in tuition and fees. As our catalog and recruiting publications emphasize, "the College meets the full computed financial need of all students who are accepted for admission." Such a policy is an indication of our continued determination to see that no qualified student is denied an Agnes Scott education for lack of funds. No single item or area of expenditure has increased more in recent years than our financial aid commitment. Approximately 40% of our students receive some form of financial aid directly from Agnes Scott; other sources of federal, state, and private aid increase this figure to some 60%.

A chief function of the college president and his administrative staff is to facilitate the coming together of student and teacher in the experience of learning. In addition, administrators have the corollary duty of seeing that teachers and students have adequate tools (books, equipment, laboratories) for teaching and study, and a congenial atmosphere in which the process may flourish. Fortunately, Agnes Scott's library, laboratories, and other material resources for learning are, in general, superior. But they require constant maintenance and renewal.

Improvements begun last year on buildings and grounds are continuing as scheduled. The exteriors of Presser Hall, Buttrick Hall, and the McCain Library have been weather-proofed and steam-cleaned. Work on the interior renovation of the Library is underway, including much-needed additional stack areas, a fire-stair in the stacks, a new elevator serving all floors, new facilities for storage and use of audio-visual equipment, new lighting and furnishings for more comfortable study. The Library project, when completed in the summer of 1976, should give us an efficient and comfortable center for study and for the housing of our growing collection (now over 140,000 volumes) through our centennial year.

A very rainy summer has pointed up our need to complete roof repairs, begun last spring, on most of our buildings. Repainting and general renovation and upkeep continue on a planned schedule. Our much-loved Supervisor of Buildings and Grounds, Joe B. Saxon, retired this year after almost twenty years of loyal service to Agnes Scott. Coming to the College in 1956, he worked in a number of maintenance areas until named Supervisor of Buildings in 1968. With the sudden death of Business Manager P. J. Rogers in 1970, Mr. Saxon assumed even broader duties and until his retirement was responsible for much of the day-to-day non-academic operation of the College plant. As friend and congenial co-worker, he will be greatly missed. In July Mr. Saxon's successor, Mr. John J. Hug assumed his duties as Director of Physical Plant. With previous experience at St. Bernard College in Alabama and at the University of Wisconsin-Parkside, Mr. Hug has already shown himself a most knowledgeable and energetic worker in this important post.

President Perry contemplates a busy schedule during the College's 87th session.

In the area of business affairs, both the College and the Decatur community suffered a loss when Mr. William M. Hannah, Treasurer of the College since 1967, resigned in May to accept the position of Vice President for Business Affairs at Millsaps College in Mississippi. For almost eight years Bill Hannah and his lovely wife Marie contributed much in service and friendship to many areas of our local life. We shall miss them, and we wish them much happiness at Millsaps.

Every Agnes Scott year sees a rich variety of offerings in concerts, lectures, art shows, theatre, and ceremonial occasions which mark traditional milestones in the College year; 1974-75 was no exception. It is my hope that our neighbors in Decatur and Atlanta are increasingly aware of Agnes Scott's numerous cultural offerings, most of which are open to the public. Space forbids a complete recording here of even the major events of 1974-75, but the accompanying list affords a fair sampling.

In the area of student life, I am pleased to report that Martha Huntington's first year as Dean of Students saw a number of significant developments and a discernible growth in cordial relations between students and the Dean of Students Office. Two matters are especially worthy of note: our new College-wide Health Service and new regulations with respect to the use of alcoholic beverages on campus.

Throughout much of last year Dean Huntington conducted a study of our College Health program, consulting not only with Dean Gary, Vice President Henderson, and student leaders, but also with officials of the Emory Community Nursing Service, a private non-profit corporation sponsored by the Woodruff School of Nursing at Emory University. The result of our studies was the adoption of a cooperative health care program for the College community (students and employees and their dependents) administered by the Emory Community Nursing Service. The program will begin on an experimental basis in the 1975-76 school year. It will involve no additional cost to students but will offer them a broader health program. Our Health Center (formerly called the Infirmary) will be staffed 24 hours a day by Nurse Practitioners (Registered Nurses with masters degrees) who will be qualified and prepared to carry out medication and treatment at any hour. Patients in need of specialized services will be referred to a staff of consulting internists, psychiatrists, and other specialists in the area. In addition to service to students, the Health Service will make available to our faculty and staff and their dependents, for a modest fee, such services as allergy and immunization shots, blood pressure measurement, nutrition guidance, and screening diagnostic tests.

In recent years, College policy with respect to student use of alcoholic beverages — possession or use heretofore prohibited on campus — has been an issue of recurrent concern. Last year the Representative Council of Student Government again examined the policy, distributed a questionnaire to students and faculty, and, in response, recommended a revised policy which would permit beer, wine, and alcoholic punch to be served, in compliance with state and local laws, at campus-wide social functions in designated campus areas as coordinated and evaluated by the Board of Student Activities and as approved by the Dean of Students. No College funds would be used for the purchase of alcoholic beverages, and their possession or use in dormitory rooms would still be prohibited.

After thorough discussion the Administrative Committee of the College approved the recommended new policy in November, and it was submitted to the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees at its December meeting. The Committee considered the proposal carefully, listened to both assenting and dissenting representatives of the Administrative Committee, and voted to recommend to the full Board the adoption of the new policy, to become effective with the 1975-76 academic year. At the May meeting of the Board of Trustees, the Executive Committee's recommendation was submitted for action and, after full discussion, adopted by a majority vote of the Trustees.

Let me add that I was impressed and pleased by the unfailing courtesy and mature concern of our students, pro and con, throughout the period in which this emotion-charged issue was under consideration. I believe they will exercise a similar maturity and cooperative attitude in administering the new policy under supervision of the Dean of Students. At the end of its first year of operation, the policy will be reviewed and evaluated by the Administrative Committee.

The coming session will be the second of our two-year experiment with a modified academic calendar. As in the past year, first quarter examinations will be held in November, and students will leave just before Thanksgiving for a combined Thanksgiving-Christmas holiday, returning to begin second quarter classes in the first week of the new year. The experiment was undertaken to offer students savings in travel (by eliminating one round-trip home) and opportunities to find employment during the holiday season. In order to minimize the slight loss of class-time meetings in the fall quarter, classes were begun earlier in September. Many have expressed a liking for the new schedule, but overall Faculty and student reactions to the calendar experiment have been mixed, with no clear-cut preference evident at this time. A decision will be reached early in 1975-76 as to our academic calendar for the immediate future.

Dean of the Faculty Julia Gary reviews the newly adopted Faculty Bylaws with the President.

Again in this past year I have enjoyed knowing and working with the splendid women who are our alumnae, especially Alumnae Association President Jane King Allen '59 and her colleagues of the Executive Board. Virginia Brown McKenzie '47, has demonstrated great energy and organization in her first year as Director of Alumnae Affairs, and developments underway should insure substantial growth of our Alumnae clubs throughout the country, with resultant increase in Alumnae activity, especially in such areas as student recruitment and the enhancement of Agnes Scott's general reputation as a leading women's college of national stature. We were sorry to lose Associate Director Carey Bowen Craig '62, who left us in early summer because of the imminent arrival of Bowen Butler Craig, who was born on July 22. Carey's many talents will be missed, and we shall hope to have her back again on the College rolls in the near future. She has been succeeded as editor of the Alumnae Quarterly by Martha Whatley Yates '45, who has had wide experience in writing, editing, and public relations. A widow, Mrs. Yates is the author of a forthcoming book, Coping: A Survival Manual for Women Alone.

In addition to greeting and working with alumnae on campus and in the Decatur-Atlanta area, I have enlarged my circle of alumnae friends through most pleasant visits during the past year in the following cities: Augusta, Dalton, Gainesville, Griffin, Macon, Birmingham, Boston, Charlotte, Nashville, New Orleans, New York, Philadelphia, Roanoke, and San Antonio.

The Anna Young Alumnae House underwent some interior renovations and exterior painting during the past year. Of special note is the fine work of beautification done in the alumnae gardens during the winter and spring by several intrepid volunteer alumnae gardeners: Caroline McKinney Clarke '27, Nelle Chamlee Howard '34, Bella Wilson Lewis '34, Betty Wood Smith '49, and Frances Gilliland Stukes '24. We are grateful for their work and for the example it has set!

Indeed, Agnes Scott alumnae everywhere continue to support us loyally and generously in numerous ways. Almost 2900 alumnae (some 32%) contributed $242,452 to the 1974-75 Agnes Scott Fund, which totaled just under $900,000. Hundreds of alumnae contributed not only money but time and energy as Class Chairmen and Agents for the Fund, as Alumnae Admissions Representatives, and as active members of local, regional, and national elements of the Alumnae Association. To all of them we are deeply grateful; we can be proud of both the volume and the quality of our alumnae support.

As always, many other friends — individuals, corporations, foundations — added their gifts to those of our alumnae. The accompanying table indicates the sources of these gifts and the uses to which they were allocated in 1974-75. Space forbids the individual acknowledgment here of the thousands of gifts to Agnes Scott during the year although we have tried to send our personal thanks to every donor. A number of gifts and grants are worthy of special mention, however, and I am glad to record them here. From three anonymous foundations we received munificent grants of $200,000, $100,000, and $45,000; the first two were to be used for capital improvements, the third for scholarships. A very generous trustee made an unrestricted gift of $97,000. A grant of $12,000 from the Camille and Henry Dreyfus Foundation, together with additional unrestricted gifts, was used to purchase some $50,000 worth of new and advanced equipment for our chemistry laboratories. For scholarship purposes the following were received: $40,000 from the Charles A. Dana Foundation for the ongoing Dana Scholar Program; $35,000 from Clara May Allen Reiner '23; $25,000 from Mr. Alex McLennan for a graduate fellowship in medicine; a bequest of $13,300 from the estate of Louise Abney King '20; a gift annuity of $10,288 from Virginia F. Prettyman '34, and a bequest of $10,000 from the estate of Anna Rebecca Harwell Hill '13.

Thanks to the generosity of many friends, the foresight and judgment of the Board's Investment Committee, and the careful planning and sound management of our administrative staff, Agnes Scott has again completed another fiscal year "in the black." At the same time we were able to continue improvement of our programs and facilities, and to increase compensation for all our staff. We are grateful for our good fortune and are determined to maintain our momentum in the difficult days ahead.

In a special summer issue of the President's Newsletter it was my pleasure to introduce five outstanding new members of the Board of Trustees, elected at the annual meeting in May. Inasmuch as the Newsletter carried pictures and biographical sketches of these new trustees, I shall merely identify them here and welcome them to an enterprise to which I know they will add fresh vision and strength. They are: Katherine A. Geffcken '49, Professor of Greek and Latin, Wellesley College; Donald R. Keough, President of Coca-Cola, U.S.A., Atlanta; Nancy Holland Sibley (Mrs. W.A.L., Jr.) '58, Charlotte; Samuel Reid Spencer, President of Davidson College; and Thomas Rice Williams, President of the First National Bank of Atlanta.

Again this past summer Agnes Scott has been host to a number of conferences held on the campus. They included several groups which were here last summer when we first opened the campus to such meetings. Church groups, a dance camp, and school administrators, numbering in all some 700, participated in these activities here in June, July, and August. Virtually all of these groups have asked to return in 1976.

THE FUTURE: REAFFIRMING THE PROMISE

Caught up as all of us are in the immediate concerns of our own particular lives and communities — of Agnes Scott — it is easy to lose sight of the larger scene and the inevitable influence of the total society, its climate and problems, upon our local situation. Many of the troubles and the challenges now facing higher education generally are very much a part of the broader malaise and ferment of our whole society. Business and government, as well as education, are undergoing the formidable adjustments necessary in the aftermath of the Asian war and Watergate, of recession and inflation, and in the face of continuing unemployment and the energy crisis. In education some of the most visible current troubles are the slowing rate of increase in enrollments (with the prospect of actual decline in the 1980's), the confusion and lack of agreement over the purpose of college education, the uncertainty of many qualified young people as to whether college is actually worth the time and money, the "crisis management" mood of administrators faced with the immediate need of short-term answers for today's survival.

A disturbing result of current conditions, in education and throughout our national life, has been a widespread mood of disenchantment and even despair, of loss of credibility and of faith in ourselves and our larger purposes — as individuals, as institutions, as a society. If this is a simplistic diagnosis, the answer I propose for our ills may seem equally so: we must recapture the sense of meaning and purpose in our individual lives and hence in our institutions and our society. Or we must evolve some new code of values which will give fresh meaning and purpose to our individual and corporate lives. In short, we must reaffirm the promise of human life.

In such a reaffirmation education should play a central role, as it has throughout man's history, reasserting its own historic commitment to the search for wisdom as well as knowledge, for the discovery of values and meaning as well as facts and phenomena. To those of us in colleges like Agnes Scott, such seeking and such discoveries are what liberal education is all about.

We are tremendously fortunate at Agnes Scott that, for a number of reasons, we have avoided, or been spared, the crippling shock and the resultant confusion and hurt which recent national events and conditions have caused on many American campuses. We have not been untouched — nor should we wish to remain aloof from the currents and even the problems of our times. But our somewhat more fortunate lot has given us the opportunity — and indeed the obligation — to assess our own needs and purposes, to plan for our future, to reanimate and reaffirm the promise which is Agnes Scott at her best.

It is all too easy to catalog our troubles — in higher education and in our society. Let us not forget at such times that there are also hopeful as well as discouraging signs, and many records of modest successes as well as failures. Among hopeful signs in higher education we may cite the following: recent studies and polls indicate that students are generally satisfied with their colleges and their education and that faculty like their institutions and their profession; alumnae also express satisfaction with their college experience, and private contributions continue high; federal and state support of education, direct and indirect, continues strong; for the first time black high school graduates are entering college at the same rate as whites. Even enrollment rates, which are disappointing to many, are the results of some historic and demographic changes which are themselves good, i.e.

the slowdown in population growth, a rise in the college "stop-out" rate, a renewed interest in varying the forms of "post-secondary" education.

As in the past, this present winter of our troubles and discontent in higher education will be succeeded, I am convinced, by a new spring of fresh growth and vigor. There will be changes, but I am confident that, working together, we can meet them at Agnes Scott without any sacrifices of our essential character and purpose. To help us in this task — an exciting, not a depressing one — we have a number of assets, among which I would single out three at this particular time. First, there is strong and widespread agreement throughout the Agnes Scott family — students, faculty, staff, trustees, alumnae — as to our proper institutional values and purpose. Second, we are in a sound financial condition with an adequate physical plant and strong material resources. Third, our recently revised machinery of faculty and student governance gives to each of these essential groups a clearer and more significant voice in the determination of College policy and procedures.

At Agnes Scott we shall continue to try to maintain a teaching and learning community dedicated to Christian values and the disciplined development of the whole person. How we teach and learn here are of vital importance; of equal importance is how we live, how we exemplify in our lives the values and disciplines we teach, the wisdom and the good we seek. Values are exemplified better than they are taught; the word is buttressed by the deed. We must live our precepts if we are to affirm effectively the promise inherent in humane and liberal learning. This is the kind of living and learning which Agnes Scott will continue to pursue — for today's most insistent needs and tomorrow's larger hopes.

CLASS NEWS

News deadlines for the next four issues of the Quarterly are: Fall, August 30; Winter, October 30; Spring, December 30; Summer, April 30.

Institute

Representative: Emily Winn, Presbyterian Home of South Carolina, Summerville, SC 29483.

Annie Wiley Preston attended Alumnae Day with three generations of her family, her daughter, Shannon Preston Cumming, '30, her granddaughters, Shannon Cumming McCormick, '60 and Sarah Stokes Cumming Mitchell, '63; and her great-granddaughter (and future alumna?), Anne Wiley Mitchell.

Academy

Representative: Mildred Beatty Miller (Mrs. G.S.), Carlton Towers, Apt. 201, 470 3rd St., St. Petersburg, FL 33701.

Lucile E. Smith Eldridge's daughter, Eloise Henry, reports that her mother was very active until she suffered her fatal stroke, and that she dearly loved Agnes Scott and spoke of it often.

'15 Acting President: Grace Esther Harris Durant (Mrs. William Louis), 1570 West Ave., Mobile, AL 36604.

Although only Mary Hyer Dale and Cornelia Dunwoody Cameron were able to attend the class' sixtieth reunion, Grace Harris Durant wrote to all of her classmates and reported that she had many responses . . . Beverly Anderson Chautin, since Dr. Chautin's retirement from the University of Virginia and the Surgeon General's Department, divides her time between Sarasota, FL and Charlottesville, VA. . . . Anne Brower says that in spite of her age, she's "still kicking." . . . Mary Hamilton served as hostess at the Robert E. Lee Chapel at Washington and Lee University for six years following her retirement from teaching. . . . Rosa Hill Strickland, whose friends remember her soprano voice as one of the best, has had to give up her music, but had a visit, several years ago, from her vocal teacher. . . . Mary Hyer Dale, a great-grandmother, hears occasionally from Frances West and Mary Hamilton. Mary Dale flew from her home in Winter Garden, FL to attend the reunion. . . . Frances Kell Munson says that she knows that she is blessed by having her three great-grandchildren live near her. . . . Sally May King is grateful that her teaching career, although very satisfying, is behind her rather than ahead, because of the changing times. . . . A touchingly thoughtful letter was received from Morrill Turner Hutchinson, the daughter of Henrietta Lambdin Turner, telling of her mother's invalidism following brain surgery in 1974. The sympathy of the class goes to the entire family on the death of Henrietta's husband, Hugh, in April, 1975. . . . Although Kathleen Mitchell Jackson celebrated her eighty-third birthday in May, she still teaches in a private school in New York City, and enjoys needlepoint, bridge and crossword puzzles. . . . Author Joins Alumnae Office Staff

Agnes Scott is indeed fortunate to have acquired the services of a truly professional writer to serve as editor of The Agnes Scott Alumnae Quarterly. She is Martha Whatley Yates '45, who comes to us well-qualified for her job.

In college she majored in English and physics and amassed enough hours to minor in five other subjects, journalism being one of them. She has always been involved in writing and public relations from the time she was reporting for The Agnes Scott News until she wrote her own book, Coping: A Survival Manual for Women Alone, which is to be presented to the public early in 1976 by Prentice-Hall.

In the interim she has had many articles published in broadcasting, architectural, and educational journals. While she served as assistant news director of a local radio station, her news team won the coveted Green Eyeshade Award presented by Sigma Delta Chi, honorary journalistic society, for outstanding broadcast journalism.

In addition to her professional competency she comes to us with an enriched living experience. She was the very first Agnes Scott student who, after marriage during her sophomore year, was allowed to continue her course work and receive her B.A. degree. Her husband, George Yates, had his own architectural firm. Together they raised four fine children. Following George's untimely death in 1970, just before the children were college bound, she and the children have worked together to cope. The oldest child, George Scott, 24, named after Agnes Scott, lives in Nashville, Tenn. The other three are at home: Mark, 22, a botanist; Elaine, 20, a published poet; and John, 18, entering the honors program in music as a freshman at the University of Georgia.

While Martha studied at Agnes Scott, she was also a student aide and still found time to participate in extra-curricular activities: Student Government, International Relations Club, the debating team, and the school newspaper. After college she continued her multi-faceted life by adding presidencies of PTA's and garden clubs to her roles as homemaker and career person.

We expect Martha's professional ability and creative talent to make a positive contribution in many areas of alumnae work; for she is also Assistant to the Director of Alumnae Affairs and in that capacity will contribute to ongoing alumnae programs.

Since this is a special issue of The Quarterly, containing the President's Report and the Fund Report, the only evidence of Martha's ability is shown in the picture captions; watch for more of Martha in the next issue.

Letters to the Editor

Well.
The prodigal has returned. But hold the fatted calf and break out the cottage cheese instead.

After years of busyness with my own life, and of watching from the sidelines the happenings of the College and the Alumnae Association, I am back, involved, immersed in the life of the campus, and loving it!

Having been an infrequent supporter of the Alumnae Association, and a negligent donor to the Fund, I am now, as any convert would be, the most vocal and ardent advocate of both. Being on the scene, I have visual proof of the scope of the records kept on every alumna, for instance (did you know they have you filed five different ways?), and of the services offered to each of us by the Association and the College. And no longer do I skim over the annual reports, presidential and financial. The names are now people, and the numbers represent the operation of an energetic, accomplishing, growing institution disseminating one of the best educational experiences available to women today.

And I've learned, for example, that when Dr. Perry appeals to a foundation or an endowment, the first figure he is asked to present is the percentage of contributing alumnae. Understandable; if we don't have enough faith in ASC to give it our financial support, why should they? So I'll be talking a great deal about alumnae contributions, but from the standpoint of letting you know where your money is going, and why every dollar is needed.

About the Quarterly. I'm sure that you've read and enjoyed it as I have, and have seen the steady improvement in content and style, particularly during the past year. Even though I will introduce my own style and innovations, there will still be news of the classes and other familiar features, although some may travel under new names.

I agree wholeheartedly with a former editor of a sister college's magazine when she said that the business of an alumnae publication should be to answer two questions: What has happened to all of us since we left college, and how is it with the College now? I would add a third requirement. I think that the publication should also attempt to continue your education by providing searching, thought-provoking articles of wide interest to college-educated women.

To the Editor:

I have just read the Spring, 1975 Alumnae Quarterly, and enjoyed it very much. I am always proud of our publications.

I enjoyed looking through the class list in the Fund appeal, and am reminded again what a great bargain my education was from Agnes Scott.

To the Editor:

I was especially interested in the article "Gladly Lerne and Teche — Beacon School", in your Alumnae Quarterly, Spring, 1975. You were very kind to give us extra copies which we distributed at the August meeting of the Board of Education.

It is very good to have a college such as Agnes Scott close by. The administration is always cooperative. We continue to appreciate having such good neighbors.

To the Editor

Please send me a current catalog on the college and courses offered. Any other material would be appreciated; for example, what's been the major concern of student government? Are there now ways for students to become actively involved in community affairs? How effective is the career counseling and placement service? I guess I'm more concerned about projecting the students forward, beyond their four years at Agnes Scott.

(And the great "Miss"/"Mrs."/"Ms." controversy rages on:)

To the Editor:

The letter from Margery DeFord Hauck '57 rang a bell. Do you realize that the only items still addressed to me as "Miss" are from Agnes Scott and my mother? Is there a relationship, do you think? Anyway, please change my title from "Miss" to "Ms." in future mailings.

Lynn B. Denton '63

To the Editor:

Please do not change my name. I've been very proud to be Mrs. Chris Sinback. Even though Chris was killed in 1965, I still want to receive mail by that name.

Mary Moss Sinback '39

To the Editor:

I find it somewhat amazing that a women's college still uses "Miss" and "Mrs." as forms of address. Women's liberation has often shown that women are their own worst enemies! I'm by no means a radical liberationist, but I see no reason why it is more important to know if a woman is married than if a man is.

Carolyn M. Craft '64

To the Editor:

The majority of my correspondence is addressed to "Mrs. James A. King." I like it! I find the "title" far from absurd or laughable. Please continue to use my married name.

It is my ambitious intention to try to keep these criteria as my guide. Your help, support, and prayers will be welcome, and — it's great to be back!

Oh, yes. The column's title? Unhappily, that's the way I type — one finger per hand!

Woman and Higher Education

Martha Yates

In this International Year of the Woman, it would do well to assess the status of the single most important thing in woman's efforts to achieve full, recognizable, tangible gains — higher education. There's no argument; without a better-than-adequate education, the woman of today — and tomorrow — will be unable to grow and to attain her goals, whether they are for financial or personal fulfillment. So how is it with higher education today? And how does its condition affect college women — those who are still undergraduates, and those who are alumnae?

To say that private, single-sex, liberal arts colleges have had rough going during the past few years is to belabor the obvious; all colleges and universities have had serious problems. In the past decade, every student-institution relationship has been challenged, tried, and changed. Those problems are, hopefully, over. Now, however, new ones arise. Beset by a steadily decreasing college-age population (down from a 1955 peak birth rate per 1000 of 25.0, to an estimated 15.8 in 1975); by astronomically high operating costs that include salaries of faculties top-heavy with members who were tenured during the time of the engorged enrollments of the Sixties; and by the insistent demands of students that they be equipped for instantaneously successful careers upon graduation, the colleges and universities are facing their worst crisis in recent memory.

Nor are these the only problems. Faculties are restive and many are striking and joining unions. During the second week of the 1975-76 academic year, members of the faculties of the University of Bridgeport, of Rhode Island Junior College, of Thornton, an Illinois community college, and of the eight Chicago City Colleges, were striking for increased salaries, broader fringe benefits, and greater compensation for teaching classes above a teacher's normal load. As a result of the strike, Norman G. Swenson, president of the faculty union at the Chicago colleges, was sentenced to five months in jail for violation of a court injunction against the walkout. The strikes were settled, but only after a three-week disruption of classes.

Like it or not, collective bargaining has arrived on campuses across the country. According to the Sept. 15, 1975, Chronicle of Higher Education, "Leaders of teacher unions expect more major faculty collective-bargaining elections to take place during 1975-76 than in any of the past several years." Bargaining elections are expected at such diverse institutions as the Florida state university system (10,000 members), Kent State, Iowa's community colleges, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Northeastern, and, among others, the Universities of Nebraska, Nevada, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Montana, Pittsburgh, and Vermont.

Students expect more than a crust of bread

Why, suddenly, are faculties thrust into positions formerly acceptable only for members of business and industry, but unthinkable for academics?

For precisely the same reason that both houses of Congress saw fit to override President Gerald Ford's veto, and pass the whopping big $7.9 billion appropriation needed for education during fiscal 1975: because colleges are in trouble. Their costs have exceeded the rate of inflation, and without the allocated funds, educational institutions would have had to increase student costs. Expenses are already high; students expect more than a crust of bread, hard benches, and slates on which to do their work. This is an age of sophistication: sophisticated equipment, sophisticated careers, and sophisticated students. No longer are all freshmen entering college straight out of high school; many have taken off a year or two to work, to travel, to "get it all together." Most know what they want from college and intend to get it, especially so because in many cases, the money paying for that education is money they earned themselves. The students are serious about college; they are not enrolled to evade the draft or because it is the acceptable thing to do. They are in college because they are sophisticated, and they know that they will be graduating into a world of sophisticated, stringent, selective demands. They know that they will have to elbow aside other applicants for every job and every opening in graduate school, and they know that they had better have the best possible preparation for any position they seek.

The colleges and universities are trying to meet these demands by offering courses of study undreamed of — and unnecessary — thirty years ago. They offer study abroad; they participate in exchanges with colleges whose disciplines are completely foreign to their own; they open their doors to members of the opposite sex. Many, to defray the rising costs of operation, are being forced to accept less-than-brilliant scholars. In fact, as stated by Sam A. McCandless, program services officer for the College Entrance Examination Board, the national decline in Scholastic Aptitude Test scores (see box), "presents colleges with an increasingly difficult instructional challenge."

And yet, as stated by Agnes Scott's President Marvin B. Perry in his 1974-75 annual report to alumnae and trustees, "Among students, faculty, and staff, I sense no weakening of our commitment to the liberal arts, to strong academic standards, to superior undergraduate teaching, to our Christian heritage and the honor code, and to our ideal of a lively and caring community of learning . . . The reaffirmation of such aims and the implementation of procedures and programs for realizing them with fresh action and renewed dedication have consumed a major share of our time and energies during the past busy year."

What procedures and programs?

There were two changes in degree requirements made, for instance. The faculty reduced the maximum number of hours allowed in the major field from 80 to 72, and required work in at least one of the fine arts. They also decided to approve a combined degree, with the Georgia Institute of Technology, whereby a student who is interested in engineering may obtain an Agnes Scott liberal arts degree plus a Georgia Tech engineering degree in five years.

Perhaps the most interesting — and significant — curricular development of the past year was the expansion of the program for "Non-traditional Students," those women who are beyond the usual college age. These are the women termed by the April 20, 1975, New York Times as "The fastest growing segment in higher education." They now constitute 48% of the nation's ten million college students, an increase from 39% of eight million students in 1970.

Non-traditional students

Agnes Scott currently has more than three dozen of these students, many of whom are married with families, most of whom are over thirty, and about a third of whom are degree candidates. They are women whose education had been interrupted, who are entering college for the first time, or who are taking refresher courses for their own enrichment. They are taking subjects ranging from English 101 to German, from music to French and psychology. But, except for their ages, it's difficult to categorize all of them specifically as "Non-traditional." Mildred Petty, Agnes Scott's assistant dean of the faculty, says, "It depends on the person defining them. There is one 36-year-old student, for example, who is taking a full fifteen-hour load, and who has already achieved degree-seeking status. By your and my terms, she's certainly non-traditional, yet according to the Treasurer's Office, she's a traditional student. But no matter how they are called, our goal at ASC is to make them feel comfortable in what is a very special program."

Many of these students receive financial aid from Agnes Scott, either in the form of work scholarships or tuition grants, as do approximately 40% of the traditional students; the figure rises to 60% when federal, state, and private aid are added to the total. The aid is necessary; even though the College's increases in tuition and fees (which are still lower than those of any other top-ranked women's college), have been less than the rising rate of inflation, the cost is high — about $4000 per year versus $1650 for the University of Georgia — and few families or students can guarantee being able to pay the entire cost themselves. (As an aid to private colleges, the state of Georgia gives each student entering such an institution a $400 tuition equalization grant.)

And that education for which ASC students are paying so dearly, by whatever means, had better be worth it. There are already some 33,000,000 working women in the U.S. today, and thousands more are added to their numbers each year. Competition is fierce.

So why, in these career-oriented, ecumenical, anything-goes, sexy Seventies, would a young woman select Agnes Scott College? Why a small (569), expensive, Christian, liberal arts (what can she do when she graduates?), women's (only 140 in the country), difficult (students, selected by a faculty committee, must have an SAT score of 1100 or above), college?

Why liberal arts, anyway? In a 1974 study conducted by the American Council on Education, although there was an appreciable drop from 1966 in the number of undergraduates who intended to become educators, there was a marked increase in the number who chose business as a career. (Education, 58,920, business, 72,288). There was a decline in the number selecting engineering as a goal (45,083), but an increase in those who want to enter the field of health, other than as medical doctors (98,950). It is apparent that the swing toward the technical sciences that was generated by the feverish excitement of the space program has slowed, and a steady course of realistic objectivity seems to be apparent. Even to other than its ardent advocates, there still seems to be a very real need for a liberal arts background, whether it is gained at an independent college or from part of a university's college of arts and sciences. It's the jumping-off point for almost any career.

Why a liberal arts college?

As Mark Van Doren states in his book, Liberal Education, "Liberal education is sometimes distinguished from useful education. All education is useful, and none is more so than the kind that makes men free to possess their nature . . . Intellectual activity is more than the application of knowledge, it is the search for truth; and truth found anywhere will have its affinities in other fields . . . It is the fashion now to make fun of what used to be called 'formal discipline' in education . . . Both discipline and freedom are natural human desires, and each throws light upon the other. Men cannot be free unless their minds are free, but it is discipline that makes the mind free to realize its choices, to discriminate among them and determine their practicability." And from Cicero, "He who is ignorant of what happened before his birth is always a child."

What about the young women entering college today? Why select a liberal arts college?

In a September, 1975 ASC Alumnae Quarterly poll of the 170 members of Agnes Scott's newest class, the overwhelming answer from the 160 who participated was, "To gain a well-rounded education." This response was worded in a number of ways, such as: "I wanted a diverse background" (13); or "I need a good education for whatever career I choose" (23); or "I wanted to be exposed to subjects I wouldn't have anywhere else" (15). Six students knew they needed a liberal arts background before specializing in their professions, which included law, education, divinity, and veterinary medicine. Only 11 young women said that the fact that the College offers a liberal arts education was not important; the other 149 were emphatic in their declarations of a need for a well balanced, complete, varied, humanistic approach to education. Or, as one freshman, perceptive beyond her years, succinctly stated, "I wanted to be educated rather than trained."

All right. So the young women who are admitted each year to Agnes Scott are dedicated to the idea of achieving a solid background for whatever else they plan for the remainder of their lives. But why a women's college?

Why a women's college?

"Only a few years ago," stated the New York Times on September 2, 1975, "the women's colleges seemed as obsolete as the corset, doomed to extinction by the general rush to co-education. Only a resolute few held out against these dire forecasts . . . Their faith appears to have been rewarded by this year's application and enrollment figures. The Women's College Coalition, representing 71 institutions, reports an over-all upturn of more than 3% . . . The most persuasive explanation of this turn of events is that these institutions are not being thought of as sheltered schools for future ladies and housewives, but rather have won the confidence and respect of self-reliant women attuned to the feminist movement."

Of the 160 freshmen polled in the Quarterly survey, 26 said that they had no particular reason for choosing Agnes Scott, or that the fact that ASC is a women's college was unimportant. Fifteen others stated that they chose Agnes Scott, not a women's college, and three said they didn't choose it at all; their parents did. Running through all of the other answers, in one form or another, was a recurrent awareness of the need for women's growth and education, and, surprisingly, a resentment toward their male peers. Or, at any rate, toward a world that defers to those peers. Whatever their comments, however, it was transparently clear that (understandably) men were not far from their thoughts. Agnes Scott was chosen by five students because there are "no social pressures"; by two because there are no men to "put you down"; and by 14 because they would be able to concentrate without male distraction. Sixteen young women liked the fact that they would not be inhibited by the presence of men in the classrooms — or the dormitories — and ten were relieved that there would be no competition over men, so that there could be more open friendships with other women. One young woman selected ASC because there would be no large amounts spent on sports programs that "primarily benefit men," and 16 students said that they liked the "relaxed atmosphere." But 24 women were outspoken in their desire to have the opportunity to hold leadership positions that "are generally held by men in a co-ed college," and 27 freshmen stated that a college for women offered more chances for them to assert themselves as women, to develop their potentials, and to prepare themselves to assume the positions that will open to them as women in the world of 1979. As one young woman tersely put it, "I chose a women's college so that the professors will consider me the potential breadwinner."

Women in education

There is no question that the women's movement has given a new importance to the women's college, and the programs are attuned to today's woman's needs. Jill Ker Conway, recently inaugurated president of Smith, feels that a women's college takes women's abilities and aspirations more seriously than do other institutions. And the Carnegie Commission on

Sharing dormitory life is only one

Higher Education reported in 1974 that women who attend women's colleges are more apt to hold leadership positions and to choose what were formerly considered to be traditionally male career fields.

One of these fields, and probably the most important to women in education today — at whatever level or stage — is that of college president. Significant gains have been made: of the 140 women's colleges, 71 (including Goucher, Hunter, Smith, Wellesley, and Wheaton), now have women in the president's chair, and the number of women faculty members and department heads is increasing.

In an effort to bring more women into the administrative picture, the Carnegie Corporation began its Administrative Intern Program for Women in Higher Education three years ago. Participating in the program are 16 colleges, including Agnes Scott, Goucher, Hollins, Mary Baldwin, Mills, Randolph-Macon, Skidmore, Sweet Briar, and Wheaton.

Each intern accepted for the program spends ten months on a campus other than her own, receives a $7,500 stipend, and is assigned to a senior administrator. During the 1975-76 academic year, Patricia Stringer '68 (diplome Universite de Lyon, M.A., Ph.D., Emory experienced by Agnes Scott women.

University), is serving as an intern at Goucher. Her counterpart at ASC is Harriet Higgins, a 1972 graduate of Wells who earned her master's degree in French at Middlebury College, Vermont. Applicants for the program must be nominated by one of the participating colleges, and must have an expressed interest in administration in higher education. With only sixteen openings to be filled, the competition is stiff, and applications must be returned to the offices of the deans by December of the year prior to the April notification of the successful applicants.

Why Agnes Scott?

All of these are encouraging signs, and speak well of the future of women's colleges, but what of today, and what of the young woman who specifically selects Agnes Scott in 1975?

In spite of all of the difficulties besetting educational institutions today, the College must be doing something right. Confounding all reasonable expectations, and due in large part to the dedicated aggressiveness of the Admissions Office representatives — all alumnae — enrollments, including those of non-traditional students, is up over last year's figures. Given the College's determined selectivity, this is no small achievement. How does ASC manage to continue to attract the number and caliber of students who choose the College?

Part of the answer can be found in the Quarterly survey made among the 1975 freshman class. The enrollment of this single class is up 12% over last year's figures, the students come from 21 states and five foreign countries, there are 19 who are daughters of alumnae, and ten freshmen attribute their first interest in Agnes Scott directly to personal contact with alumnae. Only six students said they had no particular reason for selecting the College; the other 154 had decided opinions about their choice.

What does ASC offer?

Most of the young women had visited the College before making their decisions, and were variously impressed with "the friendly atmosphere," "the beautiful campus," and "the student-teacher ratio." One hundred and five of the freshmen chose Agnes Scott because of its reputation for academic excellence, for the size, for its proximity to Atlanta (and, coincidentally, to the young men of Georgia Tech, Emory, and the University!), for the life-style, and for the "personal and intellectual challenge." Ten of the students selected the College because of its honor code, closed dorms, and absence of sororities, and two for its good Christian atmosphere. Several were swayed by the academic standards plus the availability of financial aid, some by the reputation of a particular department, and some by the number of alumnae who go on to graduate schools. Some of the freshmen were influenced in their selection by family members, some by teachers, counselors, principals and the College's admissions representatives, and some because everyone on campus seemed "interested in learning."

One young woman said that she liked the small size, because she would be an "individual instead of a number," several said they felt that this was where they were meant to be, and one summed up her enthusiasm with, "I just had to come to Agnes Scott!"

Mrs. Gloria Jones Howard of Decatur, a grandmother who has returned to college after 20 years, is working toward an undergraduate degree in art, and is one of the 40 non-traditional students on the Agnes Scott campus.

Recognizing its commitment to these young women, Agnes Scott has initiated, in addition to the programs already outlined, many other innovations: The College now offers courses in accounting and economic decision-making . . . ASC offers opportunities for students to earn political science credit by working as interns in the U.S. or Georgia legislatures . . . Selected chemistry students are able to work with faculty researchers at the College and at Georgia State University . . . In an urban sociology course, students have helped the city of Decatur develop a plan for improving a poor neighborhood . . . Seminars and symposiums involving everything from a study of the environment to creative writing to woman's place in our world are offered for additional learning experiences . . . Biology students spent part of the past summer traveling throughout the West with a faculty member, studying desert biology and conducting field work and research . . . The glee club has toured Europe, giving concerts and participating in workshops guided by conductors from all over the world . . . Black students observe Black History Week annually, inviting guest speakers to take part in their programs . . . Summer seminars in Europe, during the past year, included trips to Germany and Spain, under the leadership of members of each department, and more than 30 students participated in a Tudor-Stuart seminar conducted by a faculty member and held in England . . . A qualified student may substitute for the work of her junior year, a year of study abroad in an approved program offered by an American college or university.

After graduation—what?

And after this plethora of diverse undergraduate education, then what?

In a 1974 survey conducted by The ASC Alumnae Quarterly and summarized by Ione Murphy, Agnes Scott's Director of Career Planning, of 343 respondents, 193 had already earned their master's (155), M.D.'s (4), Ph.D.'s (28), LL.B's (5), and B.D. (1). There were 46 who had work in progress toward graduate degrees, both master's and doctorates.

What sort of careers do ASC graduates pursue? The alumnae ranks have always been graced by women who have been active in unpaid civic, social, and cultural work, and many of them have been publicly recognized for their efforts. But today, the scales are tipped toward the wage-earners, and of 290 alumnae polled in 1974, their fields range from microbiologist to flight attendant, from immigration officer to actress. The majority (156) entered areas of education, whether teaching at the college or elementary level, or working as directors of Christian education or as school or college administrators. There was a pronounced trend toward work in health- and science-related fields (33), and there were 18 in some area of the arts. It is apparent that an Agnes Scott graduate's career is limited only by her own particular talents or interests.

Outstanding alumnae/The future of ASC

For those students and graduates who haven't yet decided on their career choice, or who are having problems establishing themselves in jobs, Agnes Scott's Office of Career Planning assists in writing resumes, advises on ways to conduct a successful job interview, and maintains a job referral service that matches applicants with prospective employers.

Just how successful are some of the alumnae of Agnes Scott, and what do they list among their achievements?

Let's start with the first recipient of the Agnes Scott Alumnae Association's Outstanding Alumna Award, Mary Wallace Kirk '11. Her service to the College has been exemplary. Not only was she one of the first women ever appointed trustee of a southern college (1917), but she was a leader in the campaign to raise funds to build the Alumnae House, the first constructed on a southern college campus. Widely traveled, Miss Kirk is an artist whose drawings are displayed in many notable galleries, and is the author of several books, the most recent of which is scheduled for fall publication.

Then there's Catherine Marshall Le Sourd '36, whose name needs no identification anywhere that her dozen books have been read, or any place that the motion picture, "A Man Called Peter," has been shown. A woman of talent and of deep faith, she says of her education at Agnes Scott, "Everything ties back to Agnes Scott; I can't imagine being the same person without the four years here. There's no way to express the foundations from the experience. Doors to the mind opened — ideas were exciting — sitting in class, ideas fell like sparks on dry tinder. I was raised in my seat by enthusiasm. Liberal arts is relevant; it helps us become the people we should be. It's never wasted; it enables us to achieve. The light we get in poetry, music, reading can't be measured."

How about Dr. Evangeline Papageorge '28, who, upon her retirement in August, 1975, as executive associate dean of Emory University's medical school, was honored with a scholarship fund in her name? The fund, totaling more than $45,000, will be used to provide scholarships for Emory University medical students, and is in recognition of her distinguished achievements as a member of the faculty of the medical school.

Agnes Scott alumnae excel in all fields of academics, and Dr. Carolyn Wells '55, academic vice president and dean of Longwood College in Virginia, and Dr. Marion Leathers Kuntz '45, chairman of Georgia State University's foreign language department, are only two examples.

There's no question that Agnes Scott's reason for being is the quality of graduates who leave her Gothic halls each year; but given those problems facing all institutions of higher learning today, will she be able to continue? In order to reach that goal, will the College have to diversify? No one can say at this point, but to survive, the College may have to explore many avenues, without sacrificing her dedication to excellence.

The future may see ASC doing as tiny Shenandoah College, in Winchester, Virginia, has been forced to do during recent years. A conservatory of music, the college saw its enrollment dwindling to as low as 435 ten years ago. To attract more students, the school began offering courses in medical technology, recreational therapy, business management, nursing, and musical therapy. The strategy worked; the college is enjoying a record enrollment of 612, only 82 of whom are taking a straight liberal arts course.

Although it is doubtful that Agnes Scott would ever offer any non-academic courses, there are other ways she may go. The College may offer associate degrees after two years of study, or she may take a clue from shopping centers and stay open at night, offering classes to adults. Or stress the continuing education concept. Or, the ultimate, establish a graduate school, offering master's degrees and doctorates.

Whatever the future may hold, it is certain that the College will continue to produce women who, as the College's second president, Dr. James Ross McCain, told graduating classes, are not educated, but "have been given the keys to education." Nor is there any question that Agnes Scott will continue to adhere to the precepts and aims expressed by President Perry.

"At Agnes Scott we shall continue to try to maintain a teaching and learning community dedicated to Christian values and the disciplined development of the whole person. How we teach and learn here are of vital importance; of equal importance is how we live, how we exemplify in our lives the values and disciplines we teach, the wisdom and good we seek . . . We must live our precepts if we are to affirm effectively the promise inherent in humane and liberal learning. This is the kind of living and learning which Agnes Scott will continue to pursue — for today's most insistent needs and tomorrow's larger hopes." ▲

New Trustees are Added to Board

As announced by President Marvin Perry in his August Newsletter, Agnes Scott has five new Board of Trustees members, two of whom are alumnae.

Katherine A. Geffcken '49, who was elected to Phi Beta Kappa while a student at Agnes Scott, earned her A.A. and Ph.D. from Bryn Mawr. She is professor of Latin and Greek at Wellesley, and is editor of the New England Classical Journal. She is the author of Comedy in the Proaetio, published in 1973.

Nancy Holland Sibley '58 was elected to Mortar Board as an undergraduate, and was included in Who's Who among Students in American Universities and Colleges. Since her graduation, she has been active in family, civic, and church life.

Donald R. Keough, President of Coca-Cola, U.S.A. and Senior Vice President of Coca-Cola Company, is a native of Iowa and a graduate of Creighton University. He is a member of the Board of Directors of the National Center for Resource Recovery, Inc., and the Executive Committee of Keep America Beautiful.

Samuel Reid Spencer, president of Davidson College and former president of Mary Baldwin, is an author, a member of Phi Beta Kappa, and the brother of an ASC alumna, Sarah Spencer Gramling '36.

Thomas Rice Williams, a graduate of the Georgia Institute of Technology, earned his master's at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and although an industrial engineer, turned his talents to banking at a mid-point in his career. He is currently president of the First National Bank of Atlanta, and is a director of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

Catherine Sims Returns

Dr. Catherine Strateman Sims, former Agnes Scott professor of history and political science and dean emeritus of Sweet Briar College, has returned to Agnes Scott this fall as a visiting professor. As a part-time faculty member, she is teaching European history.

Dr. Sims taught at Agnes Scott from 1939 to 1965. On leave of absence from 1960 to 1963, she served as dean of the American College for Girls, Istanbul, Turkey. In 1965 she went to Sweet Briar as dean and professor of history and political science. She retired from Sweet Briar in September, 1974. Since then she and her husband, retired Atlanta banker Roff Sims, have again made their home in Atlanta.

Dr. Sims is serving as head of the Committee on Qualifications for the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa and as a Phi Beta Kappa Senator. She is vice chairman of the Council for International Exchange of Scholars and a member of the American and Southern Historical Associations, the American Association of University Professors, the American Association of University Women, and the International Commission for the History of Representative and Parliamentary Institutions.

She earned her undergraduate degree in history from Barnard College and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. After a year at the Institute of Historical Research, University of London, she returned to Columbia University for her master's and Ph.D. degrees.

Printmaker Joins Art Faculty

Carol Golden Miller, the new instructor in the Art Department, has worked extensively in printmaking. During October her one-woman show of Chine colle prints were on exhibit in the Dana Fine Arts Building. Chine colle, or China collage, is an ancient oriental process of printing an image over a collage of colors. Ms. Miller has sometimes printed the same image on different color collages, thus producing a number of different, but related prints.

A native Texan, Ms. Miller earned her B.A. degree at Northwestern University where she concentrated in printmaking and painting, with one summer at the Sorbonne, Paris, studying art history. She received her M.S. degree in Art Education and printmaking at the Massachusetts College of Art, Boston, and spent another summer in France studying intaglio printmaking. She earned her M.F.A. degree from the University of Chicago where she concentrated on printmaking with special emphasis on Chine colle methods.

Her works have been included in exhibits at the High Museum of Art, Atlanta, and she has had one-woman shows at Northwestern University, the University of Chicago, and Chicago businesses. She is represented by galleries in Boston, Cambridge, and San Antonio.

At Agnes Scott, Ms. Miller is teaching courses in printmaking, introductory art, and beginning studio work.

Retirement Dinner to Feature Noted Biblical Scholar

Dr. Bernhard W. Anderson, Professor of Old Testament Theology at Princeton Theological Seminary, will be coming to Agnes Scott on Friday, March 12, 1976, as guest speaker at the retirement dinner planned for Dr. Paul Leslie Garber, a member of the Bible and Religion Department faculty.

Dr. Anderson, a Methodist minister and a personal friend of Professor Garber's, has taught Bible on the college, university, and divinity school levels. He has directed archeological expeditions in the biblical city of Shechem, and has served as Annual Professor at the American School of Oriental Research in Jerusalem. Perhaps he is best known to Agnes Scott students as the author of Understanding the Old Testament.

Formal invitations to the dinner, to be held on the college campus, will be mailed early in 1976 to alumnae, professional associates, and friends of Dr. Garber. The early announcement of the dinner by Department Chairman Dr. Mary Boney Sheats was made to enable guests, particularly those out of town, to make plans for the occasion.

With the Vienna Chamber Orchestra and five other American choirs, the Agnes Scott glee club performed Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" in the Academy of Science building of the old University of Vienna. The hall, built during the baroque period of music and architecture, witnessed the premier of many classical compositions, including Haydn's "Creation."

Glee Club Performs in Vienna

In response to an invitation to participate in a summer, 1975, symposium in Vienna, Austria, honoring that city's classics, 17 members of the Agnes Scott glee club, under the direction of assistant professor of music Theodore Mathews, made its second European concert tour.

During the twelve days of the symposium, the glee club attended lectures, voice production sessions and rehearsals, and visited sites related to the lives of Viennese classical composers. The symposium culminated in a performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" sung by the Agnes Scott Glee Club and five other participating American choral groups, and accompanied by the Vienna Chamber Orchestra. A small choir also was used as a workshop instrument for conductors from America, Scotland, England, Israel, Brazil, and Hungary. The culmination of the workshop was a presentation of Mozart's "Missa Brevis in C."

In addition to their study and performances in Austria, the glee club toured five other countries and gave two other concerts, one in a 10th century Swiss church, the other as participants in the annual Luxembourg music festival. The latter concert was given on the eve of July 4, and an especially warm response was given by Americans in the audience when the national anthem was performed.

A third concert, scheduled for Prague, was inexplicably canceled by the Czechoslovakian government.

The glee club tour was paid for, in part, by the members' fund-raising campaign, and contributions were gratefully and appreciatively received from student government and the College.

French Assistant Comes To the Campus

Benedicte Boucher from Paris, France, is supervising the French corridor this year in Inman Hall. She and ten hall residents converse in French, learn French songs and games, read French newspapers, and try French cooking.

As an assistant in the French Department, Benedicte also hostesses a French table in the dining hall, assists with French Club activities, tutors students, and helps in the language laboratory. She is also taking courses in German and political science.

Benedicte, whose family lives outside Paris near Versailles, earned her baccalaureate degree from the University of Paris. For the past two years she has continued her studies in English and German language in preparation for working as an interpreter. She plans to study in Germany at an interpreter's school next year. She plays piano and enjoys reading and traveling.

Colloquium Of the Seven about Secrets of the Sublime by Jean Bodin; Translation with Introduction, Annotations, and Critical Readings by Marion Leathers Daniels Kuntz '45 Princeton University Press, 1975 Princeton, NJ, $25.00

Using the 1857 text of the sixteenth century underground classic, Dr. Marion Kuntz's translation of Jean Bodin's Colloquium makes the text available to scholars and students interested in the philosophy, literature, and religious thought of the Renaissance.

Jean Bodin, a leading thinker of the period, dared to criticize the doctrines of several religions, and structured his manuscript as a dialogue among a Jew, Catholic, Lutheran, Calvinist, Moslem, skeptic, and philosophic naturalist. Not only was Bodin flirting with heresy in his criticism, but went so far as to espouse complete religious tolerance.

Seven years in preparation, Dr. Kuntz's translation of the Colloquium is the first complete one ever accomplished in English.

A member of Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Kappa Phi, the Classical Society of the American Academy in Rome, Italy, and the Modern Language Association, Dr. Kuntz is chairman of the department of foreign languages at Georgia State University, and has been named a Regents' Professor by The Board of Regents of the Georgia University System.

We Minded the Store
Polly Stone Buck '24
Mrs. Steve Buck, 1975
2 Walden St., Hamden, CT 06517
$9.00

Polly Stone Buck spent the early years of her marriage at Yale University, where her husband was on the staff and later became dean and provost. The subtitle of the book, "Yale Life and Letters During World War II", sets the stage for Mrs. Buck's reminiscence's about life on a men's college campus during an all-out war.

Within three days after the attack on Pearl Harbor, "more than 300 students had rushed out to enlist," and for the remainder of the war, faculty, their wives, students and staff were involved in "minding the store" while more and more young men left to join the armed forces.

Mrs. Buck recounts the rapid developments in the early months of the war, when plans were made to convert Yale into a training center, and the Yale Plan was established to "create a liason between the needs of the Army, Marines, Navy, industry and the college." The Yale community was caught up in air raids, "War Time" (daylight saving), and rationing. When the government decreed that the quota of butter, for example, was to be one stick per person per week, the dining hall director had to solve a mathematical problem involving thousands of pounds of butter, the number of those eating on campus, and the number of meals for which butter was to be provided. The final solution: "one pat of butter, per meal, per man." Polly, a widow, now lives in Hamden, Connecticut.

Tchaikovsky: A self-portrait
Vladimir Volkoff
Crescendo Publishing Company, 1975
Boston, $15.00

Using quotations from the composer's diaries and correspondence, most of which has previously been unavailable to the West, Vladimir Volkoff, assistant professor of French and Russian at Agnes Scott, and a great-grandnephew of the composer, has dispelled many of the myths about Tchaikovsky, and has presented new insights into the composer as a man.

Dr. Volkoff has divided his work into five parts, "Tchaikovsky and His Image," in which he attempts to debunk the legends of the composer as "the mad Russian"; Tchaikovsky and Himself," in which he shows that the man had three main loves — music, Russia, and vodka; "Tchaikovsky and Others," in which he portrays the composer as an ardent lover of nature; "Tchaikovsky and His Secrets," in which he explores the tales of Tchaikovsky's love — or lack of it — for women; and "Tchaikovsky and His Work," in which he reveals some of the composer's thoughts about his music. (He hated the "1812 Overture," and thought that his Fifth Symphony was a failure.)

Dr. Volkoff, born in Paris, is the author of Subway to Hell, winner of the Jules Verne award in 1963.

Alumnae Remember the College With Bequests Totaling $31,845

During the past year Agnes Scott has received $31,845 in bequests from the alumnae.

Louise Abney Beach King '20, of Birmingham, divided her bequest — totaling $8,300 to the Nelson Beach Scholarship Fund which she had established in 1953 in memory of her husband, and providing $5,000 to establish the Martin J. Abney Scholarship Fund in memory of her father.

Anna Rebecca (Rebie) Harwell Hill '13, Atlanta, specified that her bequest of $10,000 be used to establish the Harwell-Hill Scholarship in memory of her donor and her sister, Frances Grace Harwell '23.

The unrestricted bequests of Adelaide Louise Cunningham '11, of Atlanta, in the amount of $7,045 and Annie Wainwright Freeman '15, of Walnut Creek, California, for $1,000 have both become part of the President's Discretionary Fund. President Perry has used such gifts for special projects such as new equipment for the Music Department and the purchase of a minibus for the entire college community.

The Alumnae Office benefited from the bequest of Mary Louise Thames Cartledge '30, of Columbus, because it made possible the purchase of some greatly needed furniture. Mrs. Cartledge had specified that the $500 be used in the Alumnae Office or House.

Agnes Scott is fortunate in that many alumnae wish to express their love for the College through bequests of all sizes — great and small.

For instance, Frances Winship Walters, Institute, named the College as the residuary legatee of her estate, valued at more than four million dollars when she died in 1954. The fund, through judicious investments, now represents the major part of the College's endowment.

Other bequests may be small, but

The Agnes Scott Fund Office apologizes for inadvertently omitting the name of Susan Love Glenn '32 as a donor to the Fund and a member of the Century Club, and expresses its gratitude for her support and generosity.

all are equally appreciated. They can assure continued financial support to worthy students, or can underwrite a project of particular interest to the testator, such as a lectureship or special book collection.

Although some people balk at the idea of making a will under any circumstances, the thoughtful individual realizes that the money she leaves should be used in the way she wishes, and hastens to assure just that. An interesting innovation devised by an alumna is the establishment of a scholarship fund in her mother's name, to which she contributes while her mother, also an alumna, is still alive. (The mother jokingly refers to herself as a "living monument.") The money is tax-exempt, and enters into the estate of neither woman.

In whatever way money is bequeathed to the College, it is needed, wisely used, and gratefully appreciated.

Dr. Wallace Alston Pays Tribute to Dean Guerry Stukes

As the majestic strains of Luther's "A Mighty Fortress" filled the sanctuary of the Decatur Presbyterian Church—the church he loved so well—friends who came to mourn the passing of Dean Guerry Stukes fondly recalled all that he had meant to his family, his friends, his church, and to the College he served so long.

There could be no doubt that this funeral service was that of a man whose life was dedicated to his faith and to his beloved Agnes Scott College. Following the reading of Old Testament scripture, including the Agnes Scott Psalm 103, and New Testament texts that included the motto of the College, II Peter 1:5, Dr. Wallace Alston, President Emeritus of the College, paid loving tribute to his friend and fellow worker.

"For 62 years Guerry Stukes meant Agnes Scott to his community, for even after his retirement in 1957 he had a close relationship to the College, and rendered service after the retirement date. His was a ministry of service. Many have invested in Agnes Scott. They have invested money, time, and their lives. The investments of Guerry Stukes were even more significant, because they reflected an inner spirit of caring.

"Dr. Stukes' life was one of caring. He cared about people. He was a great and loving counselor. He cared about everyone with whom he came into contact, from the newest student to the humblest member of the staff. He was a scholar, but a scholar with a heart.

"Guerry Stukes had an uncanny ability to put himself in the background. He ran from publicity; he was modest, humble; a gentle man. And he integrated a real concern for academics with a genuine, simple Christian faith."

In a moving letter read by Dr. Alston during the service, and written by Dr. Stukes on the day after his formal retirement, Agnes Scott's beloved Dean expressed his gratitude to everyone with whom he had come into contact at the College: students, faculty, staff, alumnae, carpenters, maids, and engineers, and he ended the letter, "Thank God for Agnes Scott." To which Dr. Alston replied, "God has called a beloved person home. Thank God for his life and for his influence."

Friends may contribute to the Dean Guerry Stukes Scholarship Fund, Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Georgia 30030.

SAMUEL GUERRY STUKES

1887-1975

Dean Emeritus Samuel Guerry Stukes died on October 23, 1975, three weeks after his eighty-eighth birthday.

Samuel Guerry Stukes was born in Manning, South Carolina, in 1887 and attended Davidson College, earning his B.A. degree in 1908. He received his M.A. in 1910 from Princeton University, where he studied under Woodrow Wilson, and he took his Bachelor of Divinity degree from Princeton Seminary in 1913.

Dr. Stukes came to Agnes Scott College in 1913 as a professor of philosophy and education and did graduate work at Yale in 1916-1917. In 1918 he was a member of the U.S. Army's Signal Corps training school, but transferred as a cadet to the Air Service's aviation school.

After the end of World War I Dr. Stukes returned to Agnes Scott and was made Registrar of the College in 1923. In 1925 he married Frances Gilliland '24, and the couple had one child, Marjorie (Mrs. J. B. Strickland '51), and three grandchildren.

Elected to Phi Beta Kappa while at Davidson, Dr. Stukes was a charter member of the chapter established at Agnes Scott in 1926; he was named Dean of the Faculty in 1939. In 1944 he was elected a Trustee of the College and was honored with a doctorate from Davidson in 1946.

Following his retirement in 1957, after 44 years of service to the College, Dean Stukes was made Educational Consultant to a local financial institution, and specialized in helping students acquire education loans. In 1971 he was elected Trustee-Emeritus; he was already Dean of the Faculty, Registrar, and Professor of Philosophy, Emeritus. Dr. Stukes was listed in the 1956 edition of Who's Who, taught a men's Bible class for many years at Decatur Presbyterian Church, was active in civic organizations, and was a member of the Decatur Civitan Club. He was a York Rite Mason and a life member of the National Education Association.

These are the cold facts, but there was nothing cold about Dean Guerry Stukes. Throughout his decades of service to Agnes Scott College, her staff, students, faculty, and friends, Dr. Stukes was a warm friend, a savant, and, in every sense of the word, a mentor.

Members of his classes were inspired by his teaching and amused by his humor, and many continued to turn to him for advice long after their graduations. Affable, wise, loyal, and dependable, he was a beloved part of the academic, civic, and religious life of his community. He will be missed; those whose lives he touched have lost a trusted friend. To our friend, good-bye.

Alumnae Association offers a walk /study tour of England and Scotland

Last summer Dr. Michael J. Brown, English-born chairman of Agnes Scott's history department, led 33 students on a walk/study trip through England. Next summer he will guide alumnae on a similar tour that will be sponsored by the Alumnae Association. Unlike commercial tours, the Agnes Scott Alumnae Association will be unique in that the travelers will have the expert knowledge of Dr. Brown to enliven the historic sites visited, and they will be able to stay in English and Scottish university dormitories in famous British college towns. The accommodations will be utilitarian rather than luxurious, but any inconvenience will be offset by the reduced costs and the opportunity to study history with Dr. Brown, who will offer briefings at each spot visited.

Interested in Throwing, Trimming, Glazing and Firing?

"The Pottery," which opened in August, 1975, is located on Snapfinger Woods Road in DeKalb County, is the imaginative brainchild of four alumnae, a member of the faculty, and his wife. The potters, Mary Anne Bleker '75, Lie Boineau Freeman '62, Kay Teien '75, Betsey Wall '75, associate professor and Dr. Robert Westervelt, and his wife, Pat, met during a summer session at the A.S.C. ceramics studio last year, and decided to form a cooperative pottery. The group found itself being educated as it entered into the details of operating a small business, and assigned the layout of the studio and bought a potter's wheel. One of the potters is at the studio every day, and visitors may watch as pottery is thrown, trimmed, glazed and fired; finished products are on sale in the gallery-salesroom. "The Pottery" is part of a community of artists and craftspeople who are proficient in weaving, batik, photography, print-making, metal sculpture, and painting. Information about the location or the hours may be obtained from any of the potters; visitors are always welcome!

Please use the ballot below for your nominations, and on a separate sheet give a brief biographical sketch of each, with the reasons you believe she deserves the award. Unsigned ballots will not be considered.

On the business of belonging

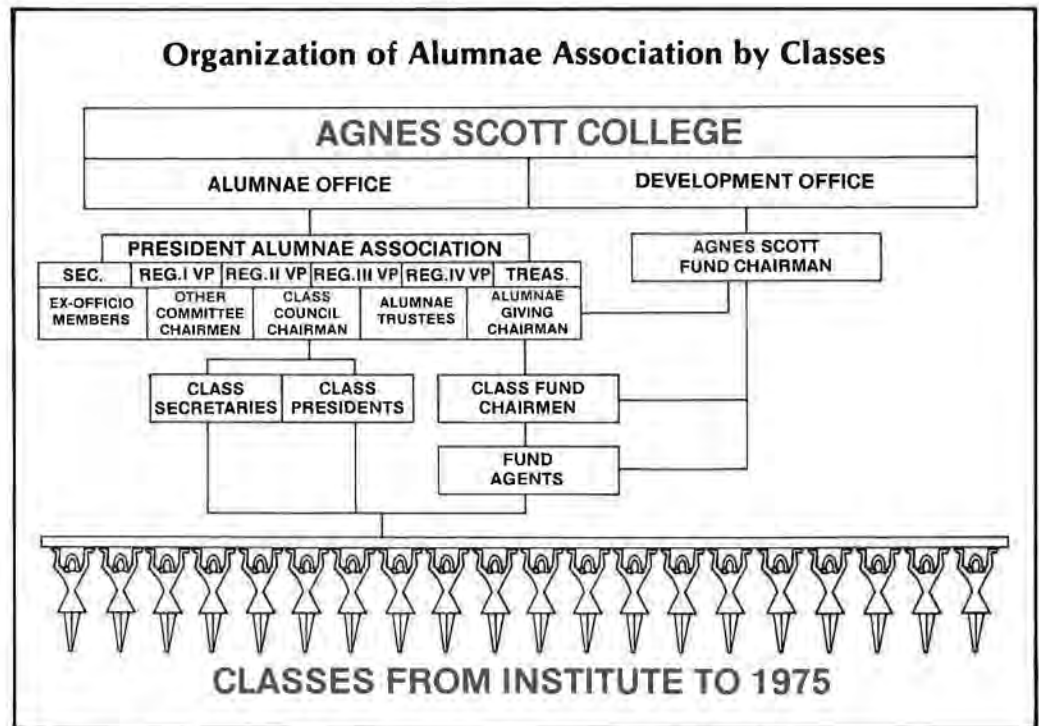

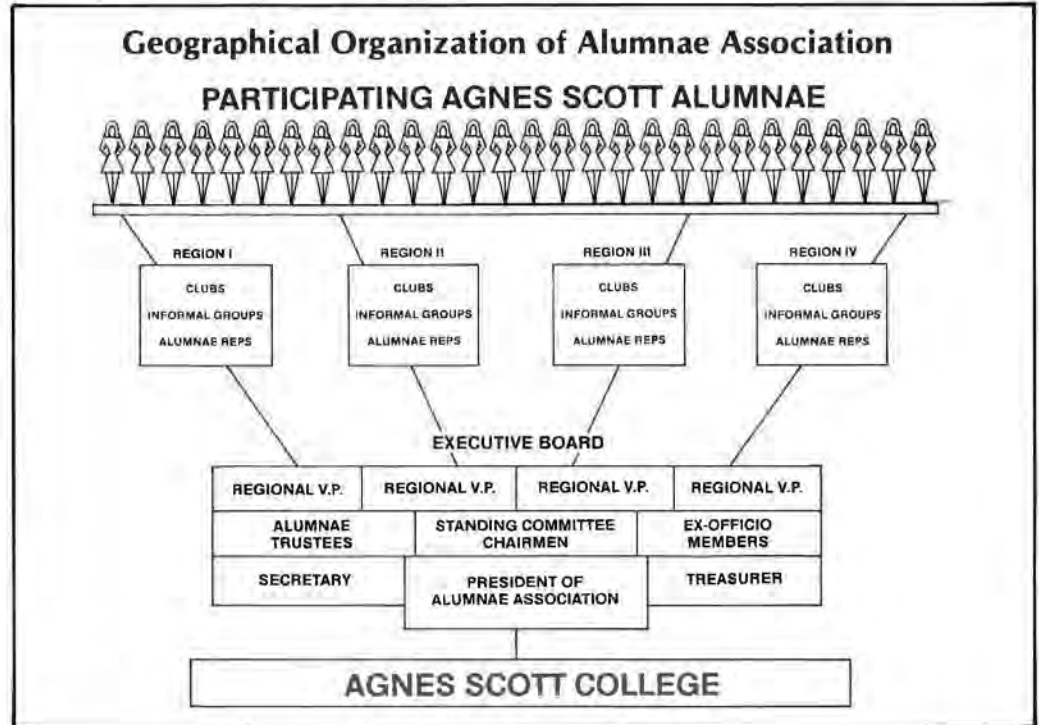

Last week an alumna from Seattle, Washington, came back to campus for the first time in 35 years. She remarked that the Alumnae Garden was more beautiful than ever, that Miss Laura Steele looked as young as ever; and she generally seemed to like what she saw. She must have, for she turned to her daughter-in-law and said, "If you ever have a daughter, I hope she will apply for admission to Agnes Scott." These were words of approval from an alumna who went on to earn a graduate degree in social work and now is associated with the juvenile court in her home city.

Seattle, Washington, is a long distance from the College, and 35 years is a long time. There are many alumnae who live a long distance away or who have been a long time away from the College, but they remain an integral part of the Agnes Scott Alumnae Association.

Every alumna is involved two ways in the Alumnae Association: geographically and by class. In an effort to illustrate the relationship of the alumnae to the College I present, on the right, two charts diagramming the "business of belonging." Can you find yourself in both pictures? That's the ideal we are striving for.

The Alumnae Association was organized in 1895 and has functioned as a national structure since Mary Wallace Kirk began her presidency in 1920. In 1958 the first regional vice presidents, residents of the regions they served, were elected to increase the effectiveness of the work of the Association.

In subsequent issues of the Quarterly we will introduce these vice presidents and other alumnae leaders. Through knowing them we hope you will feel closer to the College even though you might live as far away as Seattle, Washington.
