

SCOTT NOTES

FEBRUARY 1995 Series 93, No. 2

A century of service

One hundred years have passed since the first group of Agnes Scott College alumnae returned to campus to help a senior class celebrate graduation on May 24, 1895 (the first alumnae event). The ASC Alumnae Association will mark its centennial at this year's Alumnae Weekend, April 28-30, with these festivities: a fundraising silent auction of historic and current College memorabilia, book signings by several alumnae authors, recognition of the charter members of the Frances Winship Walters Society, dedication of a campus tree tour, and an original Blackfriars production that includes monologues taken from alumnae oral histories. Look for a complete Alumnae Weekend schedule and registration materials in the mail in late February.

Your credit is good

Agnes Scott College now accepts MasterCard and VISA credit card payment from both undergraduate and graduate students toward their student account balances (tuition, room, board).
 ■ For additional information about this payment method, contact April Pealor in the accounting office, (404) 638-6301.

Rooms in many inns

Need lodging in Atlanta, Boston, Charlotte, Houston or Washington, D.C.? Want to help create a scholarship at Agnes Scott?

You can do both. Through the Alumnae Guestroom Network Endowing Scholarships (A.G.N.E.S) program, the ASC Alumnae Association will secure economical lodging for alumnae, students, faculty and administrative staff at the homes of alumnae in these five cities.

The money earned through the room charges will endow a scholarship for ASC students and spark relationships with alums.

■ For rates and reservations two weeks in advance of your trip, call the alumnae office, 1 800 868-8602.

Renewable Christmas

The spirit of Christmas (trees) Past will linger on the lawn of your alma mater throughout 1995. Eighteen cubic yards of cedar and fir chips were generated from some 875 Christmas trees that were dropped off at Agnes Scott's Candler Street parking lot following the December holiday. The former evergreens will protect the flora surrounding Jenie Inman and Rebekah Scott halls as well as the pansies at the corner of College Avenue and McDonough Street. This year's yuletide contributions brought the four-year tree recycling total to 3,300 trees. ASC and the city of Decatur share the project: Agnes Scott receives, Decatur chips.

First Alumna President

MARY BROWN BULLOCK NAMED SEVENTH PRESIDENT OF AGNES SCOTT COLLEGE

The Board of Trustees named Mary Brown Bullock '66 the seventh president of Agnes Scott College on Jan. 25, and appointed her professor of history. Bullock, a China scholar, is the director of the Asia Program of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars in Washington, D.C., and a professorial lecturer at The Johns Hopkins University School for Advanced International Studies. An Agnes Scott alumna who received her M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in Chinese history from Stanford University, Bullock was director for 10 years of the Committee on Scholarly Communication with the People's Republic of China, through the National Academy of Sciences. Her husband, George, works in government relations; the couple has two teenage children, Graham and Ashley.

Director of Communications Sara Pilger interviewed Bullock about her plans for the presidency, which she will assume July 1.

Why were you interested in the position of president of Agnes Scott?

MARY BROWN BULLOCK: Agnes Scott College is one of the outstanding women's colleges in the country. It has the institutional strengths and resources to become a model for liberal arts education in the 21st century. At this critical juncture in the College's history, I was attracted by this challenge of intellectual leadership. I am especially excited about working with college-age students, whose idealism and energy keeps us all young.

How closely do you plan to work with the students? Would you like to teach?

MBB: Life takes interesting twists. When I left Agnes Scott my goal was to get a Ph.D. and teach Chinese history at a liberal arts college! I hope to spend some time in the classroom. I have enjoyed my teaching at Johns Hopkins but have also learned that it takes many forms. One of the joys of my work has been working with young women. I am sensitive to the transition from college to the workplace which is also a part of the on-going learning process.

What past professional experience has prepared you for this position?

MBB: I bring the experience of an academic administrator, trustee, scholar and teacher.

My responsibilities at the National Academy of Sciences and the Wilson Center have been somewhat similar to those of a college dean. I work with faculty in all disciplines and have had considerable fund-raising experience.

A women's college education: how did it shape you and how can we build on its benefits for our women?

MBB: As time goes by, I realize anew how much I MOVED BY YOUR GENEROSITY—In October, the entire development section of Agnes Scott College, including (from left) Adelia Huffines, Jean Kennedy, Peg Shelton, Andrea Swilley '90 and Anne Schatz, moved lock, stock and file cabinet to a renovated College-owned house at 342 South McDonough St. Despite the move, telephone numbers remain the same and all mail to development is still sent to 141 E. College Ave., Decatur, GA 30030.

A goal of growth

BULLOCK'S FIRST PRIORITY: TO BE ON CAMPUS, LISTENING AND LEARNING

gained from a women's college, so I was pleased to see in a statement from the Presidential Search Committee that there is a basic agreement about continuing as a women's liberal arts institution.

My years at Agnes Scott taught me much about the pursuit of excellence, the opportunities for leadership and the importance of friendship. I first found my voice here . . . and it has served me well as one of only a few women Ph.D. candidates at Stanford and in Washington's male-dominated international relations community.

Today, however, I believe broader experiences in coed settings, such as in classes, internships, study abroad, and through cross-institutional settings, round out an education. In this dimension, Agnes Scott's Atlanta location gives it an advantage over other women's colleges.

How should we be preparing women to become leaders in the 21st century?

MBB: Women leaders need to be better prepared in the sciences, whether or not they pursue a formal career in science. Understanding the human and societal impact of current and future scientific and technological issues requires bridging the humanities, social sciences and natural sciences. A liberal arts education has a special contribution to make here, and women have a special responsibility not to be bystanders or polemicists.

I look forward to working with the faculty in identifying new resources which can make these visions realities through programs already in the works, like the Science Center for Women.

What strengths do you see in Agnes Scott?

MBB: I appreciate Agnes Scott's highly qualified faculty committed to good teaching and academic excellence, the intellectually curious and lively student body, the hardworking staff that is dedicated to improving the prospects for the future of the College, the campuswide multicultural diversity, its fabulous location and lovely campus, its endowment per student (fourth largest in the country) and state-of-the-art technology recently put into place.

What do you see as the three most important challenges facing the College? What will be your top priority?

MBB: Our first challenge will be to continue our renewal as a community of warmth, collegiality, intellectual vitality and good humor. Sally Mahoney is doing a splendid job as an interim president, and no one will benefit more from her success than I. Second, we need to increase retention and enrollment. Third, I'd like to expand educational and professional linkages with the Atlanta community and beyond. My first priority, however, is to be on campus, getting to know faculty, staff, and students — listening and learning.

You mentioned expanded enrollment. How might we do that and to what level?

MBB: Our time is now. Interest in women's colleges is growing. We need to fill the residence halls and move to full capacity rapidly. Looking ahead, however, let's explore the possibility of an even larger student body.

The institutional resources needed to support fine liberal arts colleges these days require a larger critical mass of students. Growth can be accomplished while retaining a high quality and intimate learning atmosphere.

How to do this?

Pride, publicity and self-confidence will take us a long way. We must truly believe that Agnes Scott is the premier women's college not only in the Southeast, but south of Pennsylvania and east of California. While focusing on the tradi-

The Tower bell in Agnes Scott Hall peeled for five minutes on Jan. 25 before the College named its first alumna president, Mary Brown Bullock '66 (right). tional four-year liberal arts degree, we should also recognize that many of the components for additional growth are already in place—graduate, post-baccalaureate science and Return-To-College programs, and our collaboration with other Atlanta institutions.

How can we strengthen the linkages that you mentioned as one of your challenges?

MBB: My background in international relations and Asian studies gives me a special commitment to enhancing Agnes Scott's exciting international activities, which should become the norm, rather than the exception. I hope that we will be able to make funding for these opportunities more easily available for both faculty and students.

Closer to home, Atlanta is a major corporate, financial, educational, technological, transportation and cultural center. Agnes Scott must continue to reach out to provide well-utilized two-way linkages with this dynamic community.

What about even closer to home? Decatur?

MBB: I hope to build on recent initiatives such as the Decatur Campaign and last fall's historic designation recognizing Agnes Scott and South Candler Street. We must continue to be a good neighbor.

How does your family feel about moving to Decatur?

MBB: After living in Washington for more than 20 years, moving a family (that includes an 80-pound dog) will not be easy. We are taking this one step at a time. As a family, we are ready for some new adventures. Our transition will be eased by relatives already living in the Atlanta area and we look forward to becoming a part of the Decatur community.

Blitzing for new recruits

ASC "TRAVEL BLITZ" PROMOTION WINS CASE AWARD IN ANNUAL JUDGING

Agnes Scott College's "Travel Blitz '94" program received an Award of Excellence among Institutional Relations Projects in the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) District III Advancement Awards Competition for 1995. The blitz was featured in the February CASE Currents, an institutional relations trade publication.

The offices of admission, alumnae affairs, development and public relations produced this coordinated program of institutional travel, Sept. 12-Nov. 10, to increase awareness of Agnes Scott College during "blitz" visits in the 15 population markets in the Southeast identified as prime locations for student recruitment. In addition to the admission efforts, representatives of the alumnae and development programs of the College visited the same cities and had the opportunity to enhance their respective outreach programs to different audiences within the same visitation period.

Visits to many of the cities were preceded by advertisements produced and placed by the public relations office. In addition, advance media work was coordinated by public relations to promote admission's computerized interactive CD-ROM recruitment program.

The number of prospective students and parents attending admission's dessert and discussion function in Pensacola, Fla., increased by 175 percent from the previous year. Development representatives made 37 visits with individual major donor prospects. A total of 116 alumnae out of a pool of 1,229 attended alumnae functions. Ten new members joined the Frances Winship Walters Society (a planned giving club) and at least seven new potential donors were identified. Admission's innovative CD-ROM program resulted in eight media placements: Associated Press, USA Today, WCTV, WKRG-TV, Computer Currents, the Atlanta Journal-Constitution, Chattanooga's News/Free Press and the Pensacola News-Journal.

Travel and entertainment expenditures for the blitz were absorbed in the normal operating budgets of alumnae affairs, admission and development; the advertising budget for the project was just over $20,000.

He provided a humane presidency during difficult times

MARVIN PERRY, FORMER ASC PRESIDENT, DIES IN CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA., DEC. 12

Agnes Scott College President Emeritus Marvin Banks Perry Jr., 76, died Dec. 12 at Westminster-Canterbury of the Blue Ridge in Charlottesville, Va., after being diagnosed with spindle cell cancer in October 1994. A memorial service was held Dec. 15.

Marvin Perry

Perry led an active life after retiring from Agnes Scott College in 1982. He served on the boards of several institutions and organizations while in Atlanta and continued his community involvement into retirement, as a member of the boards of Sweet Briar College and the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities and Public Policy, and the Alumni Council of the College of Arts and Sciences of the University of Virginia. He was also a church elder.

During Perry's nine-year administration at Agnes Scott, the College raised $750,000 in a comprehensive campaign, renovated three major buildings at a cost of $500,000, implemented the Return-to-College Program, inaugurated merit-based scholarships and established a dual-degree program with Georgia Tech. The College also saw annual alumnae giving increase by 186 percent, and faculty salaries rise by 75 percent for full professors. Perry fully supported developing faculty governance and improving the insurance and retirement programs for all employees.

"The College was being buffeted by external factors that shaped his presidency," recalled Michael Brown, professor of history, "yet he provided a humane presidency under very difficult circumstances." A decline in the popularity of women's colleges and liberal education combined with inflation and declining enrollment were strong forces facing Perry.

Upon Perry's retirement, the ASC Board of Trustees designated $500,000 of unrestricted endowment funds to support the merit scholarships begun by Perry. Each year two awards are given in his name.

Mary Alverta (Bertie) Bond '53 recalled Perry's words to his last graduating class: "Do well and do good." Bond believes that statement describes his presidency as well. "He did well by this College, and he did many good things for Agnes Scott people. He relished life and lived as a thoughtful, caring and considerate person."

Larry Gellerstedt, former chair of the board of trustees, remarked that the former president was "a classic scholar. He was a strong family man . . . He was a gentleman."

Perry served as president of Goucher College in Towson, Md., from 1967 to 1973 and earlier served as dean of admissions for the University of Virginia. He taught at Washington and Lee University. Perry was a graduate of the University of Virginia and Harvard University, with degrees in English. He authored or co-authored books and articles on English and American literature. A decorated commander in the U.S. Naval Reserve, he was executive officer of the ammunition ship USS Wrangell during the invasions of Iwo Jima and Okinawa.

He is survived by his wife, Ellen Gilliam Perry; two daughters, Elizabeth Perry Sweet of Westport, Conn., and Margaret Perry Daniel of Atlanta; a brother, John Mosby Perry of Chevy Chase, Md.; and two grandchildren.

STUDENT LEADER PROFILES

AMY HEINS '95

Social Council president
Major: Economics
Hometown: James Island, S.C.

The Social Council organizes social activities on campus which the whole campus community may attend, such as the Holiday Gala, the Street Dance, band parties and, of course, Black Cat. The council's goal is to sponsor events that will appeal to a wide variety of students. Many of the activities are open to those outside the campus community while others are for ASC students only.

Not only traditional students, but all students, including day students and RTCs, are encouraged to attend activities. As president of Social Council, Amy Heins not only likes "to make life here a little fun," but also to make activities more inclusive. "We want to have parties everyone will attend and enjoy."

Through the Social Council, Heins feels she helps provide "good stress-relief" to those on campus. She sees council activities as "ways to get rid of the tension that everyone has." Heins values the humor of life and thinks everyone should "realize you can always laugh at whatever is upsetting you."

Although college can be a stressful environment, Heins says, "My self-esteem has gone way up [since I have been at Agnes Scott]. I am much more sure of myself and what to do; my self-confidence has strengthened." Her role in Social Council has been instrumental in fostering this change.

NITYA JACOB '95

Chimo president
Major: Biology
Hometown: Ahmednagar, India

Chimo promotes cultural awareness on campus by encouraging students of all backgrounds to come together in various activities. The annual potluck dinner sponsored in the fall is a popular event. Nitya Jacob's main goal as president has been to "make Chimo's presence better known on campus." She feels she has been successful in achieving this goal in light of the popularity of Chimo events: "Students have been very enthusiastic."

"Chimo also serves as a support group for international students," says Jacob. She strives "to keep up the strength of Chimo" by promoting cultural awareness. Her Agnes Scott experience has fostered her independence and promoted her own cultural awareness; "I appreciate people from different backgrounds and have learned to [value India]."

As an Indian woman, Jacob anticipates some difficulty in asserting her independence at home. "However, in the urban areas, women are generally able to be independent with more success; [gender equality] is progressing," she says.

Since Jacob wants to enter the field of agricultural research, she may well end up resocializing those rural zones. "I want to work either in my own country or others that would benefit from that type of research."

OLYMPIC UPDATE

ASC to host athletes, Irish visitors

Agnes Scott has finalized two agreements related to the Olympic Games to be held the summer of 1996.

The Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games (ACOG) has contracted to lease Agnes Scott's sports complex July 6-Aug. 3, 1996, for use as practice and conditioning sites for Olympic teams in synchronized swimming, volleyball and soccer. The teams will reside in the Olympic Village in Atlanta.

In addition, the city of Decatur, with hosts the DeKalb Historical Society and Agnes Scott, will serve as the center of hospitality for the Irish contingent during the Olympics, which includes housing a small group of distinguished Irish visitors in the Anna Young Alumnae House. Negotiations are being finalized for housing sporting officials in residence halls.

IBM provides matching gifts

LAB'S COMPUTERS TAKE SOME—NOT ALL—PAIN OUT OF THE WRITING PROCESS

In a small room on the third floor of Buttrick Hall, students occupy most of the seven IBM computer stations. Several are typing, one is hunched over a notebook, and another is staring at a computer monitor with furrowed brow.

This is Agnes Scott's Writing Workshop.

Coordinated by the English department, the workshop is staffed by tutors who assist fellow students with writing assignments. Computers in the workshop were provided through IBM's matching gift program within the past three years.

Christine Cozzens, associate professor of English, said the computers play an important role in the tutoring process. "We do a lot of teaching to inspire the students to write and have technological expertise, so it's important that we have the best and the latest in the Writing Workshop."

With IBM's help Agnes Scott has beefed up its computer inventory at other sites on campus as well. During the first year of the matching gift program, Agnes Scott received 17 computers. In 1993, nine computers were added.

Last year, however, total contributions to the College from IBM employees did not meet the minimum needed to participate in the computer equipment option. Instead, Agnes Scott received $800 in cash toward its Annual Fund. The College's eligibility for the computer equipment option requires gifts from IBM employees for a calendar year to total at least $5,000. If the gifts do not meet that total dollar requirement, the College will receive a cash donation in lieu of computer equipment. Altogether, contributions from IBM employees, totaling over $10,000, have enabled the College to purchase $56,000 worth of equipment.

"While the equipment donated by the IBM grant was an essential starting point, technology is moving so rapidly that it is important for us to improve the equipment the College has received through the gift program," noted Tom Maier, ASC's director of information technology services.

"Right now, we basically need to provide higher speed capabilities and multimedia capabilities. Information is more effective if it is a combination of words, sound, motion and animation. I'd like to see Agnes Scott explore these possibilities and go one step further from simple text to multimedia communications."

Maier noted that the latest gifts are a continuation of IBM's long standing commitment to computerizing Agnes Scott; IBM provided the first 25 campus computers in 1984.

—Audrey Arthur

■ IBM currently matches its employees' gifts either three to one for computer equipment or one to one in cash. IBM employees interested in participating in the matching gift program may contact their local personnel office.

Bells were ringing

In January, Edwards B. Shaver (second from right), director of corporate and external affairs for Southern Bell, delivered a $50,000 grant from the BellSouth Foundation to ASC Interim President Sally Mahoney (right). The grant will be used over the next two years for computer technology training for ASC faculty. Spanish Chair and Associate Professor Rafael Ocasio (seated) will be one of the first faculty members to benefit from the gift. Dean of the College Sarah Blanshei (second from left) and Assistant Director of Major Gifts Andrea Swilley '90 worked together to prepare the proposal.

Recent gifts and grants total more than $165,000

UPDATING 1994 GIVING FROM ASC SUPPORTERS

Alumnae, family members and friends of Agnes Scott have shown their support for the College by contributing funds totaling more than $165,000 in the last few months of the calendar year.

William Hightower, husband of Elinor Hamilton Hightower '34, made a gift of $57,296, through Community Enterprises Inc. and A.T.H. Inc., to the Elinor Hamilton Hightower Scholarship Fund in memory of his wife. The Lettie Pate Whitehead Foundation contributed $33,000 for annual scholarships. A $25,000 gift was received from the estate of Raemond Wilson Craig '30. Mary Alice Juhan '29 contributed $12,000 to establish a scholarship fund in memory of her niece, Martha Jean Gower Woolsey '45. Juhan's contribution also added to the previously established scholarship fund of another niece, Mary Evelyn Garner Davis '39.

A gift of $10,500 was received from Ann Glendinning '68 to establish the Sara "Sally" Wilson Glendinning Journalism Award as a memorial to Ann Glendinning's mother who was a member of the class of '33. Anne Register Jones '46 and Boisfeuillet Jones, Mary Caroline Lindsay '51, and Mary Alice Compton Osgood '48, established or completed $10,000 annuities.

The Annual Fund will receive matching money of more than $13,800 as a result of gifts from Lamar Oglesby. Barbara Frink Allen and Scott Newell Newton '45, have made contributions of $5,000 each to their class' 50th reunion scholarship fund. William M. Frierson and Robert V. Frierson Sr. donated funds in memory of their mother, Ione Livingston Frierson, to purchase a pump and accompanying equipment for the Alumnae Garden fountain.

Also, the Frances Winship Walters Society gained 12 new members.

Annual report correction

In the 1993-94 Annual Report, released in December 1994, the College incorrectly identified the class with the 10th highest percentage of giving among all classes. The class of 1944, under the leadership of Fund Chair Bettye Ashcraft Senter, should have been listed as contributing $27,615 to Agnes Scott during the 1993-94 fiscal year.

The class of 1944 is congratulated on its success.

Sallie Manning Ogden '82 should have appeared in the Century Club listing.

The College regrets the error.

"Great City" campaign

CAMPAIGN HIGHLIGHTS COLLEGE'S CIVIC CONTRIBUTIONS

The Sun Trust Corp. pledged $7,500 and the Decatur branch of Nations Bank contributed $5,000 in the 1995 Decatur Campaign, a new prong of the Annual Fund, which had helped secure more than $23,821 in gifts and pledges by late January.

"Decatur & Agnes Scott College: Great City, Great College, Great Possibilities" was the slogan for the campaign that enlisted the help of a nine-member steering committee of Decatur community leaders who, along with ASC's development staff, solicited more than 100 businesses over a 10-day period beginning Jan. 11.

Judy Turner, Decatur branch manager of Bank South, brought in the lead contribution from the bank. Twenty-eight gifts and pledges were secured during the campaign

(as of Jan. 27) with the average exceeding $400.

Andrea Swilley '90, assistant director of major gifts, felt the campaign accomplished its dual goal of fund-raising and informing the community of ASC's contributions to Decatur.

These include:

- ASC supports a payroll of $7.6 million and has an operating budget of $20.3 million;
- ASC paid more than $70,000 in property and sanitation taxes in 1993-94;
- 380 alumnae live and shop in the Decatur area;
- 130 faculty and staff members and 30 retirees live and shop in Decatur;
- The College makes available more than 50 affordable rental units in Decatur;
- ASC's Department of Public Safety provides additional police visibility to the community and offers safety courses that are open to the public; and Swilley expects the campaign to reach its goal of $30,000.

Gift Reporting

A new tax measure, which applies to all contributions to the College made after Jan. 1, 1994, requires Agnes Scott to provide "contemporaneous written substantiation" of gifts it received totaling $250 or more.

According to the Council for Advancement and Support of Education's quarterly publication Matching Gifts Notes, "The substantiation must also tell the donor that for tax purposes, the deductible portion of the contribution is reduced by the value of the premiums or benefits received as a result of the gift. Further, the statement must include a 'good faith' estimate of the premium's value."

A donor may, at the time the gift is made, decline all benefits, keeping the total gift intact.

■ Specific questions about gift acknowledgments or premiums should be directed to Peg Shelton, director of research and records, (404) 638-6481.

Students become historians

HISTORY CLASS PROJECT INCREASES STUDENT AWARENESS OF ALUMNAE ATTITUDES

In 1920, the year American women gained the right to vote, Agnes Scott College was already shaking off its perceived Victorian finishing-school reputation, according to original research by students in American History 334/Political Science 332. Then-College President Frank Gaines expressed a sense of the ripple effect suffrage would have: "The enactment of the 19th amendment vastly increases the importance of the college education of women."

Student researcher Janice Tschudi '96 discovered Gaines' quote and evidence—including a yellowed 1924 student newspaper editorial—that young women of the era soon enjoyed expansive career choices.

"Not many years ago, it was an easy matter for a college student to select her vocation. Today, however, there are five hundred different branches of professions open to women and the choice is not so easy," wrote Dorothy Keith '25 in the Agonistic.

This fall, Tschudi was among 11 students who submitted essays after learning about the history of women from the 1920s to the 1940s by researching the lives of women at Agnes Scott during that period. Digging through archives and conducting oral histories, she and other students tested varied assumptions to discover that during those two decades Agnes Scott College was an institution already working hard to shape strong, independent-thinking women.

Assistant Professor of History Michele Gillespie initiated the research as an alternative to a more passive classroom lecture/study. Through workshops Gillespie introduced students to research materials in the archives, to standard research methods, especially oral history techniques.

Then, Gillespie notes, "Students experienced the excitement of working with primary materials, photographs, letters, newspapers, yearbooks, and other items that told the students about a past they were unfamiliar with. In a sense, my students became historians, actively researching, thinking and writing about the past."

Tschudi researched the women's movement and Agnes Scott College from 1924 to 1929. Students explored other subjects such as curriculum development in relation to historical changes, the rationale for the evolution of the athletic program, race relations at Agnes Scott during segregation, and how gendered social expectations shaped student conduct and career choice.

At Gillespie's insistence, students placed Agnes Scott research within the larger context of women's history and American history so that projects were anchored to larger concerns of the course. "It was very important to me that these projects not be the histories of Agnes Scott College in a vacuum," notes Gillespie.

Emily Curington '96 studied the effect of national trends on ASC curriculum. Comparing courses offered at the College, 1922-42, she found that by the early 1920s, the College had begun to broaden its curriculum, to extend beyond the education of future teachers and homemakers. By the mid-1930s Agnes Scott had abandoned courses in house furnishing and home sanitation to offer courses that would prepare women for a range of new concerns.

With the South strapped by poverty in the 1920s, the College instituted a course in social legislation to explore the function of the state as guardian of the public welfare. In the late 1930s, the College offered a course in economics of consumption which provided an academic approach to the national and international implications of the Depression and a practical component on consumerism. Curington noted that with national attention on issues of violence and crime—and on the careers of gangsters like Pretty Boy Floyd—the College responded with a two-semester course in charities and corrections. Students visited philanthropic and penal institutions, then did actual field work during the second semester.

By 1930, 80 percent of the nation's social workers were women, according to Sybil Bennett '96, however, during the Depression women lost ground in that and other fields as the high rate of unemployment left men competing for jobs held by women.

Yet, Bennett and Allison Olson '96 discovered alumnae who took advantage of that window of opportunity for women, including Mary Ben Wright Erwin '25 "who tried various jobs before ending up at WSB-TV for 17 glorious years;" Frances Pauley, '27 a social activist who became a major force in desegregating Georgia; Evangeline Papageorge '28 who earned a Ph.D. in biochemistry and returned to teach at Emory medical school; and Sara Bullock '31, recruited to work for the fledgling NASA space program in theoretical mathematics where she remained until her retirement.

Olson conducted oral histories with four alumnae in preparation for her paper dealing with urban development and student interaction with the city. "I didn't know what to expect. All four of them were sharp and had a lot of humor. They had strong academic lives and varied cultural interests. All of them had higher degrees—one had a master's and the others had Ph.D.s. They had a lot of questions for me, which surprised me," says Olson.

"They were amused by the freedom we students feel entitled to. At that time, it was pretty progressive for them to take the street car and go downtown, to go to shops with hundreds of strangers. They were proud of the progress they had made compared with the stiffness of the lives of students in the late 19th century.

"I believe that what they were taught at Agnes Scott did make them capable of extraordinary ventures. Agnes Scott may not have meant to make such outspoken, strong women. But they did it. These young women would become more than the gregarious society wife, in part, because Agnes Scott gave them more."

According to Gillespie, students involved in the project forged bonds with the alumnae whom they interviewed.

Finally, says Gillespie, "Students came to recognize how their own experiences and actions at ASC will come to represent part of the heritage of the institution."

Personnel Changes

At its meeting on Jan. 27, the Board of Trustees amended the by-laws of the College to re-organize the officer level of the administration. The positions of vice president for business and finance and vice president for development and public affairs were eliminated and a new position, vice president for finance and development was created. William E. Gailey was appointed to the position, making permanent the joint responsibilities he has held for the past year.

The board also approved the elimination of the never-filled position of dean of admission and financial aid and confirmed the assignment of responsibility for the admission function to Dean of Students Gué Hudson.

Ellie Perl (above), a retired English teacher from Moscow, was among 15 Russian visitors who heard Decatur School Superintendent Don Griffith discuss the political organization and funding of the local education system in December. The group, sponsored by ASC's Department of Education, the Decatur schools and the Atlanta Friendship Force, included teachers and four Russian students who hosted ASC students on a Global Awareness trip to Russia in January 1994. ASC hosted the group for tours of city schools and the campus of Agnes Scott to view first-hand education in the United States.

The work by Tucson artist Rosemarie T. Bernardi is included in an exhibition entitled "Contemporary Prints and Drawings" on display in Agnes Scott's Dalton Gallery through March 10. Bernardi is one of 14 artists from 10 states represented in the show of contemporary prints and drawings which confront current political and personal issues. Printmaker Bernardi, an associate professor of art at the University of Arizona in Tucson, has exhibited throughout the United States, Europe and Asia. She will be a visiting artist and scholar at several Atlanta institutions through The University Center in early April. Anne Beidler, assistant professor of art at Agnes Scott and exhibit curator, assembled the show from over 100 entries.

NEW POLICY TO ALLOW WEDDINGS IN CHAPEL

Gather your rings, veils, bouquets and your relatives, ASC's Thatcher Chapel is open for weddings.

Following years of requests, The Rev. Paige McRight '68, chaplain of the College, has formulated a wedding policy that goes into effect this spring.

While occasional weddings have taken place on campus, no policy for use of Thatcher Chapel had been put in place.

After studying policies at other institutions, McRight formulated a policy that includes at least two sessions of pre-marital counseling. "I want to make sure that people don't enter into marriage lightly," she says.

Major points in the policy:

- ✓ Christian weddings conducted in accordance with the guidelines of the Presbyterian Church will be allowed.
- ✓ The chaplain will conduct the weddings but may invite a bride's pastor to participate.

✓ The chapel is available to students, faculty, staff, trustees and alumnae of the College and their families.

✓ Requests will be handled by the bride through the Office of Campus Events and Conferences.

✓ Weddings may be scheduled during the regular academic year and at other times when the College is open.

✓ A fee of $500 covers all services related to the wedding.

✓ Seating capacity is approximately 70.

While the chapel facility is booked through campus events/conferences, McRight handles the scheduling of weddings.

■ For the complete wedding policy, contact: Office of the Chaplain, Agnes Scott College, 141 E. College Ave., Decatur, GA 30030 or call (404) 638-6437.

Mystery shrouds Cartwright's legacy at Agnes Scott

"RAMONA WAS WELL KNOWN BUT LITTLE REMEMBERED, OR VICE VERSA," SAYS FRIEND

Under a veil of secrecy, Ramona Cartwright entered Agnes Scott College in 1955 and few bits of evidence of her presence remain.

I found no admission records, no record of registration, no grade records, no graduation record (although her name was reportedly called out at commencement), no pictures of her in the Silhouette, not even an alumna file exists for the fair-haired child of the class of 1958. Even so, she remains in the hearts of her classmates as THE one who turned the class around as sophomores and led them to win the Spirit Cup in 1956.

Remembered as a competent philosophy student, Cartwright was an avid participant in extracurricular activities, and even contributed to the Annual Fund and returned for her 35th class reunion. But since then, her whereabouts have been unknown.

"She seemed to change and became a bit of a recluse after she was jilted in marriage," observed an anonymous friend who was to serve as her maid of honor. "It was a sad turn of events when that dreadful George P. Burdell over at Georgia Tech left her standing at the altar. All that spunk and school spirit—and some of the life—was taken right out of her. The flower just wilted."

Mollie Merrick '57, associate dean of students, remembers when the Cartwright/Burdell engagement announcement appeared in The Atlanta Journal/Constitution and laments over the failed nuptials. "The wedding announcement never made it in the paper."

This was a truly sad turn for a woman so vivacious in her go-go days—going to every dance, leading the class in all sorts of dorm pranks.

"She participated in everything on campus, tennis matches, you name it," remembers Merrick. "She did everything well. She was perfect."

Cartwright could do no wrong. That's basically how classmate Pat Stewart '58 described her in The Agnes Scott News the year they graduated. "She was confident, but she had just reason to be. Under her influence, the drive and enthusiasm of the class of '58 gained direction. . . Ramona's influence was felt and heard by all the school. Ramona's confidence gave extra force to our enthusiasm which was this year coupled with a deep, manifested love for Agnes Scott and developed into spirit."

Her scholarship was without question.

"I started getting papers from someone called Ramona Cartwright," during the 1950s, remembered Ben Kline, former dean of students and philosophy professor, in a centennial year interview with Allison Adams '89. "She would turn in papers in courses and I would turn in grades for Ramona and that was a kind of a big deal."

The mystery surrounding this '58er is enhanced by the fact that no one remembers exactly where she was from, not even her closest friend Martha Meyer '58.

"Seems to me she mentioned having a great aunt down near Cairo," remembers Meyer. "But, I can't be sure because her daddy was supposed to have been from somewhere like Savannah, so maybe she was from the coast. It's odd that I can't remember. Maybe I never knew."

But Meyer did know Cartwright as a fun friend who liked to troop with the gang over to Threadgill's Pharmacy for a soda (she even had her name carved in one of the booths), to the hockey field to watch a spirited game or to the gym to watch a swim meet. And she loved a practical joke. Meyer remembers one summer when she and Ramona were counselors at a camp in North Carolina, Cartwright could not resist the temptation to switch out the cold medication with red M&Ms. "People were lined up around the cabin for those cold pills," jokes Meyer.

Meyer suspects that Cartwright may have now retreated back to a cabin in those North Carolina mountains. But clearly Cartwright's friend is worried. "It's just not like her to be out of touch for so long."

Some people contend that Ramona Cartwright was made up by none other than her best friend Martha Meyer. But Meyer rebuts: "How could she be fictitious, she led us all in our class song the day of our graduation. I'd say that was about as real as you get."

Pivotal Points inaugurates Martha Wilson Kessler Dance Studio

ROCHE TEAM USES "WOMEN WITHOUT SHOES THEME" IN STIRRING PERFORMANCE

The works of Australian visiting artists Simi and David Roche were featured in the private inaugural dance performance "Pivotal Points," held in the newly refurbished, state-of-the-art Martha Wilson Kessler Dance Studio in Alston Campus Center, Nov. 3.

The performance featured the Roches as well as Ronin and Redfins, the "pick-up" dance company and five-member jazz-rock ensemble from the University of Adelaide (U. A.) where both Roches are members of the dance faculty, and Agnes Scott's own Studio Dance Theatre.

Simi Roche set an original piece for the performance entitled "Women Without Shoes" based on a phrase from The History of Atlanta 1879 in which the only reference to the female population is as "pioneer babes" and "women without shoes."

David Roche is senior lecturer and head of the dance department at the University of Adelaide. Before that, he was a dancer with the Pearl Lang Dance Company and the Martha Graham Apprentice Company. He also founded and directed Florida State University's Dance Touring Theatre and taught at schools throughout the United States with the Alvin Ailey American Dance Centre.

Simi Roche is a tenured lecturer in dance at U.A. and coordinator for the touring program of the dance department. Having set nearly 40 pieces, Simi has built on her experience teaching and performing modern dance in colleges across the United States, including Florida State and the University of Utah. Her dance experience includes work with Merce Cunningham, Bella Lewitsky, Martha Graham and Pearl Lang.

The Roches also taught a modern dance master class to experienced dancers in the Atlanta area during their fall residence at Agnes Scott.

The artists-in-residence program is made possible through an accumulated gift of $368,800 from Richard and Martha Kessler. Martha Kessler is a 1969 graduate of ASC and has been a trustee since 1986.

The gift allowed a major renovation of the Martha Wilson Kessler Dance Studio this past summer.

JACKSONVILLE URBAN MINISTRIES STUDENT BRINGS MESSAGE IN SONG TO ASC'S TARA SPUHLER '96

When Tara Spuhler '96, religious studies major, began working at Urban Ministries of Springfield in her hometown of Jacksonville, Fla., this summer, she never expected that one song could have such impact.

Drawing from her experience as a youth minister, Young Life program counselor, member of Agnes Scott's gospel choir, Joyful Noise, and the Studio Dance troupe, Spuhler worked with underprivileged children from the Jacksonville area. She helped combine drama, dance and music to encourage the children to develop alternative styles of worship.

More than 80 children, ranging in age from five to 12, were involved.

As part of the program, Spuhler asked the children to bring different kinds of music. "The only requirement was the lyrics had to be clean. I got everything from Michael Jackson to gospel music," remembers Spuhler. "One boy, Jamison, brought in 'Shine,' a hit song that summer."

Performed by the Atlanta-based band Collective Soul, "Shine" was a top 10 single on the national Gavin chart, and the recording that included "Shine," Hints, Allegations and Things Left Unsaid, was in Billboard magazine's top 20. Spuhler was struck by the lyrics: "Heaven's little light gonna shine on me." She and the children created a pantomime band and sang the words to "Shine."

Later, the ASC student read the words of other Collective Soul songs, and was impressed with the group's messages, and decided to write Rising Sun Management Group about her experience and thank Spuhler (with child) and friends before Collective Soul concert.

Collective Soul for its positive message.

This fall, the band's manager called Spuhler thanking her for her letter, and inviting her and five friends to the group's Atlanta concert in September. The manager also inquired about the little boy who brought the song to Spuhler's attention.

The evening of the concert, a stretch limo pulled into the loop at Agnes Scott to pick up Spuhler and her friends. When the driver opened the door, Jamison and his father were waiting for them (the band had flown them in for the night).

The limo then whisked them all to the Lakewood Amphitheater for the Soul concert where Jamison got to hear the live version of "Shine" and meet the singers in person. Each guest received a T-shirt, beach towel, and tour bag with the band's logo as souvenirs.

Spuhler described the evening as "amazing, absolutely amazing."

"The best part," she concluded, "was being able to give this experience to a little boy who has gone through life with practically nothing."

Japanese Farewell

In December, the Office of the Dean of the College hosted a farewell reception for three visiting students from ASC's sister school in Japan, Kinjo Gakuin University. Each student, who studied at Agnes Scott during the fall semester, was given a copy of A Full and Rich Measure as a memento of her stay. Interim President Sally Mahoney (standing center) and Associate Dean of the College Ruth Bettendorff (center) signed Tokiko Yamamoto's book (right). Also saying good-bye were Japanese language assistant Noriko Payne (left) and Marcie Rowe '97.

A wealth of care baskets

The Student Development Fund at Agnes Scott College is $900 richer this year thanks to the efforts of some busy little alumnae association "elves" who assembled and sold 200 exam care baskets for this year's young intellectuals cramming for finals in mid-December.

Parents shelled out $12 for a basket filled with the requisite "brain food": cookies, candies, popcorn, fruit and other snacks.

The baskets, assembled by the Atlanta Young Alumnae Chapter and alumnae office staff members, were distributed to students during a holiday gathering at the alumnae house.

The funds generated from this project are used to provide grants to ASC students who would like to attend conferences and present research papers across the country. The project, in its seventh year, has raised a cumulative total of nearly $7000 for the Student Development Fund which is administered by the Student Government Association.

PARTING WORDS

The Secret of the True Shamrock

MY DISCOVERY VALIDATES THE CLOVER'S CLAIM TO BEING THE EMBLEM OF CHRISTIAN FAITH AND IRISH PRIDE

With all the controversies raging in the world today, one tiny issue in particular has long engaged my imagination, if not exactly my passion: What is the true and original Shamrock? Along with the Rose for England and the Thistle for Scotland, this lowly green sprig appears on the British coat of arms representing Ireland, all three springing from one stalk. The name shamrock is from the old Irish seam rog meaning three-leaved, yet there has been much debate as to whether the true and original shamrock is the common white clover, the wood sorrel or one of several other lesser known plants.

Even before St. Patrick is said to have made it famous by his analogy to the Holy Trinity, the shamrock was known in ancient Eire as a protection against evil spirits. Having grown up in Atlanta's Morning-side area when it was a strong Jewish neighborhood, I was aware early on of the difficulty my friends had in perceiving our ideas of the Trinity as anything but polytheistic. The Sh'ma (Deuteronomy 6:4) emphasizing the ONE-ness of God, is central to their faith. In my concern not to argue, but to present clarification of our concept, I began collecting metaphors for the Trinity—the shamrock being one everyone knows, but like all metaphors, breaking down in the end. (A parallel, after all, by definition, can only go alongside, never fully connect.)

One summer night, I was on my hands and knees with a flashlight, looking for a dropped contact lens on the lawn. There, appearing like small dewdrops in the grass, the clovers among the fescue, I was astonished to discover were all folded up like little people praying—two leaves together like small hands and the third bowed head-like over them. Fascinated, I began sneaking up on other plants sleeping there in the dark and realized there are many others besides the well-known mimosa that close up at night. The sorrel, in fact (oxalis), folds up like an umbrella, all three leaves symmetrically downward along the stem. Yet if you go into a florist and ask for a shamrock, you will most likely be given the sorrel, a large, spindly, daddy long-legs-looking creature with the three lobes of its leaves squared off as if cut by shears, and bearing small white, or pink or lavender or yellow trumpet-shaped blooms.

My discovery seems to vindicate the clover's claim to being the true emblem of Christian faith and Irish pride. Can it be that Patrick himself, or the ancients before him, were aware of the nocturnal piety of this common but indispensable plant, and so honored it over its fellows for reasons beyond that of convenient trilogy? Oxalis, though some varieties are tart and edible herbs, contains a potential poison. Its uses are largely ornamental and derivative. Clover, on the other hand, is not only a forage crop for creatures of the field but a food for humans in the form of its honey. As a legume, it enriches the soil with necessary nitrogen, and it provides children with graceful and chainable blossoms for crowns and "jewels," and even occasional "luck" with a rare four-leaved find. (Let us be cautious of wishing luck, however; the word comes from "Lucifer" and connotes a reliance on chance).

Furthermore, the clover's blossom itself is that form known as composite—separate florets clustered in community, appearing as one flower. And even the individual lobes of the cloverleaf are not triangles so much as perfect little hearts, our symbol for love.

One layman's humble discovery in the dark proves again that some of our most profound insights may occur to us on our knees!

Agnes Scott's Olympic Team

PARKER, KELLY, CARR MAKE IT POSSIBLE FOR OTHERS TO GO FOR THE GOLD and Susan Kelly '92, all agree that being part of the Centennial Olympics is an opportunity they are glad they haven't missed.

They belong to the 900-person staff working to make the Olympics happen. They will complete their jobs in the summer of 1996, when more than 10,000 athletes from almost 200 nations converge for the Games.

As program manager for sponsor services, Parker develops and implements programs that recognize or showcase the national and international sponsors' involvement in the games. She secured her job three years ago after a persistent campaign.

"I was working at Northern Telecom when several people from that company left to work with ACOG. After six months of writing letters, making telephone calls and never giving up, I got the job," she explains.

Kelly and Carr also campaigned for their jobs. Their initial temporary positions as contract employees led to full-time staff positions.

As paging coordinator and telecommunications assistant, Kelly remarks that friends and family are impressed with her involvement in an internationally recognized project. Her responsibilities involve testing venue sites to develop the best methods of communicating during the games. The communications systems will include cellular telephones, radios and pagers.

"The liberal arts education at Agnes Scott College really prepared me to go into any field," says Kelly. "All of the subjects, especially language, prepared me to handle this job."

Carr notes that her college-level French was helpful when she was faced with translating technical documents from Albertville but admits that she relied heavily on a French dictionary of technical terms.

Even more important than specific language skills, Carr says that her Agnes Scott education taught her how to "look at a situation, pick out the important details and move forward," a skill which is beneficial as manager of financial administration-technology.

Parker credits Agnes Scott with instilling a true "can do" attitude.

"Our professors, the lecturers who spoke to us, everyone associated with Agnes Scott, taught us how to dream big things," explains Parker. "Working with the Olympics means that we have to create and implement programs which have never been done before. There is no one to teach us how to do our jobs, so we have to be self-starters who aren't afraid to try something new."

For Parker, trying something new meant spending 33 days during the Winter Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway, helping representatives from the Atlanta Committee host special events to promote the Atlanta games."

She brought back experience, memories and souvenirs, including Olympic lapel pins traded Nancy Kerrigan and the bobsled team from Jamaica!

—Sheryl S. Jackson

Sunlight streams through a glass ceiling at the offices of the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games (ACOG), illuminating a set of distinctive Olympic banners. In addition to solar energy that gives brightness to the building, there is a sort of energy that permeates every hallway there—the Olympic spirit.

The spirit is especially apparent when listening to three Agnes Scott alumnae who are part of the team making the Olympics in Atlanta a reality.

Annual Fund Update

Gifts totaling $142,013 were made toward the Annual Fund goal of $1.2 million during the months of February and March. Alumnae have contributed $403,844 to the total with 27.68 percent participation through April 14. The spring phonathon raised a total of $38,629 which includes $24,127 raised during the alumnae phonathon from 455 alumnae pledges.

The remainder of the estate of Virginia Fleming Prettyman '34 was donated, totaling $100,000, and a $10,000 annuity was established by an anonymous alumna. The College also received $7,000 through the Georgia Foundation for Independent Colleges from the Rich Foundation and the Atlanta Foundation.

Gifts received for scholarships include: $68,000 from the Lettie Pate Whitehead Foundation for annual student scholarships; $21,000 donated anonymously toward the Carolinas Scholarship Fund; and $10,000 to the Annice Hawkins Scholarship fund. Rockwell International also donated $5,000, matching Barbara Frink Allen's gift.

As of March, $27,751 had been raised toward the Decatur Campaign.

Ketchin Talks About God

ALUMNA AUTHOR BRINGS THE STRUGGLE OF FAITH AND LEARNING TO CAMPUS

Southern writer Flannery O'Connor once made a startling observation: "By and large, people of the South still conceive of humanity in theological terms. While the South is hardly Christ-centered, it is most certainly Christ-haunted."

Fifth generation Southerner and author Susan Ketchin '70, explored the intersection of religion and intellectual life in the works of contemporary Southern writers and great writers from the past, in late January at the invitation of Agnes Scott's Committee on Faith and Learning.

The program entitled, "Talk About God In Southern Story & Song," included Southern gospel singing and readings from Ketchin's book The Christ-Haunted Landscape, Faith and Doubt in Southern Fiction. Through stories and interviews, the book shows the imprint of "old-time religion" on the artistic vision of 12 contemporary writers from the American South.

The program began with an informal "coffeehouse" with Ketchin singing, playing guitar and discussing the roots of Southern literature and music.

With readings from her new book and conversation, Ketchin addressed the Agnes Scott community including a gathering of trustees, during a convocation in Woltz Reception Room of Rebekah Scott Hall. "I'm especially happy to be talking at a convocation since I cut so many of them when I was at Agnes Scott," she began.

Poking at herself and the audience with gentle humor, Ketchin admitted, "I am a recovering Calvinist—one day at a time. I am also a passionate reader of fiction and I have found along with many others that the mythic visions of writers such as William Faulkner, O'Connor, Katherine Ann Porter and Walker Percy have provided profound insights into and provocative questions about my own life, serving as both balm and torment to my Southern soul." She discussed the influence of the Civil War on Southern religious thought and addressed the tension that exists between faith and artistic vision. O'Connor described it as a struggle between her identities as a Southerner and a Catholic: "The writer must wrestle with it like Jacob wrestled with the angel until he has extracted a blessing."

Ketchin discussed her quest to understand a faith "embedded with questions" and full of paradox, and she spoke of contemporary Southern writers who willingly stayed with that paradox of faith, who struggled with its potent contradictions, who courageously lived in its mystery. "For some, religion has served as a prism through which to interpret human experience, for others as a target for satire. In all cases, the fitting metaphor for their anguished struggle with issues of faith and doubt, of religious and aesthetic integrity, has been that of a crucible. . . . Like Hazel Motes in Wise Blood, we are pursued relentlessly by the wild, ragged figure of Christ. . . ."

At a lunch time gathering, Ketchin talked about fiction writing as an act of faith, and entertained questions about the "saintly outlaws" that populate Southern fiction.

Susan Ketchin '70 brought her Martin guitar to Scotland Yard to play, sing and discuss the roots of music and literature.

Ketchin is an associate editor in fiction for Doubletake Magazine, Duke University, Durham, N.C., and a member of The Tarwater Band.

INTERIM OBSERVATIONS

In recent weeks I've been privileged to give Mortar Board's "Last Lecture," one of the pleasures of the year's end at Agnes Scott. I began with what I said in the first days after my August arrival: This is a fine place. I'm glad I came.

As in that lecture, I want to report on an eventful year, share observations about campus climate, relay updates in the academic and administrative reviews, launched in 1993-94, and alert you to some external concerns of note.

I view the campus climate as remarkably positive. There is the pleasure of a continuing commitment to excellence in program and in relationships—among students, faculty and staff—of the College with its extended family and external communities. We've become accustomed to celebrations, to community appreciation of little victories and to acknowledging individual and institutional achievements. I'm told of a renewed sense of mutual support, of heightened trust in a campus proud of the diverse perspectives and backgrounds woven into our College tapestry. I sense an Agnes Scott on the move, a college confident of bringing to fruition a practical and multiyear plan to achieve an enrollment aligned to our capacity for 750 students. There is openness to a future envisioned by new presidential leadership that will be shaped in dialogue between Mary Brown Bullock '66 and College constituencies.

As the academic review comes to a close, an important strategic document emerges which is framed by the convictions of faculty, students and staff who responded to the Trustees' challenge to sharpen the College focus. Review Chair Terry McGehee, professor of art, and her colleagues have articulated a set of institutional values which will serve as touchstones for programs that build on faculty strengths, College heritage and institutional location. There are no gimmicks to the plan, simply the rigor of a focused liberal arts curriculum as preparation for an uncertain world. The committee's work proposes to teach students the art of connecting across curricula. The committee recognizes and makes space for the many forms of teaching in which our faculty engage, balancing traditional courses and seminars with forms of teaching that utilize collaborative learning through independent study, guided research and internships. They advise modifying the academic organization to balance disciplinary agenda with multidisciplinary opportunities to advance pedagogy and evolve programs. The committee has worked with existing structures of faculty governance, building a base for continuing faculty attention to evolving educational issues. The committee has come to its work with discipline and dedication, and its report is a gift for our future.

The administrative review, chaired by Assistant Vice President for Finance Karen Roy, has engaged faculty, staff and students to reconsider how we do the business that supports our educational mission. That committee has reviewed day-to-day activities against the yardstick of student-centered service, for example, revising hours of operation and methods of responding to suggestions. They have undertaken collaborations to clarify administrative intention and simplify procedures, for example, reconsidering our goals and arrangements for summer programs. In the spirit of the review, College officers have encouraged teamwork to heighten the effectiveness of College presence in the broader community. One such effort was "Travel Blitz," a new approach to development, alumnae and student recruitment activities, recently honored with a CASE (Council for the Advancement and Support of Education) award. That award is shared among the staff and our many alumnae collaborators. Also in the spirit of the review was the consolidation of administrative functions among three College officers. This streamlining heightened administrative effectiveness, played to the strengths of the three incumbent officers, and made possible a substantial resource reallocation to academic activities.

During this presidential transition year of active introspection and internal accomplishment, we have noticed external circumstances likely to impact the College, our students and their families. The good news is that the Southeast will produce a greater number of college graduates. Georgia, in particular, has supported its aspirations through the HOPE grant programs for college students and through focused attention to K-12 education. Agnes Scott earns public trust by serving the public interest in partnership with other not-for-profit and state-funded institutions of higher education. The bad news is that concern with public debt, especially at the federal levels, raises practical concerns about affordability and access for well-prepared and talented students of modest means. As an institutional member of several educational associations we monitor this situation closely and participate in constructive efforts to advance student and family interests. We suggest you do the same.

MORTAR BOARD, RSO PRESIDENTS DISCUSS THEIR ORGANIZATIONS

Mortar Board president

Major: Anthropology/
Religious Studies

Hometown: Gainesville, Fla.

Mortar Board is a senior honor society dedicated to scholarship, leadership and service, which draws its membership from the top 35 percent of the junior class.

As president, Ashley Seaman has attempted to change what some perceive as an "elitist" Mortar Board image to one that better represents the high regard with which members esteem the entire community. Through College convocations, Mortar Board has emphasized that sense of community by "giving voice to all."

At a February convocation entitled "Windows With a View," students met with custodial staff members who reminisced about their experiences at ASC. Seaman sought to acclaim those who had often worked with little recognition by encouraging them to share their wisdom with the community.

"Here [at ASC] I have found and used my voice," says Seaman. "Much of my work through Mortar Board has been to give others the chance to find and use theirs." Her main goals as president have been to bring diverse people together for positive interaction, to encourage all to voice their opinions, and to integrate service to others into the learning process. "We have a responsibility to help each other and to be good stewards," says Seaman.

Returning Students' Organization president

Major: Psychology

Hometown: Chicago, Ill.

Returning to school later in life can be a difficult transition. The Returning Students' Organization (RSO) consists of non-traditional age, return-to-college students (RTC's) who wish to facilitate their re-entry or initial entry into collegiate life.

Currently a resident of Decatur, Jackie Pope admits that when she began attending ASC, she felt somewhat "imposed upon" when asked to participate outside of class in any organization or event. But she now realizes and accepts the crucial role that outside activities play in rounding out an education. Pope asserts, "We're not paying simply for a piece of paper, a certificate of achievement, but for an education. Participation in campus life is part of the whole Agnes Scott experience and part of getting the most for our money."

Pope realizes the difficulty of juggling school life with home life. "Most RTC's come to ASC with idealistic views of getting degrees they previously wanted. Plus many have families to consider, so it is hard to interact with the [school] community."

Nevertheless, Pope stresses the integral role RSO should play in an RTC's student life. RSO not only serves as a support group but functions as a collective voice for RTC grievances or suggestions regarding campus issues, so participation is important for one to add individual input.

THE PATIENCE OF JOB—Mathematics Associate Professor Robert Leslie retired his razor for the duration of the presidential search (June 1994-January 1995) but agreed to a ceremonious shedding of his facial hair to benefit the Agnes Scott College chapter of Habitat for Humanity. Leslie parked himself in the lobby of Evans Dining Hall (Letitia Pate Evans watches in the background) at lunch on Feb. 7 and allowed students, faculty and staff to take whacks at his whiskers ($1.50 for a small clip and $2 for a big clip) raising approximately $60 for Habitat.

Josie and Me

YOU'VE GOT A FRIEND IN SOPHOMORE MENTORING PROGRAM

When an Agnes Scott sophomore called me in 1992 seeking career advice, naturally I was flattered. I was in my second year as publications director at a small South Carolina college and my third year out of Agnes Scott, and here was Josie Hoilman '94, thinking about an editorial career and looking for a mentor. Me? A "mentor"?

We talked for an hour or more about internships and entry-level editorial positions. Then the conversation drifted. Josie caught me up on the news of my former professors. I told her stories about the pranks my friends and I had pulled as students. We discussed parietals and how she and other students felt about them.

It was almost like being there.

We stayed in touch via phone and letters. During her senior year, I helped her put together a résumé geared toward writing and editorial work. We talked frankly about how an interview is perceived from the interviewer's chair.

In return, Josie gave me a real sense of what life was like at Agnes Scott, a connection with my alma mater that alumnae publications could never offer. I was deeply grateful for this, because the distance between my home and the campus kept me from visiting often.

After graduating, Josie quickly landed a job as an editorial assistant with a local magazine. She wrote me later, "All your suggestions for a job like this were exactly right!" When I moved back to Atlanta a year ago, Josie and I finally met face-to-face. I realized what a valuable long-distance friendship ours had been over the past two years. When I tell other alumnae about Josie and me, they often respond with their own, similar anecdotes. In fact, students and alumnae have been "hooking up" informally for years. With the advent of fax and electronic mail, a new level of convenience has come to these connections.

Recognizing the value of such an experience, the Alumnae Association and Career Planning and Counseling have introduced the Sophomore Mentoring Program. Sophomores and alumnae will be paired according to criteria of their choice, such as profession, ethnicity, geographical location or perhaps a combination of the three. During the year, alumnae will be asked to contact their students regularly, whether by telephone consultations on summer jobs, a quick "good luck" note before exams or an Internet "chat" about the dining hall menu.

More than Allison Adams '89, top and Josie Hoilman '94

a career network, the Sophomore Mentoring Program is designed to give students vital information resources and strong role models. At the cost of a little creativity and time, you could find yourself once again seeing Agnes Scott through a student's eyes. Who could ask for a better view?

—Allison O. Adams '89, assistant editor of Emory Magazine. A brochure in this issue of Main Events includes more details about the Sophomore Mentoring program, with a form to be returned by June 1 if you wish to participate.

Elizabeth Chapman Pirkle enjoyed telephoning members of the class to gather news for Main Events. Because calling was done in January, much of the news had reference to Christmas. All class members are 88 to 90 years old, so activities are limited and family is of the greatest concern.

Ellen Fain Bowen has five great-grandchildren and is now living in a retirement home. She reports that it is a nice place and members of her family live nearby.

Rosalie Wootten Deck traveled to Charlottesville, Va., in November to attend the wedding of her last bachelor grandson. She has eight great-grandchildren and her two sons, David and Linton, visit her often, helping her with the household and other problems.

Florence Perkins Ferry, who lives at Lenbrook Square in Atlanta, broke her back the first of September, but with the help of special people she carries on. She talked clearly and was very upbeat. Her daughter's visit at Christmas was a great help.

Mary Knox Happoldt is now with her daughter in Alpharetta, Ga., and plans to stay until March, leaving her lovely home in Highlands, N.C., during the winter months. Her friends in Atlanta were so glad to have her near.

Hazel Huff Monaghan solved the problem of having ten grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren at Christmastime by inviting them to a dessert between Christmas and New Year's. On the Christmas tree were packages of money that served as Christmas and birthday gifts for the year for each individual.

Betty Little Meriwether reported the nicest Christmas ever in 1994. The family was together, except two members, who returned to Atlanta after Christmas.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Margaret Debele Maner of Savannah recently received a lifetime membership to the Girl Scouts of America for leading tour groups at the Juliette Gordon Low Girl Scout National Center.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Mary Elizabeth Heath Phillips will be 89 years old this year, and is still in perfect health.

Miriam W. Preston St. Clair said she and her husband are still living in their home, despite some aging problems. But they feel well for being in their eighties.

The class president, Sara Bullock, has moved into a retirement independent living apartment at Presbyterian Village in Austell, Ga. Her health is good and she is making new friends, but she says, "it's a tribute to Agnes Scott that we keep the friends we made there the rest of our lives." She sees Marion Fielder Martin frequently.

Marion's husband, Hermon, just celebrated his 102nd birthday. Marion is still recovering from a heart attack but is happy with their nice apartment at King's Bridge, Ga.

Sara Bullock visited with Ruth Etheredge Griffin in Pompano Beach, Fla. Ruth and her husband, Lloyd, drove from Idabel, Okla., to Florida for the baptism of their oldest daughter's baby girl.

Sarah Hill Brown and Aubrey still take their two-mile walks whenever weather permits. Three of their eight children live near their retirement apartment in Richmond, Va. In April their daughter Zaida married George Gilmour in Maryland, and at Thanksgiving they visited their son Ernest's "commodious riverside spread" in Richmond.

Laelius Stallings Davis writes, "I am still living in my old home in Newnan where I have lived all my life." She has been a widow for 15 years and has three married sons and seven grandchildren. On a visit to Charleston, S.C., with her son Jan's family, she visited with Carolyn Heyman Goodstein and they had fun reminiscing. Carolyn helps her daughter Marion in her stationery shop and visits her lawyer son Arnold's family in Summerville, S.C. For 15 years, Carolyn has been co-chairman of hospitality at Temple Beth Elohim, which she reports is the oldest Reform Jewish Temple in the world. Carolyn corresponds with Louise "Holly" Hollingsworth Jackson and Charles, who live in San Antonio.

Alice "Dit" Quarles Henderson and Willis will celebrate their 64th anniversary in June, and they still play golf. They have eight grandchildren from their two sons who live near them in Charlotte, N. C., and Alice said, "Christmas dinner, seating 27, was bedlam." They spend summers in Linnville, where they have a garden of mountain wildflowers, and spend February in Florida.

LOWRIE'S TURN

The young women were Agnes Scott graduates intent on coming together to "advance the interests of dear old Agnes Scott." "Visionary young enthusiasts" is how they described themselves two years later in the Aurora. On commencement night, May 24, 1895, the "association came into existence: with Mary Barnett 1893, president; Anna Irwin Young 1895, vice president; and Mary Mel Neel 1894, secretary and treasurer." (The alumnae house is named for Anna Irwin Young who later taught mathematics at the College.) How was the focus of their energy organized?

Activities of the new association were centered around three themes—scholarships, ongoing educational experiences, and the desire to be the "nucleus of union and energy for all interested" in the furtherance of Agnes Scott. The organizers set a dues structure for themselves and then doubled the dues the first year. A scholarship was given for the 1896-97 academic year by these women who described their ideas as "large but with small means of carrying them out." From the beginning they wanted other women to share in the Agnes Scott educational experience and planned to "pay the tuition each year of as many people as its funds will permit." To raise additional funds for scholarships they sponsored a musical and held bazaars. By the sixth year the association was meeting incidental expenses and paying the tuition of one day student each year.

Continuing educational involvement of the members was another focus. Reading lists were distributed by the alumnae association to those far and near who chose to involve themselves in the reading circles. Through these reading circles the members believed husband, Alec, after 60 years of marriage, but she says she is lucky to have her daughter's family nearby in Atlanta, and she frequently visits her son's family outside of Boston. She has four grandchildren. She says her arthritis doesn't slow her up too much—she does what she wants to do, and for what she doesn't want to do, she has a good excuse!

Katherine "Kay" Morrow

they would become "truer, nobler women."

For 100, years, guided by numerous alumnae presidents, involving over 10,000 members, the focus of the Alumnae Association has remained centered on supporting Agnes Scott.

Scholarships and financial support for current students of the College are supported through the Annual Fund. As of March 1995, the percentage of alumnae giving for the year is higher than the previous year, though the total amount of the gifts is less than 1994. Reunion class observances provide a special opportunity to give above and beyond the Annual Fund gift.

Today alumnae serve on the Alumnae Association Board of Directors in a number of chairing positions. Educational programs are offered to graduates both on the campus and during chapter meetings. Professors from the College visit distant sites to engage alumnae in educational presentations and discussions, often providing suggested resources for study prior to the meetings.

In 1995, as in 1895, the "nucleus of union and energy" for Agnes Scott alumnae is the Alumnae Association. The association adopted a Strategic Plan in 1994 and is now proposing changes to its constitution and bylaws in order that the goals of the Strategic Plan may be implemented more effectively.

Today the Alumnae Association activities include encouraging prospective students to enroll (supporting the admissions office), serving on a career advisory board, and mentoring students in their career choices. Through the "exam care-basket" project the student/alumnae connection is strengthened further.

The young women who formed the association in 1895 asked for time to remedy their "youth and small number." The enthusiasm of Agnes Scott women through the hundred years has not waned. In this centennial year of the Agnes Scott Alumnae Association, let us celebrate those women of the past and pledge our continuing service and financial support to Agnes Scott, that we too will be a "prologue to the future."

Sincerely,

Lowrie Alexander Fraser '56
President, Alumnae Association

Norem is happy to still be in her own home in Ohio, and is able to keep up all her activities. She had an exciting summer with three graduations and a wedding among her grandchildren. One granddaughter is now a veterinarian. In September she visited North Carolina for her grandson's wedding.

Ruth Peck Smith had two strokes in 1992 and could not walk for many weeks, but her neurologist said she willed herself well so she could work on her important causes. Ruth says these are "waging peace . . . helping street people . . . and doing away with homework, as the test of what one has learned is how one uses that knowledge in daily life." She challenges her classmates to help her.

Helen Friedman Blackshear, the class secretary, apologizes for not getting news out in the last paper. She is still writing poetry and also published a book about her father's family last year called From Peddler to Philanthropist which entailed a lot of research, but was fun to do. She will travel to Oaxaca, Mexico, in March and to Poland and Germany with her sister in August. She walks every day, and plays golf, but very poorly, she says!

Ellen McDowell Davis Laws wrote from Columbiana, Ind., that she did not have any news, as she has the same two girls, the same four grandchildren and stays busy with friends, church and volunteer activities. She is happy to be on her own again after a "silly fall" which put her in the hospital for weeks.

Virginia Stokes Jones lives in a resident retirement community in McLean, Va., and was pleased to meet one Scottie in the community, and another in her church group.

The class should be proud of Clara Knox "Knoxie" Nunnally Williamson. With eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild, she is still dancing. This is the 22nd year of "Knoxie's Dance Group" in Sea Island, Ga., which started with 20 and now has 400 dancers participating from 10 states and England.

Julia Thompson Smith and husband Hal have been spending the winter in Naples, Fla. Julia is slowly recovering from a broken ankle caused by an automobile accident, their first ever, but is glad they moved into a retirement community at Canterbury Court in Atlanta, where she could get excellent care. They will return to Atlanta the first of May.

Shirley McPhaul Whitfield and husband Randy have also moved into a retirement community at Canterbury Court in Atlanta, where Shirley has been in the infirmary since July. They have ten grandchildren and six great-grandchildren, who write and phone from all over.

Sister Hilda "Betty" Bonham has moved to the motherhouse of her congregation in Monroe, Mich., after having lived in Ann Arbor for 22 years. She stays in touch with Martha Logan Henderson from time to time about their retirement activities.

Frances Spencer Catchings writes that she has seen many far-away places and has had many adventures (no thrilling details) during past years but has recently returned to Florence, S.C., to be near old friends and family.

Ruth Green says that she is still alive and healthy but confines her travels to one-day excursions. She enjoys her nieces and nephews who visit her in Louisville. She writes that Bob Davis, Lila Ross Norfleet's husband, called on December 17 to report Lila's death in Richmond, and burial in Winston-Salem. She had been in the health care unit of a retirement home, confined to a wheelchair.

Mary Downes Lander Fordyce reads with difficulty and has increasing medical costs but enjoys a large group of grandchildren and great-grandchildren. She and Martha Williamson Riggs are still great friends from ASC days. Mary reports that Martha, who lives in Little Rock, Ark., is recovering from a broken hip and elbows.

Elizabeth Howard Reeves is much absorbed with her children and grandchildren's activities, including a recent wedding. She still drives and participates in church activities, but to a lessening degree. She has recently been interested in tracing family genealogy.

Lovelyn Wilson Heyward is still remembering the '92 reunion at ASC. She spent Christmas in Monroe, La., with her children.

Hettie Mathis Holland's daughter Etta writes that her mother has been in a nursing home for the past eight years and does not speak beyond a yes or no. She is able to visit her mother daily, but both of them continue to miss Etta Mathis Morrison.

Mimi O'Burne Tarpe lives in the same apartment complex with Louise Stakely, and Plant Ellis Brown '33. Mimi plays bridge with Grace Fincher Trimble, LaMyra Kane Swanson, and Virginia Allen Woods. She had recently spent a delightful weekend with Betty Peoples Brennan who was recuperating from surgery. Grace and Virginia visited Vienna, Prague and Budapest on a Delta Dream Vacation in April. Grace plans to become computer literate in '95. Virginia plans to sell her house and move to Tulsa, Okla. to be near her son.

Anne Hopkins Ayres' family met in Monroe, Wash., in July. All members of the first two generations were present plus two of the third, one Hopkins and one Ayres. The Cascades were beautiful then—just before the devastating fires—and the Butchart Gardens in Victoria were spectacular.

Mag Glass Womeldorf and John gave up their apartment at "Sunnyside" in Harrisburg, Va., in December 1993. John is now in the assisted living section. He uses a walker and wheelchair and has nurse care. Mag has one meal a day with him and is in and out of his room, coming from her studio apartment nearby. They and their children had two family gatherings in 1994: a family reunion at Massanetta Springs in July and another at Thanksgiving.

Roberta Kilpatrick Stubblebine was to spend Christmas with her daughter, her husband and their two sons in Ocala, Fla. Roberta has moved to Clairmont Place in Decatur. Over thirty members of her church, Decatur First Methodist, as well as Marlyn Tate Lester and Charles, also live there. Roberta's apartment overlooks a formal garden and is only 10 and 15 minutes away from her son's family and the College.

Gail Nelson Blain was named the "Outstanding Woman of the Year" by the Metairie, La., Woman's Club. This honor is based on equal service to the club and the community. Gail has suffered three bereavements within a recent fifteen month span: her husband; her sister, Virginia Nelson Hime '35; and a young daughter-in-law.

These circumstances mean that they are both home-bound but they are both holding their own. She does miss the lunch and fellowship with classmates on fourth Mondays.

Sara May Love says that she has quit traveling and has taken a tutoring course in teaching English to Spanish speaking people. When she went to pick up a girl who was going with her she found the girl was a Spanish major from Agnes Scott. Sara May says she nearly fell out of the car.

Kathryn Maness Nelson has recovered from an accident in October which prevented her from making a wonderful trip to Washington and New York. Now she knows not to make a left turn without a light!

Carolyn Russell Nelson has been visiting four of her children. She drove to Florida in October for two good weeks with her son, Roger, visiting her sister in Ailey, Ga., going and coming. She spent Christmas in Spokane with her son Rusty at the request of daughter-in-law Raney, who seems to be tolerating cancer treatment. Carolyn expects to be in Spokane for an undetermined length of time.

Lillian Herring Rosas writes that she, like countless others in the San Fernando Valley, is coping with the devastation of the January 17th earthquake. The cosmetic damage, interior and exterior cracks, will be repaired shortly. The emotional damage will take longer. Her daughter and family live in nearby Pasadena. Two young grandsons are a joy.

Frances Tufts Schreeder reports that her son, seriously injured in a skiing accident, is out of intensive care at Emory Hospital and doing well.

Your secretary was in the enthusiastic crowd on campus when Mary Brown Bullock was presented as the seventh president of Agnes Scott College.

SECRETARY

Gainesville, FL 32606

Your secretary welcomed a letter from Eva Poliakov Goodman telling of her very satisfying life in San Francisco. Her days, she said, are filled with reading, shopping and attending art lectures given by Brandeis University Women's Committee Modern Art lecturer. In addition, she attends opera lectures and videos given by the art lecturer's husband in their oceanside condo. Eva is active in her synagogue, and participates weekly in a writing group of which she is the oldest member. "I never dreamed I'd want to write weekly after freshman English at Agnes Scott."

Eva is fortunate in having family nearby. Her daughter Beverly and her husband are Eva's best friends, she says, always there for her, and keeping her feeling younger than 80+. She enjoys their two sons, for whom she often acts as sitter and tutor. Her oldest grandson is now in London, where he has a position with the Swiss Bank. Eva's son, Dr. David Goodman, directs the Endocrinology Laboratory at the University of Pennsylvania Medical School. Eva hopes to attend the ASC class reunion.

Carol Griffin Scoville wrote in November that she and Orlin were to move to a retirement facility in their area in December. They plan to participate in their same church, AAUW, and agricultural retiree activities for some years to come. It has been over a year since Anna Humber Little has seen any member of the class, and class news cards come few and far between, so news is scarce. However, she has enjoyed a phone visit with Betty Edwards Gray recently and received a Christmas letter from her. Betty and Stephen continue to live at Canterbury Court, but because of his Parkinson's disease, their activities are more limited than formerly. Betty enjoys attending Senior University with him and coming home to have lunch together and rehash what they have heard. Betty and Anna also hope to attend the class reunion.

Anna enjoyed a Christmas visit with her daughter and family in Houston. All four grandchildren were there, and her irresistible two-year old great-grandson. It was a busy and happy family time. She missed her usual telephone visits with Elizabeth Heaton Mullino when in Houston. Lib was away, spending Christmas with her daughter in California. Lib has problems now with the knee in one leg and the ankle of the other, so getting around is difficult for her. Otherwise, she is in good health.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Margaret Smith Bowie does volunteer work with the Red Cross in North Charleston, S.C.

Mary Virginia Allen is quite happy in her apartment at Cooper Hall in Mt. Pleasant, S.C. but misses her friends in Decatur and her cats. Recent surgery has improved the sight in one eye, which enables her to drive to visit nearby cousins and the ocean which she loves! She says when she needs rejuvenating, she takes a walk on the beach to watch the ships coming out of Charleston Harbor. She also stays busy with Habitat for Humanity work and teaching Sunday School.

Rosalyn Crispin Robinson has retired for the third time, in this instance as Executive Director of the Sheperd's Center of Harlingen, which she began and has directed for the past six years. September through November were harrowing times, including selling her house, getting a new director for the Center, getting someone to direct the 100-mile annual bike tour fund raiser, and finding a house in Kerrville, Texas, to move into. After two weeks in Kerrville, everything was unpacked, the pictures in place, and nothing left on the floor but books, for lack of sufficient bookcases. At a meeting of Sheperd's Centers of America in Nashville in November, Rosalyn visited with Philip Davidson, a former ASC history professor and his daughter, Page. He is a chipper 92, and sounds and looks like his 30-year-old self of 60 years ago. The distressing news is that his son, young Philip, who scammed around the campus in the 30s, was hospitalized with lymphoma. Rosalyn has two sons, two grandchildren, and one nine-month-old great grandson. One son is a psychologist at the state hospital in Kerrville. The other is a newspaper editor/writer in San Benito and Weslaco, Texas. He has four published books, with three more to appear in the next six months. His field of specialization is southwest American history in the last half of the nineteenth century. His book on Ranald McKenzie was awarded the prestigious Fehrenback Award this year by the Texas Historical Commission.

Marian Calhoun Murray had a month this past summer touring England, Scotland and Wales in a rented Toyota van with her younger son, his wife, Marion's daughter, and her daughter's two children ages, 17 and 20. They got to see lots of things on their own schedule. Marian also had her second knee replacement during Thanksgiving week, but she's walking well now. All 30 of her immediate family are doing well, including her nine great-grandchildren.

Nina Parke Hopkins has been in the midst of a severe arthritic attack in her neck, shoulder and left arm. She was unable to drive her car for a few weeks, and couldn't even send Christmas cards. She hopes to make it to the big 60th reunion in April, and has asked her daughter, Nina Jr., to travel to Atlanta at the same time, in case she needs any help.

Dorothea Blackshear Brady just returned from her husband's 60th reunion at Tech and realizes that she's not far behind! They have had trips to Atlanta, Highlands, Gatlinburg, Biloxi, and their yearly trip to the Gulf Shores with their daughter and her family.

Vera Pruitt Bright plans to attend the 60th reunion (it will be her first) so that her husband can see Agnes Scott, as he has heard so much about it!

Anne Harman Mauldin says she has had a year of doctor's visits, but she thinks everything is straightened out now. She and her husband have had several short trips, mainly in connection with The Callaway Family Association, Inc., of which they are board members. At a general meeting in October in Frankfort, Ky., two Callaways were there from Broadway, England, and drove back to Atlanta with the Mauldins, for their first-ever visit to Atlanta. All of Anne's children and grandchildren joined her for the holidays.

Carol Griffin Scoville and Orlin moved Dec. 16 to a retirement community the next county over from their previous home. Now in Fairfax, Carol says that ties to their old church, community and people are near at hand. She says responsibilities are far fewer, and their new place is definitely home.

Catherine Bates and her ASC roommate Lois Hart saw Spain and Portugal together in 1994. They had toured China, Korea and Japan in 1990. Catherine's life has been one of teaching and traveling. After completing graduate study at Columbia University, she taught anthropology in Japan and later Psychology in Hong Kong. Earlier she taught religion and was dean of students in three U.S. colleges located in the South. She vows that of all the students she ever taught, the Chinese were the most appreciative and serious. Lois Hart now lives in El Paso, near her sister, Laura Hart Disselkoe '34. Catherine invites classmates to visit her at her retirement community where she reports an atmosphere reminiscent of the Chataqua gatherings that Mrs. Sydenstricker often recommended to the class. The diversity of religions among Penney Farms residents produces many lively discussions and residents also are engaged in a wide variety of activities.

Ori Sue Jones Jordan and her husband relive life through their two children and five grandchildren. One granddaughter teaches sports psychology at FSU and is studying for a doctorate.

Sarah Nichols Judge and husband, Jack, had visits from their scattered children and grandchildren during Christmas holidays. Longtime boat enthusiasts, they recently cruised the Hawaiian Islands. She writes: with most of the class approaching their 80th birthdays, that age does not seem as old as it once did.

Jane Blair Roberson celebrated her 80th birthday with 50 family members and friends at her ancestral home in Loudon, Tenn. Her five grandchildren came from Oregon, California, Illinois, Ohio and North Carolina. Jane plays in her church's hand bell choir, which gave several Christmas concerts and played at one wedding. Jane is active in the DAR, the Federated Women's Club, Garden Club and three bridge clubs. She says she enjoys all her days.

Guidelines For Submitting Class News

The next CLASS NEWS deadline is May 5, 1995. News received after that date will be published in the December issue. Deadline for the December 1995 issue of MAIN EVENTS is Aug. 5. News received after that date will appear in the April 1996 issue.

Please send your Class News, notices of births and of deaths to the alumnae office. The alumnae office will send you a postcard acknowledging receipt of your information.

Please include the alumna's maiden (birth) name and class. Please verify spellings. All news needs to be typed or written clearly. If you or your classmate has an unusual spelling of a name, please call that to our attention.

In sending a birth announcement, please include the husband's name, even if the alumna does not use it in her mailing address. Also include the baby's name and birthday.

Please report weddings and other planned events only after the fact.

Agnes Scott has nearly 10,000 living alumnae. We want to keep in touch with all of you and keep you in touch with each other. Except for budget restraints limiting the number of pages, CLASS NEWS is printed with only minor editing, so be selective. Let us hear from you regularly.

Contact your class secretary today with your news.

Dean McKoin Bushong spent Christmas week with a daughter and her three lively youngsters. Dean lives with memories of her wonderful Millard and begs her class to treasure the days they have with their family members. Dean is grateful for her three sister, ages 72, 76 and 82.

Helen Handte Morse, Shirley Christian Ledgerwood and Jane Thomas Tilson meet often now that Jane is back in California after living for a while in her old New England home. The class congratulates Shirley on the publication of her Unlocked Dreams which includes Sarah Catherine Wood Marshall Lesourd's poems and biography of Sarah Catherine.

Rebecca Whitley Nunan and Carlton still love their tree-surrounded home near Emory. One son, daughter-in-law and two grandsons share this old 22-room house, and take pride in the boys' academic and sports records.

Mildred Clark Sargent and Jim had an adventurous reunion of his WW II P-51 Fighter Squadron at magnificently scenic Lake Placid. Pilots were there from many states as far away as Hawaii. The spirit these "Flying Tigers" demonstrated in the skies over China and Burma was still theirs and already there are plans for their 52nd reunion in El Paso. All are grateful that the Chinese government will be dedicating a monument in Nanking this year to our KIAs as well as their own.

The class of 1936 anticipates its own reunion, and Mildred urges the class to send her more news for Main Events.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Frances James Donohue is still farming and selling real estate in Maryland, and enjoying living next door to her grandsons.

The University of North Carolina's School of Law recently presented Bertha Merrill Holt, a member of the North Carolina General Assembly, with a "Special Distinguished Alumni Award."

Class President Frances Steele Garrett appeared with her husband, Franklin, on a PBS special "Lost Atlanta—The Way We Were" with nostalgic views from the late thirties showing street cars, soda fountains, the old auditorium and the Varsity.

Frances Lasseter Rambo is president of the Decatur Alumnae Club which recently had Sally Mahoney as guest speaker. Florence and Frances both attended the retirement party for Bertie Bond.

Frances Wilson Hurst has recently published the second booklet on outdoor art in Madison, Wis. A friend helped with poems inspired by eight new pieces of sculpture in Common Joy II, the sequel to Common Joy: Outdoor Art in Madison 1991.

They have enjoyed good reviews and a book signing at a local store.

Annie Laura Phillips and Sam, in their fourteenth year of teaching Conversational English to Internationals in their church in Peachtree City, took time off to watch the shuttle Endeavor lift off in Florida.

Sarah Johnson Linney's husband, George, wrote the news that she has a broken arm, but still has a few piano pupils and loves her work with internationals in Augusta.

Jane Estes and her sister, Sara, hosted their extended family's Thanksgiving gathering in the spacious home where they grew up and in which they still live in Gay, Ga.

Isabel McCain Brown and Bill use their large cottage in Montreat, N.C., to host family and friends in the summer, but they rest up during the six winter months in a nearby retirement community, Highland Farms. They keep the same mailbox year-round.

Fannie B. Harris Jones has a summer cottage at Montreat but no mailbox up there.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Fannie B. was the 1994 recipient of the Whitfield Healthcare Foundation's Humanitarian Award because of her outstanding contributions to Hamilton Medical Center.

Sarah Johnson Finney has three grandchildren in college. One is graduating from Stetson University, and the other two are freshmen at Furman University.

Martha Sue Redus was widowed in 1986, but is now living in a beautiful retirement home near friends and family. Her son and his wife and daughter, Laney Redus, 7, are living in Dallas, Texas.

Here's what the class of 1938 has been up to! Winnie Vass writes in her annual Christmas newsletter of the reunion of former students of Central School for Missionaries' Children located at Lubondai, Zaire. Winnie writes that rarely are all four of her daughters together, but they were present at this "happy, therapeutic" event. Winnie and Lach enjoyed staying in their apartment at Montreat this summer, working on their book, "The Lapsley Saga."

Ann Wheaton Bowers sends greetings from Santa Monica, Calif., where she says earthquakes are "part of the package" of living there. She writes that her roommate Genevieve Baird Farris believes if she could meet again with the whole gang, the group would "pick up where we left off, and feel 20 once again!"

Mildred Harding reported that Farleigh Dickinson University Press plans to publish her literary biography entitled Air-Bird in the Water: The Life and Works of Pearl Craigie. She's not sure if the publishers will keep that title, and no date for publication has been named yet. Mildred also had a part-time job at Shorecrest Preparatory School, but it was taxing on her energy and time that she needed to devote to other things and did not stay. Mildred's daughter, Branwen Denton visited her in Gulfport in August. She is a specialist in Mesopotamian archeology, teaching, researching, excavating, and consulting in Bahrain. Mildred attended two Agnes Scott functions held in St. Petersburg. In late September, however, she was in a car accident in which her right arm was broken. Fortunately, it had healed by Christmas.

The University of North Carolina's School of Law recently presented Bertha Merrill Holt with a "Special Distinguished Alumni Award." She is a member of the North Carolina General Assembly.

Nell Sheldon is spending Christmas holidays with her daughter, Allison, in Oklahoma City. Nell still remembers the very successful and emotional gathering of "Mish Kids" from China at Columbia Seminary in 1994, especially treasuring the meeting with all of the Bell sisters, including, Ruth, the wife of Billy Graham.

The class was sorry to hear that Nettie Mae Austin Kelley lost her husband, Kendrick King Kelley Jr. in October. The class sends her its heartfelt sympathy and condolences.

Lib Blackshear Flinn and Bill enjoyed taking a group of Senior Citizens to the Cumberland Theatre in Crossville, Tennessee, recently to see the play, "The Secret Garden." On their way back, they stopped off in Chattanooga to visit the aquarium and have lunch. Her latest good news is that her daughter is moving to Atlanta from San Antonio, and this will mean that all of her daughters now live in Atlanta, to provide her with plenty of visits from six grandchildren. Jean Chalmers Smith and Walter flew to Saratoga, Calif. for a 10-day visit with their daughter and son and five grandkids over Thanksgiving holidays. Walt Jr. flew in from Oregon to make it 11 in one house! Jean, Carol Hale Halsey, and Ruth Hertzka celebrated their 60th class reunion from Atlanta Girls' High recently. Margaret Morrison Blumberg read the delightful poetry which Carol wrote to accompany their skit, impersonating the great ladies of politics.

June Harvey Eager's descriptive name for those at 55th reunion is great: The Survivors! She's done quite well—a week in Paris with her family in June, a week with friends in Cyprus, a trip to New Zealand in October. She plans to visit her granddaughter in March at Tulane, in New Orleans.

Ruby Laney Sewell teaches Hatha yoga and Middle Eastern dance (belly dancing), and hopes to continue until 1999, preparing for our 60th reunion. She attended a belly dance workshop in Albuquerque in August and a meditation retreat in November.

Evelyn Sears Schneider reports husband Mort is better following a severe infection after hip surgery and a bout with metastatic cancer. She has given two lectures this past year, "The Brou-ha-ha of Hamlet" and a biography of E.E. Cummings. They enjoy their home, cats, friends, and visits to the Orlando Shakespeare festival, Southern Ballet, Orlando Opera, and plays performed by students of Rollins College.

From California Emily Harris Swanson writes she has finished an American Association of Retired Persons eight-hour driving course for senior citizens and highly recommends it. She's judged a dog show at San Rafael and planned to judge another in December at San Mateo.

Eleanor Hall and Jenny Kyle Dean both wrote about their trip to England in June. Sponsored by the Church of England, it was a "parish" tour to Kent County (garden of England) and Kew Gardens. They were the only two to sign up, so the entire group of 25 people entertained them royally. They visited historical sights, magnificent gardens at their peak, had delightful meals and made many new friends. They also spent a few days in London. Eleanor had foot surgery earlier.

Phyllis Johnson O'Neal's children have been very supportive since the death of her husband and her bout with shingles. During the summer she enjoyed a cruise to the Greek Isles and a guided bus tour of the Canadian Rockies—both beautiful spots. Phyllis enjoys visits in Atlanta with classmates Hayden Sanford Sams and Elizabeth Shepard Green. She met Lois Walton Townsend in Atlanta for a weekend. Lois graduated from Sophie Newcomb, has seven children and 14 grandchildren. Phyllis has four and four.

During the summer, Dorothy Lazenby Stipe enjoyed a trip to Italy with her church choir, Dunwoody Methodist. They sang at St. Peter's in Rome, the Majordomo in Florence, St. Mark's in Venice and cathedrals in Bergamo, Padua and Siena. It was a memorable experience. Dorothy, Sarah Cunningham Carpenter, and 16-18 other members of the Decatur ASC Chapter attended a dinner at ASC Interim President Sally Mahoney's home in November. Marie Merritt Rollins finished a little history of her mother's family for her children and cousins. She says she's still trying to do the things she's always done and hasn't realized she is too old to do them.

Mamie Ratliff Finger entertained the Knoxville ASC alumnae on October 17. Jean Kennedy and Amy Davis brought news from Agnes Scott. On October 20, she and Ellis celebrated their 52nd wedding anniversary at the St. Moritz in New York City on an Arts Museum tour sponsored by the Knoxville Gallery of Art. Son Bill writes for Family Health International, Research Triangle, Raleigh-Durham. At a Hershel Cairo Population Conference in September, the journal he edits, Network, was awarded the 1994 Global Award for best population concern magazine. Son Ellis' wife, Phyllis, is in Tokyo on a year's exchange teaching, and his son Geoffrey, age 11, is spending a year studying Japanese culture and language. Ellis is Presenter of the Arts at Lafayette College so his schedule allows him to visit his family in Tokyo. Mamie Lee, Ellis and Geoffrey spent Thanksgiving at Homestead, Hot Springs, Va. and planned Christmas in Williamsburg.

Frances Guthrie Brooks and Wayne had an "all adults" Christmas with children coming in relays for short visits.

Lou Pate Jones and Jeff encourage others to visit Turkey—much to see. She attended the ASC Alumnae meeting in Memphis in the fall and was pleased with the messages brought by the three from ASC.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Harriette von Grempe Lee regrets that she was unable to attend the last ASC Alumnae Association event at Mamie Lee Finger's house in Knoxville, due to illness. Her golf was also suspended for the season, as she fractured a knee in May of 1994. She was able to make it to her sister's oldest granddaughter's wedding in October, however. She is teaching Sunday School again, and was scheduled to give a book review at the end of October at the E.S.O. of the local Federal Women's Club. Harriette and her husband, Ben, flew to Dallas, Texas, with their son, David's family for Thanksgiving. Their daughter, Robin, is teaching in Maryville, Tenn., and is serving her second year as president of the local Delta Kappa Gamma chapter.

Evelyn Baty Christman reports that her daughter Carol is undergoing intensive chemotherapy for cancer of the lung. In the spring of '94 she had received chemotherapy and radiation following a mastectomy. Evelyn's other two children are fine, as are all ten grandchildren, four of whom are in college.

Hazel Solomon Beazley's

house has recently undergone extensive renovation (kitchen enlarged and porch renovated) after 40 years.

Mary Virginia Brown
Cappleman wrote in July that Franklin flew to Guam to attend the 50th anniversary of the U.S. landing on Guam. She was anticipating a visit in August from her daughter Mary's family.

Helen Gates Carson wrote of being ordered to slow down by her doctor. She was hopeful of attending the next reunion.

Grace Elizabeth Anderson Cooper's 13th grandchild, Clayton Anderson, was born on October 3. His father, Emmett, is founder and president of Honeyword, a unique approach to Bible study for children.

Mary Winston Crockett Norfleet sees Henrietta Thompson Wilkinson in Montreat in the summer. Mary Winston has three sons, two daughters and 13 grandchildren. Her daughter, Mary Norfleet Megson '75X, is a pediatrician at Children's Hospital in Richmond. Her youngest daughter, Agnes (Davidson 1981) is pastor of North Decatur Presbyterian Church. Agnes' husband, Larry Arney, is director of Habitat for Humanity in the Atlanta.

In September, Dibba Davis Johnston and Smith visited their son, Smith III, who is a doctor with NASA in Houston. On their return Smith attended his 55th reunion at Emory, then they went to Myrtle Beach for the ASC mini-reunion. Thanksgiving was spent with their daughter Janice Johnston Kane '71 and her family.

Carolyn Forman Piel has two new grandchildren: Jessica Piel (father, Zack Piel) and Wil Scott Hubbard (mother, Mary Piel Hubbard, M.D.) Carolyn is busy reviewing 30 years of research in pediatric nephrology and is president of U.C.S.F. Emeritus Association.

Louise Hughston Oettinger, after years of living in India, Vienna and Paris, has retired with her husband to Chapel Hill, N.C. They are hoping to attend the 55th reunion.

Mary Dixon Warren and John celebrated their 52nd anniversary last summer. They have three sons, one daughter and 11 grandchildren ranging from ages 4 to 22. John is a retired doctor, and they spend much time traveling.

Polly Heaslett Badger would like to clarify her news item in the December Main Events. Polly did visit Henrietta Wilkinson in Montreat last April with Sophie Crane and Evelyn Christman. They all had lunch with Isabel McCain Brown '37 at Mary Frances Ault's home. But it was Polly who met her two sisters in San Francisco where they spent three days before traveling by train to Lake Tahoe for an elderhostel.

On her 75th birthday, Eleanor Hutchens received from her sisters "an heirloom to be a source of innocent merriment for generations yet unborn": They had her Wednesday morning tennis doubles game professionally videotaped on her backyard court.

Mildred Joseph Colyer was diagnosed as having lung cancer in the fall of '93. She wrote last summer that, after chemotherapy and radiation, she was doing fine except for some lingering side-effects.

Nell Pinner Wisner is "well on the mend" following a heart problem which developed at Thanksgiving. Because of Nell's vision problems (legally blind), she and Bert moved in January to Chambrel, a retirement home in Williamsburg.

For several days in October of 1993, Mary Mac Templeton Brown was hostess for three classmates: V.J. Watkins, Isabella Robertson White and Jane Salters Chapman.

Sophie Montgomery Crane writes that her family celebrated Christmas in early December when their daughter Janet and family were visiting from Taiwan.

Mary Reines Burge's husband, Dan, had a slight stroke in November and is slowly recovering. Their daughter is deputy director for the five branches of Atlanta's Legal Aid. Dan retired four years ago and is doing a part-time health care job in teaching and reviewing medical costs all over Georgia.

Harriet Stimson Davis has settled comfortably in her new home. She is living in a retirement complex near Marietta. Christmas was spent with her son Gordon who lives with his family in Boca Raton, Fla.

Henrietta Thompson Wilkinson has had a busy year entertaining out-of-town guests, taking an art course, reading and participating in an exercise class. Three of her four children were home for Christmas.

Mary Frances "Boots" Moore Culpepper reports that her granddaughter Shannon Smith graduated from Austin Presbyterian Seminary and was ordained last summer as associate pastor of First Presbyterian Church in Arlington, Texas. Her sister Courtney works as a C.P.A. for Ernst & Young, Fort Worth.

Katherine Patton Carssow says that life seems to get busier all the time. She is hoping to get to the reunion in April along with husband Jim and daughter Lynn Carssow Adams '70.

The Alumnae Office received the following information:

Elizabeth Warren Mayer and Penn Hammond Vieau report that 18 classmates and their husbands got together for a mini-reunion at Myrtle Beach, S.C., in October. The same people have been making this yearly trip for the last 10 years, always staying in houses, never in hotels.

Emily Underwood Gault was in the hospital for a month and is now receiving care at home.

Harriet Davis has moved into an apartment at Presbyterian Village and is looking forward to moving into a duplex next year.

Sabine Brumby Korosky has accepted a two-year commitment as president/acting director of Religious Community Services, Inc., a local charity organization in Clearwater, Fla. This is an extensive ecumenical organization supported by 76 congregations of all faiths. All of the work is done by many volunteers with only a full-time bookkeeper and an office manager as paid employees.

Florence Ellis Gifford's granddaughter, Lane Gifford, and Martha Dunn Kerby's great nephew, Scott Franklin, were married in Nashville, Tenn., in November 1994. Martha and Flonnie enjoyed very much seeing each other again at the wedding.

If you saw the pretty blond Cissy Biggers doing TV promotions for the Kroger food drive during Christmas, you will be interested to know that she is the daughter-in-law of Ellen Muzzy Biggers. She can also be seen as hostess on the TV show "Queens" on the Lifeline channel.

Nancy Willstatter Gordon and Peter enjoyed a fascinating trip to Turkey in November. It was a great time to see the ruins without all the summer tourists.

Doris Dalton Crosby's husband, C.P., died Oct. 3, 1994 after a long bout with diabetes. Doris and C.P. had enjoyed planning for their 50th wedding anniversary celebration on Oct. 11 which their four children were having for them. Two of their daughters are ASC graduates.

Margaret Lentz Slicer writes that she and her husband of 53 years still think Cape Cod is the ideal place to live. They stay very active with church and volunteer work.

Gay Swagerty Guptill is pleasantly settled in Prospect, Ky., with her son Stephen and his wife. In June, all of her family came to see her, their first real reunion in 20 years.

Louise Musser Kell's husband, Tom, died in his sleep on Sept. 22, 1994. His death is indeed a tragedy coming so soon after their oldest son Wayne's death on Mother's Day.

Nina Mae Snead de Montmollin continues her work with the Democratic Party and is pleased that their senatorial candidate won in the November election.

Laura Sale McDonell and Durward returned to Nassau for the month of January where Durward will again serve as minister for the Methodist church there.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Frances Alston Lewis, whose four children are thriving, is living in Corpus Christi, Texas, and welcomes any member of the class to come visit her.

Harriette Cochran Mershon is bedridden these days, unfortunately. Her husband has been handling everything for her.

A new grandchild for Mary James Seagle Edelbut and Carl! Robert James Huitbregtse was born to their daughter Katherine and her husband, Gary, in Fort Collins, Colo. July 16, 1994. Mary James and Carl celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a four-day vacation at the Grand Hotel in Point Clear, Ala., a place they had often enjoyed when first married.

Mary Louise Palmour Barber and Walter spent two weeks in August with their younger son Jeff and his family in Alexandria, Va., with side trips to Washington.

Elizabeth Russell Stelling lunched with Neva Jackson Redfern and Clarence at Emory Inn Restaurant and brought interesting news of Edith Schwartz Joel and her husband, Richard. On October 7, 1994, Richard, an opera enthusiast, discussed "Opera: Try It-You'll Like It" at the Bascom-Louise Gallery in Highlands, N.C. The program consisted of an informal discussion illustrated with some of Joel's favorite operatic arias. He showed the difference in various types of operatic voices with familiar excerpts from the world's most popular operas. Joel serves on the boards of the Highlands Chamber Music Festival and the annual Bel Canto Recital Steering Committee. He is a long-time member of the board of the Knoxville Opera Company. Neva and Clarence enjoyed a weekend in Charleston, S.C., in November where they visited Mary Robertson Perry. Christmas was spent in Florida.

Frances "Tuck" Tucker Johnson and Ed had three marvelous weeks in Europe, six days in Prague, six in Budapest, five in Vienna and three in Baden. She often sees Doris Hasty Barron and Vance, who is pastor emeritus of the University Presbyterian Church in Chapel Hill, N.C., and Gay Currie Fox when visiting children and grandchildren in Black Mountain, N.C.

It is saddening to report the sudden death of Jesse H. Wheeler Jr., husband of Margery Gray Wheeler, on July 8, 1994.

Wheeler was a professor emeritus of geology at the University of Missouri. He was honored by the National Council for Geographic Education in 1990 as a Distinguished Mentor, and he was the senior co-author of "World Regional Geography," the most widely used college textbook on that subject.

Lillian Gish Alfriend and Bill's year was punctuated by a 6.7 Northridge earthquake, but no damage was done to their home. In May they attended a nephew's wedding in Tallahassee. June and July were spent at their summer home in New Castle, N.H. In August there was a family reunion in Memphis. Thanksgiving was in the Mountain Rushing River area of Kernsville, Calif., and the December finale, a Caribbean cruise with Ventura children. Christmas was at home with New Hampshire children.

The alumnae office received the following information:

As of Jan. 1, 1993, Margaret D. Michael retired from her interior design business, Interiors Unlimited.

Jane Stillwell Espy and Robert had a wonderful trip in October to Athens, Greece, Istanbul, and Ephesus, Turkey, then a cruise of the Greek Islands. They had just returned home when Jane had a very bad fall, injuring her right forehead and cheek. After a CAT scan determined no serious trouble, she went ahead with her cataract surgery on November 10. Her ophthalmologist is Peter Gordon, M.D., son of Nancy Willstatter Gordon '41. They had a nice visit with Mary Kirkpatrick Reed and Dan in Columbus, Ga., on Dec. 27. Mary has an interesting collection of over 250 Santa Clauses and she enjoys entertaining many groups at Christmas.

Ruby Rosser Davis wants everyone to know that "Nancy Green Carmichael would appreciate hearing from us along with appreciating our prayers as she battles lymphoma."

A friend of Ruby Rosser Davis gave your secretary the following information about her. Ruby is an active member of Peachtree Presbyterian Church in Atlanta and was one of only two women honored by that church last year. She was named Life Member of the Presbyterian Women's organization for her work in the Circle, Chapel Prayer Program, Council for Christian Community activities, and her organization of a library circle to establish and staff a church library. Also she was instrumental in organizing the Catherine S. Sims Faculty Enrichment Fund at Agnes Scott. Congratulations, Ruby.

Mary Estill Martin Rose writes that she and her husband are still enjoying travel while they are healthy. They had a delightful trip to Italy in March. This summer they converted a screened porch to an all-year sun room, and now they can live on their first floor if it's necessary. In November, they needed some R & R and went to the Costa Del Sol of Spain for three weeks. They enjoyed side trips to Madrid and Casablanca.

Mary Brock Williams and Jim spent the Christmas season in Europe with daughter Nancy and her husband Matthew Mancini, who holds the Chair of American Studies at Eotvas Lorand University in Budapest, Hungary, for the year. They all visited Salzburg, Prague and Vienna as well. Mary said it was magic and thrilling to be at St. Stephens Cathedral on Christmas morning.

When everyone received their class letter from Frances Radford "Raddy" Mauldin, they did not get the whole story. She wrote the letter in October, but the alumnae office was not able to mail it until December. The ball popped out of her hip socket the second time, and in November she had her third major surgery for 1994. She spent ten days in rehab before getting home in mid-December. It seems to be working well, and she is looking forward to a healthy 1995!

Anne Frierson Smoak and Harold celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in 1994 as well as the arrival of a great granddaughter.

Helen Summerour Zimmerman and Alex spent Christmas in San Francisco with their daughter and her family.

Martha Ann Smith Roberts says she and Earle have felt the freedom of retirement for the first time in 1994. Trips to the outer Banks, Athens, Ga., for the 55th reunion of the Athens High School class of 1939, the North Carolina mountains, Tampa and Lake Waccamaw filled their year.

Anne Paisley Boyd and Bill are on Edisto Island, S.C. where Bill is doing an interim at the Presbyterian Church until May 1995. The Manse was built in the 1820s, is in the Historic Register, and on the Edisto tour of homes. Anne enjoyed having a luncheon for some of her Agnes Scott friends: Caroline Smith Hassell, Mabel Stowe Querry, and Frances Dubose Lindsay '46, who lives on Edisto.

Maryann Cochran Abbott and Forrest cruised from Buenos Aires to Gibraltar and Barcelona then celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a trip to the Pacific Northwest. They have moved their sailboat to Beaufort, S.C., and have fallen in love with this quaint, historical Southern town.

The class' thoughts and prayers are with Hannah Reeves, whose mother died.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Mary Jo Chapman Carrao was blessed with two new grandchildren in August of 1993.

Nancy Thomison Hawkins sold her family home in 1989 and moved to a smaller house. She remains active in the First United Methodist Church in Dayton, Tenn., in spite of bouts with arthritis.

Clare Bedinger Baldwin and Walter celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a family reunion. Their children gave them a dinner, sang "Golden Oldies" to them, and presented them with a wall hanging and an album of photographs.

Anne Ward Amacher says her mother's doctor, Joanne Smith T, a wonderful doctor and a "saint," is an Agnes Scott graduate, who has also been a missionary to Korea.

Claire Bennett Kelly's son, Pete, teaches high school science in Bellingham, Wash. Her daughter, Nancy, is an associate with Hendrick and Associates, commercial interior designers in Atlanta. Stepson, Tom, is an adolescent psychiatrist in Palm Beach, Fla. Claire does volunteer work at Tallahassee Memorial Hospital and Florida State University School of Music.

Elizabeth "Bippy" Gribble Cook and Steve celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary November 29, 1994, with month-long activities. They are enjoying retirement in the Texas hill country, north of Austin, Tex. Steve is restoring the house they are living in which "Bippy's father began in 1951. Ruth Farrior has visited the Cooks recently.

Nell Turner Spettel, after attending the class's 50th reunion, thinks her class looks pretty good. Nell, having returned to Columbus, Ga., after 23 years, is president of the Artist's Guild. She is painting for commission, playing bridge, dancing and grandmothership three boys.

Ruth Kolthoff Kirkman, having lived some years in Wisconsin and Michigan, has enjoyed the last 10 years in Florida. Tom is pastor of the Poinciana Chapel in Palm Beach.

Martha Liddell McCarty has remarried after her husband John's death in 1982. She feels that Clint was brave to marry someone with four children and their spouses plus eleven grandchildren. After the wedding in January 1992, Martha and Clint spent a month in England.

Martha Rhodes Bennett writes that in August she and her daughter and her family enjoyed a trip to Paris. Recently, Martha traveled to Prague and Germany. She enjoyed boating down the Elbe River, seeing Check Point Charlie and Potsdam, a newly alive city. Martha is president of her local League of Women Voters.

June Lanier Wagner writes that she and Jim went with the Eighth Air Force Group to commemorate World War II D-Day invasion at Omaha and Utah Beaches. Their ship was reviewed by Queen Elizabeth, and later they attended the Queen's birthday celebration in London.

Aurie Montgomery Miller and John gathered recently with some Agnes Scott alumnae at Columbia Theological Seminary to hear Bishop Ting, head of the Chinese Christian Church, express appreciation to the group for their missionary work in China.

Elizabeth "Betty" Bacon Skinner enjoyed visiting in July with Margaret Sheperd Yates '45 and Mary Louise Duffee Philips and Frank in Ponte Vedra, Fla. Betty and Billy, her husband, had a fall trip to France and Switzerland, visiting Lausanne, where Betty had lived at one time.

Miriam House Lloyd retired from working in Westchester County, N.J., in the District Attorney's office in January 1994. Her son Tom is a sports anchor at CNN in Atlanta. Miriam has a daughter, living in New Jersey, and another daughter living in Colorado. One of her sons lives in Los Angeles, and another in Arizona.

Ruth Farrior has traveled recently with her brother, Hugh, and his wife to New England, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. Later, she visited two nieces in Sweden. In the fall Ruth joined two other Chinese missionaries at the Columbia Theological Seminary to hear Bishop Ting of China speak.

Katherine Philips Long flies in a little plane with George in his Barnabas Ministry, which endeavors to encourage young pastors. Though a bit fearful, Katherine is quick to fly if the route goes near their four children and spouses and their 14 grandchildren.

Margaret Shepherd Yates used to travel a bit with her husband, Don. Now they spend weekends at either their beach house or their mountain condo. Margaret reports that dealing with house repairperson or buying groceries occupy much of her time.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Mary Florence McKee Anderson and her husband are active in their community and enjoy traveling. They came south from their home in Maryland to attend her 50th college reunion this past year. In May 1994, they took a Smithsonian trip to southwest England. At the time of her report, they had just returned from an Elderhostel trip to Maine in September.

In October, Elaine Kuniansky Gutstadt and Joe joined Dotty Kahn Prunhuber and Larry at their home in the Berkshires for a weekend of reminiscing and enjoying the beautiful fall colors. Canoe trips on the Housatonic and on the lake in front of Dotty's house made the weekend special. Later in the month Elaine and Julia Slack Hunter enjoyed the beautiful flowers and lunch in Atlanta's Botanical Garden.

Barbara Frink Allen and Lew celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary at North Bethany Beach with all their family: "A very special time with two graduations, a birthday and a baptism to celebrate also." Lew continues his boards and committees and Barbara continues her Pasadena Symphony and church volunteerism. They had a beautiful tour of New England in the fall—"Leaf Peeking and Rock Pounding." Barbara's sisters and brother-in-law visited in the spring for their California reunion. The Alaska Allens were to come South to thaw out for the holidays. Barbara's color-coded Christmas card picture came with a cutline to explain who belonged to which bairn in Virginia, Arkansas, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Moscow (Russia, that is). Barbara's P.S. said, "See you in April—getting real excited!"

Joyce "Joo Froo" Freeman Marting wrote on her unique Thomas Nast Christmas card, "I'll see you at reunion."

Margaret Mace Hannah also said she hopes to make it to ASC for the 50th reunion. She doesn't feel old enough for it, but says she had better start acting and admitting her age! Margaret and Sam went to France and the Seychelles for four weeks in September and October. Also in Europe in the fall was Betty Davis Shingler with Bob—in Belgium to visit son Robert: "Brussels was beautiful, as were Brugge and Antwerp. But their reason for going, Jon Fooshee, was the best sight of all! Also Kelly, Marshall, Robert and Helen." Betts marvelled at how they had moved, got their new house beautifully decorated, settled and had Jon, all in three months' time. Mystery Women Identified

ALUMNAE IDENTIFY STUDENTS IN DONOR LIST EDITION PHOTOS

Many thanks to the alumnae who responded to the photo identification contest run in the November 1994, Donor List edition of Main Events. You may want to pull out your edition for fun to see who's who.

Mary Scott Hill '41 identified three of the seven women in the turn-of-the-century photo (photo one), one of them her mother. From left to right, they are: Laura Candler, Hill's mother, Grace Hardie, and Eilleen Gober, center.

Many responded to picture number three to correct the automobile model as a 1941 Ford. However, only Dorothy Nash Daniel '43 correctly named herself as the pedestrian in the photo and Mary Brock Williams '43 as the driver. The year was either 1941 or 1942.

Regarding the fourth photograph, which pictured four women around the wall of the quad, conflicting answers were received. Here are their reports, and if anyone can narrow the photo's subjects, please contact the Office of Publications. Mary Louise Duffee Philips '44 recognized herself in the plaid blazer holding the ASC News and Martha Rhodes Bennett '44 as standing by the wall, looking upward. Adele Dieckmann McKee '48 believes the people to be: Jennie Wren Stine '48, sitting on the wall; Betty Jean Brown Ray '48, sitting on steps; Kathleen Hewson Cole '48, standing against the wall; and Hunt Morris Ferrell '47, standing next to Cole. Nancy Irvine '51 identified the women as, clockwise from top: Doris Sullivan Tippens '49, Hunt Morris Ferrell '47, Willeen Tarry Braun '49, and Katherine Nelson Major '51.

Angela Gottsche '88 uncovered the mystery of photo six, identifying Diane Dobbins '64, and her mother, Myra Gottsche '64, as participants in the snow ball fight. The picture was taken in February 1964 in front of the library. The two were leaving the Hub when a photographer from the Atlanta Journal or the Atlanta Constitution asked to photograph them, and the picture appeared in one of the newspapers.

In photograph 10, Kathy Maynard Swick '74 identified herself as the accomplice from the window and the escapee as Roseanne Harkey Pruitt '74.

The official final identifications will be forwarded to the College archives. Thanks so much for your help.

Susan. At the writing of her Christmas greeting, Minnie was positive about getting over her shingles. Her greeting read: "A most special good wish for 1995, the year of our 50th!"

Julia Slack Hunter wrote "Where are the years flying to? We're on fast forward." And that is the story of Julia's life. She is working hard—along with her great committee—on our big 50th.

Dot Hunter wrote from St. Simons that they were enjoying unseasonably warm weather and were putting up Christmas decorations while the hibiscus were still blooming. But a little later Pat Elam wrote from the same clime that the leaves were falling, the wind had a bite, and they were envying their San Juan friends.

Molly Milam Inserni wrote from San Juan that any Billy Graham fans would be welcome at her house March 14-18 when that great evangelist is to be in Puerto Rico.

Virginia Lee Brown McKenzie and John's card presented a new wee lassie in their clan—Claire Elizabeth McKenzie. The card also pictured their new home in Alpharetta.

Wendy Whittle Hoge wrote that she and Inge and Ginny Carter Caldwell plan to be "present for the 50th, DV [God willing], as we say at Virginia Seminary." Wendy has joined the ranks of the grandmas. Nicholas was born to daughter Hilary. She witnessed the birth and said it was probably the most awesome moment of her life. Wendy and Ben had been in the Boston area with Hilary, and then were back and forth between there and Alexandria during Christmas. Wendy never thought she'd be doing night feedings in her 70th year!

Inge's delightful Christmas letter began: "... in loyalty to Puerto Rico, I am just now baking a Bacardi rum cake." She says her life goes on as usual, and her class is a delight. They were tussling with Zola at the time of her letter. Inge still swims at Swarthmore, reads a lot, and takes good care of Cricket the cat. She sketches as well. She, Wendy and Ginny are planning to attend the reunion in April.

Dorothy Dyrenforth Gay lost her husband and her son within a month of each other this past fall.

Mary Catherine Vinsant Grymes felt the force of Mother Nature in a big way in 1994. An ice storm in February in Memphis left her without power for ages, and then a surge of electricity burned up both her furnace and refrigerator. A tornado in April felled a major power line onto her central air conditioning unit and destroyed it. However, she did enjoy a fun trip in September to Seattle and the Canadian Rockies, and a Thanksgiving visit with her children and grandchildren in Pittsford, N.Y. She had a call from Carolyn Hall Medley at Christmas.

Jeanne Addison Roberts, professor of Literature at American University, was the presiding judge in October at an appeal by a self-appointed lawyer of Hamlet's conviction of six counts of murder. The debate was sponsored by the New York City Bar Association. In the end, the panel of judges voted to reverse one manslaughter conviction, but upheld the convictions in the other five homicides. Jeanne's book The Shakespearean Wild is now available in paperback.

Dorothy Spragens Trice wrote in December that she had suffered several broken ribs in a fall. Jim, who has been very ill and bedridden for a year, was better at the time of her note. Their children have been very supportive and Dot vows that she will be at the 50th reunion.

Emily Bradford Batts and Larry welcomed their fourth grandchild in October. They now have "two of each." They spent two weeks in November in Costa Rica visiting their "Costa Rican daughter," an exchange student who lived with them 1970-71, and attending her daughter's wedding.

Winifred Wilkinson Hausmann has retired after 30 years as minister of the Unity Center Church of Cleveland Heights, Ohio. She now does some guest speaking and some writing. She recently has started painting in acrylics. Three of Winifred's previously published books are still in print and her latest has just been placed with a New York agent.

Barbara Kincaid Mount is making progress in recovering from a stroke which affected her left side. She is now able to walk with a walker. Intensive therapy and the support of her new husband, Bill (whom she married in April 1994) have enabled her to do so well.

Shirley Graves Cochrane has a new book of poetry, Letters to the Quick/Letters to the Dead, ready for publication and expects it to be printed late this year.

Your secretary's son, Boisfeuillet Jones Jr., became president and general manager of The Washington Post in January. He previously served as vice president and general counsel.

Pattie Dean Curry attended Mary Quigley Hague's daughter's wedding in Spartanburg, S.C., last July. Pattie's daughter, Pattie Lee, a violinist, performed with the Boston, Mass., orchestra at the Boston Shell. One of Pattie's piano students, a talented girl from Indonesia, attended the Brevard Music Center last summer, which was thrilling for Pattie.

Martha Scott Johnson Haley enjoys all the activities at Washington and Lee where she is still housemother for the Betas. She has rented her Florida townhouse temporarily.

Jean Stewart Staton retired from her medical practice in July 1993.

The alumnae office received the following information:

The last few years have been quite eventful for Barbara Kincaid Mount. In 1992, she lost her first husband, Carlyle Trimble, she retired from her job as a librarian, and she suffered a stroke. She was remarried in April 1994, to W. F. Mount, a former high school sweetheart.

Many members of the class gathered in the mountains of North Carolina in October for a mini-reunion. Fluff Paisley Williams planned a delightful three-day gathering including mountain walks, informal dinners and a picnic on Mount Craggy, which gave class members a chance to become reacquainted in a relaxed, casual setting.

Black Mountain was the locale and Monte Vista Inn the hosts. Those in attendance included Genet Heery Barron and husband Lindsay from Newnan, Ga.; Doris Riddick Berry and husband Bob from Atlanta; Jane Cross from Louisville, Ky.; Anna George Dobbins from Oak Ridge, Tenn.; Martha Paisley Fast from Hot Springs Village, Ark.; Jean Williams Hand and husband Jim from Salem, Ore.; Laura Winchester Hawkins from Fernandina Beach, Fla.; Anne Hough Hopkins and husband Arvah from Gulfport, Miss.; Ruth Ellis Hunley from Monroe, N.C.; Anne Stine Hughes and husband John from Waukegan, Ill.; Kajie Johnson from Atlanta; Bet Patterson King and granddaughter Jessica Murphy from Fort Collins, Colo.; Margaret Kinard Latimer and husband Paul from Auburn, Ala.; Mary Ann Craig Link from Floyd, Va.; Louise Hoyt Minor from Richmond, Va.; Carroll Taylor Parker from Atlanta; Dale Bennett Pedrick and husband Larry from Jackson, Miss.; Mary McCalla Poe and husband Carter from Greenville, S.C.; Betty Crabill Rogers and husband Charles from Charleston, W.Va., with their houseguests Sergi and Olga from Russia; Anne Hill Jackson Smith and husband Jim from Champaign, Ill.; Mary Wakefield Tipton from Tiptonville, Tenn.; Mary Frances Anderson Wendt and husband Bob from Columbia, S.C.; Betty Allen Young and husband Preston from Louisville, Ky.; and hostess Florence Paisley Williams from Black Mountain.

Many thanks go to Fluff for her hospitality, to Bet's granddaughter Jessica for her flips down the mountain for the entertainment and awe of her elders, and to Russian guests Sergi and Olga for their insights into current affairs in their homeland.

Proudest news of the class are the continued awards going to Kajie Johnson in the field of journalism. The National Press Club Foundation selected her as one of the nation's top 20 women journalists to do oral histories. During the last 18 months Kajie has given many interviews, both on tape and written, and they will be placed in major universities for college journalism students. Kajie is a news writer for CNN.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Anne Crawford Stine Hughes celebrated her 50th wedding anniversary on Nov. 6, 1994, with John Hughes.

M. Margaret Kelly Wells has a new granddaughter in Tampa, Grace Wells, who is the daughter of her son, John, and wife, Carol. Margaret went to Ireland in late August and early September with the Irish Summer Institute. She was there when the cease fire was called and had the chance to talk with many Sinn Fein and Protestant leaders.

Jeanie R. Schoelles, a counselor at Winn Way Mental Health Center, recently traveled around the world with her husband, Al, visiting their architect daughter in Singapore. They ran into their neighbors Phil and Betty Noble '44 at the airport.

Laura Hawkins wrote that she was looking forward to the mini-reunion in Black Mountain, N.C. that was to take place during October 1994.

Alice Beardsley has just married Dr. Norman K. Garber.

Mary Manley Ryman and Milton enjoyed an around-the-world trip in fall 1994. They visited their daughter's family who are living in Saudi Arabia. They enjoyed the sights in Paris, Singapore, Bangkok and Hong Kong, and spent Thanksgiving with Mary's aunt in Seattle.

Marian Yancey Carroll enjoys working as a docent at the Carter Museum in Atlanta along with Mary Caroline Lindsay '51, also a docent. Marian and Gene have made four trips to Europe in the last five years. They introduced their children to Europe on a tour from Normandy to the Rhine and participated in services on the 49th anniversary of D-Day in which their dad had participated in 1944. This fall, they toured Scotland, her favorite part of Britain. She also reports that at Atlanta Girls High 50th reunion were Ruth Blair Ravitz, Pat McManman Ott, Margaret Yancey Kirkman, Jane da Silva Montague, Helen Goldman Alperin, Beth Jones Crabill, and Marian herself.

Caroline Hodges Roberts' daughter Millie married Steven Lewis Stepp on May 28 at their Moreland, Ga., farm. On Sept. 1, their son and his wife had the first granddaughter, Taylor Jordan. Barbara Waugaman Thompson, June Gattis

Williams and Susan Daugherty visited Caroline at Bent Tree in the fall; they all carpooled together as day students at Agnes Scott in the 1940's.

Before Mae Comer Osborne Parker's husband Dan's death, the two enjoyed trips to Bavaria, Germany, and Ischia in the Bay of Naples in recent years. They just finished building a second home on the Outer Banks a year before his death.

Nancy Geer Alexander got a kick out of the recent Agnes Scott Alumnae Magazine article but she hardly recognized her 50-year-younger self and certainly didn't remember the sailor! Nancy and her husband visited Marybeth Little Lobdell and Leighton in the fall. Mary Alice Compton Osgood and her guest, Jane Alsobrook Miller, visited Marybeth shortly thereafter and the three of them went to see Peggy Pirtle Rudisill.

Jane Barker Secord and Ap went from zero grandchildren to four in one year! Laura Elizabeth Secord was born Aug. 23, 1994, to their lawyer son, James Alan Secord, and Carol, who live in Mableton, Ga. Their son Forrest was married to Gail at the Presbyterian Church in Dalton, and she has three lively boys.

Anna Clark Rogers Sawyer's husband, Tom, had a bad fall in July and underwent surgery in August on three neck vertebrae and for stenosis. His recovery of stamina and use of his left hand have been slow. "Clarkie" herself has been having problems with her heart. Betzie Powers Crislip wrote "Clarkie" from Seattle that she and John were on the way to an Elderhostel in Alaska's inner passage in November.

Mildred Claire Jones Colvin's daughter Connie and husband Robert had a son, David, born Sept. 25, 1994, making seven grandchildren for Millie! Millie travels a lot in the summer.

Anne Shepherd McKee and Charles traveled to Hawaii to visit their daughter, Charlene in 1994. Next, they went to Maine with Charles' sister and her husband, staying in bed and breakfasts along the coast. They went to visit their daughter, Elsie, at Princeton Seminary where she has now been elected a full professor. Elsie came home with them, and they all went to the Central School reunion at Montreat where over 200 people from about 70 years of classes met for a glorious weekend. After returning home, they found Charles' central vision was going. Anne is driving and reading now, but Charles has learned to read with a TV enhanced scanner.

Jean Bellingrath Mobley says her two years at ASC gave her excellent preparation for Duke and getting her Ph.D. at the University of North Carolina. She and husband Wade enjoy living at The Pines in Davidson, N.C. Daughter Julia is a corporate trainer for Coca-Cola Enterprises in Atlanta and Julia's husband, W.E. Rodenbeck, is a vice president for Fidelity National Bank in Decatur. Their son Larry is a corporate executive in Texas and his wife is a professor of pediatrics at Texas Women's University.

Brame's broken wrist is almost all well; and Jo Culp Williams broke her hip in the fall, but is now walking without a cane.

In the fall, Sally Ellis Mitchell and George were in France. Early fall found Nancy Dendy Ryle and Dallas in England at the Royal Horticultural Gardens, followed by two weeks in Southern France.

Rita Adams Simpson went with a church group to Austria, where, she reports, "I never heard more beautiful music, nor seen more beautiful scenery." Lynn Phillips Matthews took a three-week trip to China, as did Ibby Wilkinson Turnipseed and Lonnie, who traveled with their children to Hong Kong where they had served as missionaries many years ago. Joan Lawrence Rogers and Larry went to Turkey and Greece and took a cruise through the Panama Canal.

Closer to home, Marie Cuthbertson Faulkner and Ed spent several months touring the Southwestern United States. Late in the summer Bobbie Cathcart Hopkins attended an elderhostel in Lexington, Va., giving her the chance to visit briefly class secretary, Mary Price Coulling. In August Alice Crenshaw Moore and her husband, Charlie, took a trip to the Northwest and Canada.

Lee Cousar Tubbs and Jim spent Thanksgiving in New Jersey, with side trips to New York City. Harriotte "Otte" Winchester Hurley and husband Herk spent a few days in Washington, DC in late August, then rode Amtrak back home. In November, Gene Akin Martin and Fred attended "Mule Day" in Cavalry, Ga. with 500 booths of crafts and junk, plus a parade - "mules, mules, mules!"

Doris "Sully" Sullivan Tippins is a student again, studying Afro-American literature at University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill.

Sue Tidwell Dixon's retirement activities include rafting down the Chattooga River with a son and grandchildren and spending time in Cyberspace, enjoying America on Line.

Mary "Maic" Aichel Samford continues to work 12-hour shifts, nursing AIDS patients.

Jo Snow Fernandez has moved back to Lynchburg, after years of living in Northern Virginia.

Annie Charles "Charlsie" Smith Harris writes cheerfully from Wilmington, N.C., despite husband Jim's invalidism, her father's infirmities, and her mother's longtime residence in a nearby nursing home.

Rebecca "Becky" Lever Brown continues to write dramas for local audiences and for television.

Allison Smith, daughter of Betsy Deal Smith and Gil, was married in November in Houston.

In October, Betty Wood Smith sustained a serious head injury from a fall in her home. She is in a nursing home in the Atlanta area, and, to date, has not regained full consciousness.

Mary Price Coulling and Sid went on a "Hamlet to Hardy" cruise, and were in Copenhagen for two days when they had an Agnes Scott encounter. The wife of the American Ambassador to Denmark turned out to be Suzanne Goodman Elson '59. Giddy Dyer '38 was also on the tour. Mary found this surprising and exciting since it was mainly a Washington & Lee tour, and out of 75 people, three were ASC grads.

The Smiths are planning to build a home in the Four Corners area of New Mexico, where Al has relatives and where the dry climate is good for Libby's asthma. Libby is ecstatic over having finally become a grandmother in the spring of 1993, when Alexandra Smith was born. Just 14 months later Alexandra became "big sister" to triplets Melissa, Shannon and Duncan.

Winnie Horton Martin and Will are also very excited about having become grandparents for the first time in October '94 with the arrival of Patrick Saylor O'Neal Martin. Son Patrick and Lisa and young Saylor live nearby in Panama City Beach. Winnie has acquired a Baldwin grand piano for her music studio, where she continues to teach 17 students.

Also announcing a new grandchild are Nancy Cassin Smith and Ralph, who are enjoying granddaughter Madison Diane Smith, born in March 1994.

Amy Jones McGreevy and Ken moved to LaGrange, Ga., in fall 1994. They have renovated an older house, where they hope to spend retirement years not far from Atlanta and their two children and six grandchildren.

Charlotte Key Marrow completed her doctorate degree in organ performance at the University of Texas in Austin. She studied musicology briefly before deciding that she definitely prefers playing music to analyzing it. She is organist for an Episcopal church near Austin. In December '94 Charlotte became a grandmother upon the birth of Danya Caitlin Ayres.

Amy Goodwin Mapp and Jim are still ranching in Texas, flying their private plane, and playing golf. They use some of the pasture behind their house for a driving range!

Virginia Rogers Shaw and Harry continue to enjoy retirement and find it "an interesting time to look back and count blessings."

Martha Ann Stagar and her husband, Yalcon Pekar, celebrated their second wedding anniversary in November with an Elderhostel study tour. They had 12 days in the Ecuadorian Andes, followed by an 8-day cruise in the Galapagos Islands. Martha Ann continues her volunteer work with children at Atlanta's natural history museum, and in addition has been taking courses at Emory's Senior University. She is delighted that daughter, Lyn, moved back to Atlanta in early 1994. Grandson Tim is an aerospace engineering student at Georgia Tech.

Jimmie Ann McGee Collings and Tom had a medical mission trip to Venezuela in September 1994. They had one harrowing experience there, when they slid down a mountainside in a bus, but it stopped before they went over the edge. Jimmie Ann and Tom work with migrants who live in Greeneville, Tenn., during crop-gathering times, teaching them English. Jimmie Ann, who is a Master Flower Show Judge, and daughter Sharon attended a National Garden Club Convention in Connecticut last May, where Sharon, a potter-sculptor, exhibited some of her work.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Mary Hayes Barber Holmes, residing in Pittsboro, N.C., is serving her eighth year on the Chatham County Board of Commissioners, but is not seeking re-election. She is also on the North Carolina Board of Transportation for a four-year term, to which she was appointed by Gov. James B. Hunt Jr.

Anna DeVault Haley and John have sold their home in Greenville, S.C., and have moved to Clover, S.C., where John is the interim minister of Clover Presbyterian Church. They will be there until late Spring, 1995, and then will probably settle permanently in Davidson, N.C.

Monica Jean Longino Hiler is living with her husband, Bob, on a blueberry farm in Blairsville, Ga. She is active in Church Women United and the Mountain Community Choir, and is the church organist and choir director. She and Bob have five children and five grandchildren.

The highlight of 1994 for Clairelis Eaton Baxter was having lunch in Atlanta with Catherine Sims after her Phi Beta Kappa lecture at the University of Georgia which Clairelis attended with Mary Oates Burton '57. Clairelis also visited Mattie Hart in St. Augustine where Mattie continues as professor of religion at Flagler College.

June Carpenter Sloan sends more news from Blowing Rock, N.C. In September, Ann Boyer Wilkerson visited with June and husband, Rudy. After a buying trip to Tennessee for country hams, they caught up on class news and are looking forward to the reunion in '97.

In May, a mini-reunion was held at Stone Mountain Inn in Atlanta. Among those present were Joyce Hutcheson Higgins, Anne Winningham Sims, Jeanne Cone, Frances Vandiver Puckett, Nancy Phillips, Elaine Evans, Lillian Ritchie Sharian, Ruth Headr Randolph and Jackie King Bozeman '53.

Ann Herman Dunwody's cottage at Sea Island, Ga., also provided a mini-retreat in the fall for: Phyllis Galphin Buchanan, Ann Parker Lee, Barbara Brown Page, Catherine Crowe

Dickman, Shirley Heath Roberts, Adelaide Ryall Beall and Florence Worthy Griner. Shopping, eating and talking filled the agenda for a week of fun.

In September 1994, Lillian Ritchie Sharian and Ruth Heard Randolph with spouses Bedros and Peyton, did another of their rail trips in Britain. Undeterred by a British rail strike, the "fearless foursome" headquartered a week in Carlisle and another in York.

After retiring from 26 years of teaching in the Georgia public schools and rearing four children with husband, Keyes, Margaret Nelson Bowman is enjoying traveling, extensive reading, volunteer work with the handicapped and spending time with children and grandchildren.

Carol Solomon Rees has also retired from her publishing, writing and lecturing business to spend more time with husband, Eddie, children and grandson.

Ann Parker Lee wrote to say, "It's a small world." Her daughter Kathryn, while a freshman at Guilford College, roomed with the daughter of Mary Hayes Barber Holmes '51. At the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Medical School her daughter roomed with the niece of Cornelia Dickerson McAlister. Last summer Kathryn worked with Barbara Grace Palmour's daughter at a clinic in North Carolina.

Betty Moyer Keeter reported from Rutherfordton, N.C., that although she does not play bridge much now, she is active in hospital and library work.

LaWahna Ridgon Smisson wrote to share some "happy memories." She and husband, Hugh, took their two oldest grandchildren, Rick, 13, and LaWahna Dawn, 11, to Wales and England for two weeks in June with the Friendship Force. Later, all seventeen of the family spent two weeks at their cottage on Sea Island. In August, she and Hugh sailed the Virgin Islands for ten days with son Trip and his family. All of the children live within one mile of Lawahna and Hugh and the parents' table was full at Christmas.

From Ohio, Helen Jean Roberts Seaton says that her daughter, Sandy, and her husband were both ordained Presbyterian ministers on Dec. 18, 1994 and are serving churches in Virginia. Helen's husband, Bob, retired in December while Helen Jean continues as Head of the Psychology Department at Ursuline College.

Ulla Beckman '54 visited Barbara West Erwin for two weeks in May. They had a good time catching up on news and Ulla enjoyed seeing changes in Birmingham since her last visit eight years ago.

Rene Dudley Lynch and Art have been to Russia again for the fourth time. They have also visited Costa Rica, France, the Netherlands, Belgium and Normandy just prior to the D-Day celebrations. Their first granddaughter arrived in February.

Anne Thompson Sheppard, who had knee-replacement surgery recently, now has a total of eight grandchildren and is currently serving as a trustee on the College of Charleston Board after retiring from the South Carolina Board of Education. Busy gal!

Ann "Dalton" Jones Sims wrote about the lovely reception given for Bertie Bond, who retired this fall as secretary to the board of trustees and to the president of the College. The entire affair was lots of fun and many class members were able to attend, including Mary Beth Robinson Stuart, Anne Thompson Sheppard, Donna Dugger Smith, Belle Miller McMaster, Suanne Bowers SauerBrun and Anne. Many thanks to the committee who organized the class of '53 portion of the program. Pris Taylor Sheppard was chair.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Mary Holland Archibald and her husband, Bob, are buying their first home after 41 years in Methodist parsonages.

Rita May Scott Cook's first grandchild was born on January 7, 1994. Alyssa Nicole Burton is the daughter of Rita's Linda and her husband, Van.

The class's sincere sympathy goes to Lou Hill Reaves in the loss of her mother, Caroline McKinney Clarke '27. It is as though Agnes Scott has lost a piece of campus with that welcoming home on the other side of Candler Street no longer being accessible as it was to Mrs. Clarke's fellow students in the class of 1927 and to the class of 1954. The home was built at the same time as Agnes Scott College was and she was born in the room next to that in which she died.

Never one to lag too much behind the times, the class of '54 is moving firmly into the computer age. The library automated systems have caught up, among others, with Carol Macauley Jones who has also just acquired a home computer; Julia Grier Storey is seeking advice on getting one. Kathleen Stout Mainland, who was using a manual typewriter when she left Britain in 1982, has progressed through electric typewriter and word processor to computer with Windows software. Kathleen was recently promoted to medical administrative assistant at Grady Hospital. That's quite a change of pace as well as her third office relocation within the past 12 months and another looming ahead as the Grady renovations progress.

Queen Elizabeth II's expression "annus horribilis" is quoted by Selma Paul Strong in reference to her past year. In December 1993, son-in-law Allens' lung cancer became fatal; early in 1994, Selma was found to have a melanoma which fortunately has responded to treatment; her 12-year-old granddaughter, Jessica, died of uremic hemolytic syndrome in May; husband Bob spent time in the hospital in July with congestive heart failure; they headed to a cabin in Arizona to hasten his recuperation and Selma fell and sprained her ankle. In all of this, Selma was able to find the blessings of family closeness, helpful strangers and a clearer view of priorities. The class extends to Bob and Selma sympathy and wishes that 1995 will be good for them.

Nor were misfortunes confined to the Strongs. On the last day of a walking trip in the English Lake District, Carol Macauley Jones fell and had to be retrieved by a mountain rescue team of eight men and a dog. She broke her ankle and had to go to a therapist on her return home after the cast came off to relearn how to walk. Undeterred, she is planning another walking tour in England in 1996. She also plans a history trip to New England in late spring this year.

Without mishap Mary Newell Rainey Bridges and Helen McGowan French and their respective husbands spent some time in Switzerland this past summer as well as embarking on a leisurely voyage from there into France on a barge.

New grandsons have been received with delight by Sue Purdom Arnall and Caroline Lester Haynes.

Jo Hinchey Williams and Roy are now living in Bradenton, Fla., which to them is "almost paradise." She writes, "Ah yes, this year we indulged and delighted in another piece of paradise, Europe, during six marvelous weeks in August and September. It was a kaleidoscope of beauty and wonder beginning with two great days in Amsterdam, followed by a week's boat cruise up the Rhine to Basel, extending to renting a car and driving through southern Germany and small parts of Austria, Italy and France and from that experience to letting someone else do the driving with a fantastic two week Tauck Tour of Switzerland and concluding by car driving again for a week in 'Merry Olde' England."

Mickey Scott Willoch and Ray enjoyed a trip to southern England in August, driving through small towns and villages in Sussex and Kent, seeing many castles and manor houses.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Constance Curry just completed a book on a family she worked with in Mississippi during the Civil Rights movement in the 1960s. It is scheduled to be published in September by Algonquin.

Catherine Callaway is the president of the Atlanta Chapter of the Association of Government Accountants.

Your secretary and Eileene Johnson MacFalls '60 met in the lobby of the Prince of Wales Hotel in Waterton Park, Canada. Eileene is associate for promotion at Horizons magazine of Presbyterian Church U.S.A.

Jane Frist says it is a dream come true to retire to her family retreat in Montreat where she sold nine houses the first year through Frist Realty. Alvia Cook visited. Emmy Hay Alexander and 1955-ers Mae Huie Fortson, M.E. Knight Swezey, Ann Hanson Merklein and Patty Hamilton Lee have homes there and participate in ASC get-togethers.

Guerry Graham Myers and Charlie had a fabulous cruise aboard the Statendam hitting the highlights from Copenhagen to Rome.

After her house burned in the October 1991 Oakland fire, it took a year for Eva Newman Howarth to relocate to another house. Despite such traumatic events as this and the earlier death of her husband, Eva has a wonderful outlook on life. She retired as a San Francisco social worker and is pursuing her hobbies of pottery, commissioned portrait painting, backpacking, skiing and traveling to exotic places such as Thailand, China, India and Morocco.

Your secretary repeated her 1968 visit with Eva to get the news and while there, toured the DeYoung Museum viewing the terra cotta warriors of Xian. Eva reports that Alberta Jackson Espie has remarried and transferred with her government department to Pakistan. Vannie Traylor Keightley studied in Beijing for a period; her husband is a China specialist. Your secretary also enjoyed a trip alone in December to Vienna to visit all the museums she missed in 1973 and took a side trip to Budapest.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Virginia Love Dunaway enjoys her visits to Tampa to see her first grandchild. She reports that she's torn between staying in Memphis doing church and volunteer work and continuing her efforts monitoring food banks.

Tena Middleton Nelson received a Ph.D.

Carolyn Moon Horn's parents both died in 1994.

Jane Johnson Waites recently traveled to Russia and expressed her excitement over seeing people wait in line to receive Bibles.

Eleanor All got a job teaching, but was frustrated by the public schools' indication that they didn't want older teachers.

Memye Curtis Tucker teaches poetry at Agnes Scott in the undergraduate and M.A.T. programs. She was selected through competition in August to serve as the scholar in poetry at the Bread Loaf Writer's Conference.

Elizabeth Ansley Allan is teaching full time again in Fulton County's gifted program in Atlanta. She had a wonderful trip to Florence, Italy, this past summer, followed by the birth of her fourth grandchild, Oct. 19.

Jackie Rountree Andrews, who has been working long hours in her business in Augusta, Ga., recently moved into a condo which she bought and renovated. A highlight of her year was a trip to New York for shows and opera. In May she attended the wedding of Laura Newsome, daughter of Sis Burns Newsome, where she had a reunion with classmates Martha Riggins Brown, Carolyn Herman Sharp, Mollie Merrick, Nancy Brock Blake, and V.A. Redhead Bethune.

Pat Guynup Corbus, who is working on an M.F.A. degree in writing at Warren Wilson College, Swannanoa, N.C., has had two poems accepted for publication in the Paris Review.

Recent happenings for Pat and her husband Burt include a stay in colonial cities in Mexico and their attendance of Burt's 50th reunion at St. John's Military Academy in Delafield, Wis. Their daughter Lili Corbus Bezner, is a professor of art history at University of North Carolina in Charlotte.

Last year was an eventful one for Carolyn Langston Eaton with the births of two grandsons: John Frederick Weekley Jr. in Charlotte to Genie and John; and James Harrington Eaton to Goetz and Elizabeth in Weston, Mass.

Other grandchildren are Marie Weekley, 3, Elissa Eaton, 8, and Paul Eaton, 5. In July, Carolyn and her husband, Goetz, opened their fifth bookstore in Kannapolis, N.C. Carolyn is working as a clinical counselor at the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission in Anderson, S.C., while Goetz, who has retired from the corporate world, runs their bookstores. This past summer they spent time with friends in London and the Cotswolds and also cruised the British Isles. Nancy Grayson '58, who lives in Montreal, visited Carolyn recently.

Martha Jane Morgan Petersen served as a worship leader this past fall for three months at Ghost Ranch, a Presbyterian conference center in Abiquin, N.M., in the heart of Georgia O'Keefe country.

Joyce Skelton Wimberly had a wonderful trip in May to Prague and Budapest via London and Vienna. She met Dot McLanahan Watson in Houston, Texas, for the wedding of Dot Huddlestone Haddock's son Bill. Joyce is thrilled over her daughter Karen and her family's move from Houston to Knoxville, Tenn. The last Wimberly child has left the nest after graduating from Vanderbilt University and is working for a medical sales company.

Eleanor Wright Linn is very happy about the birth of a second grandson, Christian Hayes Linn, son of her older son, John (Jay) and Linda Linn.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Anne Terry Sherren spent the summer of 1994 as a research participant at Argonne National Library in the analytical chemistry laboratory.

Even though Virginia McClurkin Jones is retiring, she is still active in Rotary and is the chair of the human development committee this year. Virginia is also serving on the Board of the Anderson County Center for Community Justice and doing fundraising for the Victim-Offender Reconciliation.

Joie Sawyer Delafield had a busy year with all three children in graduate school, two graduations and a wedding. Caroline received her master's from Teachers College of Columbia, married in May, and now lives in Cincinnati. Susan is a nurse in Lexington, Ky., after receiving a B.S. from New York University Nursing School. John completed his first year at Harvard Business School. The rest of the year Joie and Dennis spent fly fishing in Canada and playing golf.

Millie Lane Berg writes from Philadelphia that she has been coordinator of early childhood education at Community College of Philadelphia for the past 20 years. She earned a master's from Bankstreet College of Education a few years ago. Periodically she sees Nancy Kimmel Duncan and Lynn Denton '63. Millie's daughter, Margot, married this summer.

Anna Avil Stribling and Charlie have four grown children and three grandchildren. Their daughter Suzanna was voted one of the top 10 young Atlantans. Anna stays busy with volunteer work, golf and tennis. She frequently sees Blythe Posey Ashmore, Joan Pruitt McIntyre '55 and Jackie Josey Hahne '54.

Blythe Posey Ashmore remarried in May 1994. Her husband Jack Minter owns a furniture manufacturing plant in Flowery Branch, Ga. They live there and in Atlanta. Oldest daughter Gentry had a daughter in August. Younger daughter Blain, a graduate of Mary Baldwin, works in Atlanta as director of public relations for the Peasant Restaurant group.

Margaret Woolfolk Webb is well again and sends her thanks to each of you who wrote to lift her spirits.

Frankie Flowers Van Cleave, who always said she graduated "M.R.S. cum baby," reminds the class that she was the first in the group with a baby (remember Kimsie). Frankie completed her family with another daughter and two sons. She has six grandchildren and two more on the way. She has two acres on the Chattahoochee and life is grand.

Mary Clapp Carden has been in California since 1958. Her son and his wife live close by. Mary's daughter is in the U.S. Army, stationed in South Carolina and will marry in April. Mary will retire from teaching in 1996 and says she may try real estate. She has had a few poems published and when she "grows up," she says she may try to write some more.

Maryanne McCurdy has been teaching Latin and English for 34 years in 10 different high schools and has taught German for the last four years. She lives with her parents in San Antonio. Her last visit to Georgia was when her third sister, Jean McCurdy Meade, graduated from ASC in 1964.

Carol Riley McDonald received a nursing degree in 1980 and has been working as a psychiatric nurse in Atlanta for the past 12 years. The delights of her life are her three granddaughters, Katie, 3 1/2, Alicia, 2, and Taylor, 3 months—all prime ASC candidates.

Harriet Talmadge Mill reports no news but says she is slipping into retirement with less free time than ever. She and Bob shuttle back and forth to Maine and will probably wind up there.

Jeannette Huff Arrington writes that Jourdan Jones MacFie, Ivy Furr Rainey and Martha Oeland Hart and their husbands spent a delightful fall weekend with her at her mountain home near Caesar's

Head, S.C.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Karen Haralson Galvez has moved south to Concepcion, Chile, where her oldest daughter lives and where the family fishing company is located. Karen traveled to Japan to visit pottery villages and she has participated in several pottery shows in Chile, including a solo exhibition. Karen also founded Branches of Compassionate Friends, a support group for bereaved parents, in Santiago and Concepcion. She attended the group's first international gathering in Birmingham, England, for its 25th anniversary.

Miriam "Mimi" St. Clair reports many challenges of running a software utilities business in Eugene, Ore., purchasing 21 acres of land with a spectacular view of the Cascades but with slash piles marked for disposal before 3,000 seedlings can be planted, and managing an ever-growing group of foster Golden Retrievers. Mimi and Chuck hope to do some bicycling in British Columbia this year. She said her professional biography could conclude: "When not seated in front of a CRT, editing documentation or preparing financial summaries, Miriam enjoys burning logging slash piles."

Anne Miller Boyd and David are proud and doting grandparents of David Emory Boyd III, born May 25, 1994. Anne says the baby is "precious, chubby and fun to play with." Anne and David have been doing a lot of traveling in connection with David's position on the Executive Committee of the U.S. Golf Association—trips throughout the U.S. and to France.

The class can be very proud of Margaret "Maggie" Harms and her accomplishments. Maggie, named an Outstanding Atlantan, is Sprint's corporate adviser to the Atlanta Project, a community outreach program founded by former President Jimmy Carter. Maggie acts as an adviser and consultant to the West Fulton Cluster, an 8,000 resident community in the project. She persevered for two years to get the job and had to convince Sprint to participate, especially challenging because Sprint's headquarters are in Kansas City.

Valerie Goetz, Cornelia Bryant and Anne Boyd spent a few delightful days on Nantucket in October. Other friends from Atlanta and Charleston joined in for fun, giggles, the cranberry harvest and a local house-moving event.

Nell Tabor Hartley writes that she is happy and newsless.

Mary Ann Gregory Dean is now director of the Orlando Shakespeare Festival.

Please continue to send class news items to Cornelia Bryant. An increase in correspondence will justify installing the largest mailbox on the street.

Excel Associates.

Wells College is a four-year, liberal arts women's college established in 1868. Lisa Marsh Ryerson, president of Wells, said, "Dr. Hall is a valuable addition to our administrative team. Her belief in the liberal arts, her commitment to women's education and her extensive experience in long-range planning for higher education makes her an ideal vice president. I am especially impressed by her innovative spirit—I believe she will make great contributions to Wells and our liberal arts program."

Pollitt Ordination

CLASS OF 1970 MEMBER BECOMES EPISCOPAL PRIEST

Mary LaRoche Douglas "Mollie" Pollitt '70 was ordained to priesthood in the Episcopal Church by the Rt. Rev. Frank K. Allan, bishop of Atlanta, in a ceremony Dec. 10, 1994, at the Cathedral of St. Philip. Pollitt will continue her work as curate at Grace Episcopal Church in Gainesville, Ga.

Ordination to the priesthood culminates a long process in the Episcopal Church. Following discernment of career goals and examination of aptitude in the field, a seminarian completes three years of theological study and several months of work as a deacon before being ordained to the priesthood.

After earning her bachelor's degree from Agnes Scott College, Pollitt received her divinity degree from the Candler School of Theology at Emory University. She lives in Clarkesville, Ga., with her husband, Gil Pollitt, and their children: Mary, Libba and Davis.

Jennie is a senior in high school, looking at several art schools for next year. Ron is commuting to Charlotte, N.C., from Virginia to work with Epley Associates. Ann works and teaches at the Quilt Shop in the old town area of Alexandria. Condolences go to Ann from the class in the loss of her mother in 1993 and her father in 1994.

Sara Groover Frazier hated to miss the reunion, but had the opportunity to spend the week with Larry LeShan, learning meditation and healing. Sara still teaches aerobic dance and with Dick she conducts a support group for pastors' wives, Sunday School lessons, and marriage enrichment workshops. Matt and Kristin are college juniors. He's at North Carolina State in social work and she's at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill in psychology. Ben is working full time and taking community college classes with aspirations of attending the University of Miami music program.

Suffering from "paper writing" as well as back pain, Helen Stavros also missed the reunion. Helen sees the end of her Ph.D. work in sight with only a few more courses, her comprehensive exams and her dissertation left.

Peg Barnes Carter and family toured the state of Washington during the summer. Their many adventures were highlighted by Rock's driving the off roads. The big change in their family has been that Matt is a first-year student at Wittenburg University. Jan continues to study flute and Paul's big passion is basketball.

Seeing a real cranberry bog and setting foot in Maine were the two goals of your secretary, Mary Anne Murphy Hornbuckle, when she and John went to New England in October. They chose October for their vacation because of the foliage as well as diversion from their empty nest now that Jay has begun study at the University of Alabama. David and Doris are in Gainesville, Fla., where both have jobs and are anticipating graduate school in the future.

She and Michael spent Thanksgiving week in Hawaii, where Charlotte presented three papers at a conference.

Virginia "Ginny" Simmons Ellis reached her 10-year mark as pastor at Tampa's Bayshore Presbyterian Church in March. Ginny also serves as a member of the Camp and Conference Board and the Board of the Career and Personal Counseling Center at Eckerd College, where husband Harry teaches physics. Keeping up with Seth (first grade), Rachel (seventh grade) and Luke (10th grade) keeps Ginny busy and happy.

Ann Tomlin Adams and Trip are empty nesters this year. Son Josh is a junior at North Carolina State, and daughter Jenny is a first-year at Davidson College.

Teaching voice keeps Virginia "Ginger" Rollins Hopkins active in the world of music, and her children keep her active in dance and sports. Sons Jim and Ted play basketball, baseball, soccer, football and the piano. Daughter Julie plays basketball, soccer, softball and enjoys dance, piano and guitar. Young Bonnie thinks the gym is her winter home, and the baseball field is her summer home!

Ginger, Julie and Bonnie traveled together to Atlanta last April to honor Juliana Winters as she received her award for service to the college. Among the friends celebrating the occasion were Sallie Barron LaBadie, Gretchen Smith Mui, Dianne Gerstle Niedner and Lee Walker Willard '73. Dianne and Mal and son Charles later enjoyed a vacation at Pine Knoll Shores, N.C., along with Juliana as well as family members. Dianne continues her work in the administrative area of "The Nation's Attic," otherwise known as the Smithsonian. She and Mal report that in honor of their 17th wedding anniversary, comets began to strike Jupiter, and astronomer Mal became an instant celebrity, with numerous television appearances.

"WOMEN AND THE LIBERAL ARTS"

Louise Scott Roeska-Hardy '72, a lecturer at the University of Heidelberg in Frankfurt and guest lecturer at Agnes Scott, March 28-31, delivered a lecture, entitled, "Women and the Liberal Arts," dealing with the relevance of predominantly male philosophers' ancient texts to women's education. In addition to delivering the lecture, Roeska-Hardy taught several German and philosophy classes during her three-day stay sponsored by the Kirk Fund.

She is the author of many books and articles; her most recent book, Meaning in Natural Language, published in 1988, focuses on language philosophy, her main area of interest. Her most recent articles include "Thinking, Acting and Explaining by Reasoning: A Contribution to Discussion" and "Metaphor, Meaning and Understanding" which appeared in German Magazine for Philosophy and Metaphor and Innovation, The Role of Metaphor in the Course of Language and Science, respectively.

After completing her undergraduate study in philosophy at ASC, Roeska-Hardy graduated magna cum laude from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1975 with an M.A. in philosophy. She later received her doctorate in philosophy, sociology and linguistics at J.W. Goethe-Universitaet in Frankfurt, Germany.

Roeska-Hardy has taught graduate philosophy at the University of Frankfurt, the University of Heidelberg, the University of Berne, Switzerland, and the Technical University at Darmstadt.

Mimi Holmes and Ed Stern have settled into their first house in Minneapolis, Minn. They met several years ago at a dance camp and started a long distance relationship, and two years ago, Mimi closed the geographical gap by moving to Minneapolis. Mimi writes that the most significant thing she has done since graduation is the four years she spent in northwest Alabama as an art missionary during the 1980s. No doubt the people of that region benefited greatly from her talents.

Kitti Smith Murray is enjoying life in Stone Mountain with her husband Bill and their four boys, ages 5 to 13. Their activities provide the family with constant entertainment, as each one is an accomplished athlete. For five years, Kitti led a Bible study group in Techwood which provided her with some of the most fulfilling relationships of her life. Today, she does part time work as an artist and a travel agent.

Katharine Cochrane was married on July 23, 1994 to Clifford Anthony Hart Jr. The class was represented at the wedding by Alice Newton Harris. Kay continues to be a diplomat for the Foreign Service Office of the U.S. Department of State. Recently, she completed an assignment in Paris. Ford, her new groom, is also a foreign service officer and both will be in Washington for the next two years.

Judy Miller Bohan has begun building a vacation house at Lake Lure. It should be completed in time for everyone to visit this summer. She continues to live with her family in Rutherfordton, N.C.

Beth Nease Hawkins has added a member to her Gainesville, Ga., household: Kathrin Schoenwald, a 16-year-old exchange student from Germany. Beth and her husband continue with their dentistry work, and certainly Kathrin will leave America with a bright, beautiful smile.

Sarah Arthur Spears and her husband, Terry, have moved from Columbus to Martinez, Ga. She continues to work for the Merck pharmaceutical company, where her duties have switched from military accounts to general medicine, which she is greatly enjoying.

Sarah spoke recently with Kathy Finch Piette who lives in Savannah with her husband and two children. In her spare time, she reads, sews needlework and participates in a Bible study group.

Theresa Crane talked to Sally Workman and learned she has rejoined the Peace Corps. Sally works in the soil conservation division and is planting trees in Africa as part of a reforestation project.

Martha Jane Hammett visited Betsy Fletcher in Boulder, Colo. Martha Jane fell in love with the region and wants to know if Betsy would mind if the Hammett family came to visit permanently.

This edition's "Profile of Outstanding Classmate" goes to Theresa Crane who sent a great photograph of herself with her reticulated giraffe. Yes, a real live giraffe! And it is named after her. Theresa is the sales manager for the Anheiser Busch Theme Parks where she has worked for the past 10 years. She loves working for a company which is committed to the environment. Theresa the giraffe is being raised to breed and enlarge her endangered species. Her offspring will only go to world-class zoos. Theresa the human lives in St. Petersburg with her husband Jimmy Brykinke, their son and their dog. In her spare time, when she is not petting the giraffe, she volunteers for an AIDS agency which specializes in women's and children's cases. She chairs their annual antique auction fund raiser. Last year, her work raised over $25,000 for the organization.

SECRETARY

Virginia Lee McMurray
1715 Alberta Dr.
Little Rock, AR 72207

Your secretary was very excited to hear from a number of classmates recently, especially a few who didn't make the reunion. RTC grad Chrissy Jensen wrote that she moved back to the Atlanta area (Newnan) in August after a three-year stay in New Haven, Conn. Chrissy moved to New England as Regional Manager with Whitehall-Robbins, a pharmaceutical company. She is now Managed Care Account Executive for the south and travels from Texas to Miami. Her son, Matt, recently graduated from the University of Colorado.

Laurel Kramer also missed the reunion, but just received her PhD. in counseling psychology. She works in Jefferson City, Mo., with a community mental health agency as clinical director of six clinics and recently bought her first house.

Mary Louise Tucker McDade spent four years teaching preschool and working for the American Lung Association, where she gave seminars on the dangers of tobacco use. Mary Louise now works part time in her husband's office and stays busy with their four daughters and volunteer work for the DeKalb Rape Crisis Center. She recently spoke to the ASC first-year class on date rape.

Debby Daniel-Bryant is in her 13th year as a school psychologist through the Crossroads Program in Griffin, Ga., where she has specialized in play therapy, groups and testing of autistic children. Debby's husband, Bill Bryant, is a senior engineer in the economic development department of Georgia Power Co., where in the past few years he has become an expert on wetlands. Debby and Bill stay very busy keeping up with school, church and extracurricular activities involving their daughters, Sarah, 11, Rachel, 7, and Leah, 3.

The class continues to be very productive in a variety of ways. Check out the "Births" section for news on new additions to the families of Sarah Windham Hunt, Elizabeth Wells Lang, Ginny Lee McMurray, and Carolyn Pervis Whatley. Carolyn wrote that her daughter was born just two hours before Sarah's daughter. She said there's nothing like knowing that a close friend is going through labor and delivery at the same time you are! Carolyn and her husband just bought their first house in Acworth, Ga., and moved at the end of October.

Leslie Doyle Brenegar and husband Ed spent two weeks in northern Italy last spring—their first trip without children in over six years. Living in Elkins, W. Va., Leslie took advantage of local culture by taking old-time fiddle lessons last summer. She also enjoyed hosting Angela Fleming Rogers and her family for a visit. Leslie stays very busy with children Troop, 9, Stewart, 5, and Shelby, 3. She is home-schooling Troop and Stewart.

Melanie Best also traveled abroad, vacationing in France in October. She spent the Thanksgiving holiday in Pueblo, Colo., with Linda McInnis, husband Dean Miller, and Linda's daughter Jessica. Melanie and Linda have both been professional cooks, and their Thanksgiving dinner was truly a feast.

Virginia Rockwell traveled over the holidays as well, spending Thanksgiving with her family in Florida and Christmas with friends in Scotland. Virginia is back at the Atlanta Botanical Gardens working toward certification as a master gardener.

Having just increased her family from two children to three, Ginny Lee McMurray wants to know how all of her classmates who have three or more children (she ran into a few at the reunion) manage to stay sane. Ginny is doing consulting work for Ballet Arkansas in between orchestrating her family's school, church and extracurricular activities. She says she stays hopelessly behind on various household tasks and never mailed her Christmas cards. However, she loves hearing from classmates.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Katherine Harris, of Sarasota, Fla., was elected to a Senate seat from District 24 in the November election.

Paxson Collins MacDonald

Charlottesville, VA 22902

Lisa Beswick McLeod, husband Cliff, and their three children are enjoying life in Orlando, Fla. She writes that their new church is loving and encouraging.

Janet Lapp has been with Barnett Bank of Palm Beach County for 11 years. Currently she is the vice president, loan operations manager. She manages, with her staff of 15, the bank's $1.6 billion loan portfolio and supports the various lending functions for their underwriters and relationship managers. Janet is on the board of directors for the local Consumer Credit Counselling Service. In addition, she is a member of the National Association for Female Executives and serves on several sub-committees regarding personnel.

Alison Bannan Whatley and John had a surprise last year when their third daughter was born a month early. She was so eager to join the family, she was born at home, just as three EMS technicians walked into the room. Her sisters slept through the event. Alison and husband John live in Cary, N.C., where he is a pilot for American Airlines.

Alison sees Sandy Burson Hosford, who is now a pediatrician and lives in Durham with her husband, David, and their two daughters, Katherine and Anna. She is also in touch with Liz Mosgrove Land who lives nearby in Raleigh. Liz and Herb have two children, Caroline, 3, and Brad, 6 months.

Allison Taylor Turk and Paul live in Macon, Ga., and are happy to report that they weren't washed away in the flood of 1994, although they were without water for three weeks. Paul's mother came to live with them in the fall of 1993 and passed away in May of 1994. Paul loves his practice and the Turks enjoy Macon. Their children Katherine, Stephen, and Clayton are 11, 9, and 6, respectively.

Susie Ham Dieters and Peggy Somers Shepard wrote your secretary from Florida where they were vacationing with their husbands and children.

In 1994, Sharon Maitland Moon joined the firm LeClair, Ryan, Joynes, Epps and Framme where she practices in the area of employment litigation. She is president-elect of the Virginia State Bar Young Lawyers Conference and is active in the American Bar Association Young Lawyers Division (ABA-YLD) where she is director of the ABA's Affiliate Outreach Project. Sharon has lectured extensively on behalf of the ABA-YLD Disaster Legal Services Program and serves on the Board of Directors for Challenge Discovery Projects.

In connection with the ABA-YLD Disaster Legal Services Program, Sharon helped coordinate the volunteer relief effort following Hurricane Andrew. Volunteer lawyers handled more than 22,000 cases involving insurance, construction, consumer and federal benefits claims. As a result, Sharon traveled to Washington, D.C., to meet with the general counsel for the Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) to negotiate an agreement between FEMA and ABA-YLD for the provision of free legal services in the event of a federally-declared disaster. That agreement now serves as the basis for a nationwide volunteer legal services network.

Pat Arnzen, Kim Clark-Douglas, Kathy Stearns, Sarah Fairburn Pannill and Carol Willey have all been to see Kathy Hollywood Smith's new baby since his birth in late December.

Dixie Lee Washington and her husband have taken early retirement from the U. S. Army and have built a house in her hometown of King George, Va. They have started two businesses (Dixie Realty and KG Computer Services and Training Center) and Dixie assists her father in the building business.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Wanda Susan Dodson Shewbridge has had a fourth child.

Margaret Evans Porter's novel Dangerous Diversions has been nominated for a national award. The previous one, Toast of the Town, made it onto the paperback bestseller lists. In spring of 1994, Margaret and her husband, Chris, moved from Colorado to New Hampshire with their two dogs. They also traveled to the United Kingdom and Portugal for business and pleasure.

Stephanie Komar Hungerford and Steve are living in Gainesville, Ga., where Stephanie is a stay-at-home mom to Erin and their new son, Gerald Alexander.

Valerie Kay Barnett writes from the Orlando area; she is a business unit director for the Florida Department of Citrus. Valerie and Chuck have a son, Matt, 3, who has inherited Valerie's very blonde hair!

On the other end of the country is Karen Whipple Broderick. Karen and her husband, Joe, bought a home in North Hollywood. Karen's most recent project was The War, much of the filming of which was done in the Atlanta area. One of the perks was meeting Kevin Costner, a nice guy according to Karen.

After moving to Florida, Atlanta, California, Hawaii and Texas, Lynn Stonecypher Thompson and Pete have settled in Chicago. Lynn is having the time of her life now, staying at home with her son Peter Lawrence Thompson. They recently visited with Maryanne Gannon Deaton, Eric and Maggie who were back in Chicago for a wedding. Maryanne and Eric now live in Houston.

Mary Ebinger Hurd is now brokering group insurance in the Atlanta area. She represents 20 industry leaders and finds it a very fun business, but then being self-employed has been her bag for quite a while now. The infant in her arms at the last reunion is now 4. She says time is definitely marching on.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Debra Yoshimura Rainwater celebrated the first-year anniversary of the establishment of her own recruiting/consulting firm, Search Inc., based in Atlanta.

Emma Villafane Zell moved back to Atlanta last summer and is working as an analyst/writer in the information center at LOMA, a trade association for the insurance industry. Emma made a quick weekend trip to Birmingham to attend an art librarian's conference last fall. Teace Markwalter Sanders hopes to see Emma on her next trip to Birmingham.

Carol Reaves Wilson has learned a new craft, basket weaving. She is also very active in her church leading Bible study and playing the handbells and guitar. Carol was able to represent ASC at the inaugurations of both Augusta College and Paine College presidents. And in the midst of all her varied activities, Carol says they added to their home a new master bedroom, bathroom and sun porch, all completed last April. Carol's husband, Walter, a senior process control engineer at Federal Paper, and their three children Elizabeth, 7, Rebecca, 4, and Ben, 2, are all happy and doing well.

Sonia Gordon Dettweiler wrote to say that she, husband Steve and baby Joel moved to Nigeria just three days after Christmas. Sonia thanks those whose prayers and gifts helped send them on their way. She successfully completed the master's degree in linguistics.

Sallie Manning Ogden dropped a note to update the class on her life. She and her husband, John, took a work-related trip to France where they went to the Cannes Film Festival. John was doing work related to a press conference for the movie The Pagemaster. Sally said, "It was so glamorous!" but commented that people on the Riviera do not wear Talbot's resort wear, so she definitely stood out as an American tourist. Other places she and John stopped were Paris and Monte Carlo. Sallie has taken on a new interest, gardening, and is currently volunteering one Saturday each month in the Alumnae Garden. She would love for any interested alumnae from 1982 to join her. Sallie recently talked to Meredith Manning who is enjoying being a lawyer in Columbia, S.C.

The alumnae office received

Allyson Stephens Rhymes Raymer is a Latin teacher at an all girls' school.

Sarah Burleigh Perry has a son, Wallace, who is 3 years old. Her husband, Phil, is an artist and illustrator who recently completed a work which commented on the Georgia State flag. The piece was well received.

Founders Day 1995

PAST PRESIDENTS, DEANS, ALUMNAE AND FRIENDS GATHER TO HONOR MARVIN PERRY

Series 93, No. 4

Tenures, appointments

During its May meeting, the Agnes Scott College Board of Trustees promoted Tina Pippin, assistant professor of Bible and religion, and Martha W. Rees, assistant professor of anthropology, to associate professors and granted tenure. John Philip Gibson, assistant professor of biology, and Josefina Gonzalez, assistant professor of Spanish, are new full-time faculty members. Full-time reappointments were granted to Anne Beidler, assistant professor of art, Karen J. Thompson, assistant professor of biology, and Violet M. Johnson, assistant professor of history, effective through June 30, 1999. Thomas W. Hogan, professor of psychology, was granted sabbatical leave. Anne Beidler and Karen J. Thompson were granted untenured leaves for the 1996 spring semester. Retiring faculty members who have been granted emeritus/a status are Christabel P. Braunrot, associate professor of French, Edward C. Johnson, associate professor of economics, and Jack L. Nelson, professor of English.

Academic review

A report of the Academic Review Committee reaffirming Agnes Scott's commitment to the institutional values of the College: women, teaching and learning, liberal arts, an appreciation of diverse cultures and a community that values justice, courage and integrity was accepted by the Agnes Scott College Board of Trustees at its May meeting.

The committee supports an emphasis on "connected learning," a cooperative effort to enhance learning via the pedagogy, distinctive programs and academic reorganization. Recommendations by the committee include departmental consolidation and a conference structure which facilitates dialogue among faculty of different disciplines. The review was mandated by the Board of Trustees in 1993.

At its meeting, the board also heard the report from the Administrative Review Committee which analyzed the efficiency and effectiveness of the College's staff operations.

Mentoring program

An announcement in the April '95 MAIN EVENTS inviting participation in the alumnae mentoring program for sophomores, "You've Got A Friend," has drawn more than 90 alumnae across the U.S. and three European countries to volunteer to be "pen-pal mentors" to the class of '98.

Olympics update

Prince Albert of Monaco was among members of the International Olympic Committee visiting Agnes Scott College on May 15 to tour Main, Inman and Evan. Meanwhile, the Paralympics, which has expressed interest in using campus facilities, has taped a public service announcement in the Woodruff pool and on Gellerstedt Field that will be televised nationwide later this year.

A Year of Transition

INTERIM PRESIDENT SALLY MAHONEY
REVIEWS HER WORK AT AGNES SCOTT

Since August 1994, Sally Mahoney, senior associate provost emerita of Stanford University, has served as interim president of Agnes Scott College. On June 30, Mahoney will step down when Mary Brown Bullock '66 assumes the duties of the seventh president of Agnes Scott College. Mahoney has been named interim president of Mount Mary College in Wisconsin.

What was your first perception of Agnes Scott?
SALLY MAHONEY: My first perception was of hearing the tower bell ring and going out to the gazebo to find everybody in the College taking the time to greet me. That was an enormous and heartfelt welcome and it was from everyone, not just one set of people. That said to me that building community, which I take to be a very important institutional value, was not going to be an exercise in building but in reinforcement.

And how has your sense of the College grown or changed?
SM: I thought Agnes Scott was good and I will come away with the feeling that it is better than good. We have a lot of truths to tell about our accomplishment and our commitment continuously to improve. Part of that truth is a welcome that is respectful of common aspirations in individuals and in group differences. And part of that truth is a commitment to trust in the community and its honor system.

How would you evaluate your own "interim" experience?
SM: One of the things that made it possible for me to be effective from the beginning was that there was a clear agenda here and everyone and every part of the College knew it. There was an academic review and an administrative review. Those reviews always had as their purpose to find focus, reaffirm and rearticulate the values of the institution and build from that. There wasn't a question of what I was supposed to do here beyond the daily things. Sometimes an interim president is asked to hold a place together and wait for the permanent leader to get started. That wasn't the task here and that is why the Board wanted someone with an array of experiences and skills.

My agenda included giving members of the Agnes Scott community, faculty, students, staff, alumnae and others in the community who are stakeholders with us, a sense of ownership in the future of the College. Inside the College we got better at candor and at seeing the College in comparison with other institutions. We reduced the sense of mystery about things and got better at open and fact-based discussion.

What role did you have in supporting candor in the College community?

SM: I think what I may have done is give people permission. I wanted to hear. I was willing to engage. This enabled people to speak and to ask for clarification, to be free about disagreement and to understand that not all disagreement is disagreeableness.

What do you believe is ASC's greatest asset?

SM: It's the quality of the College's students and faculty as well as the relationships between faculty and students. The relationships are shown in a variety of ways such as student/faculty collaborations that go on in biology, chemistry and psychology and in faculty involvement with student issues. An example is the work that Mortar Board did with diversity this year and the role of faculty, especially the part Instructor Jo Bradley played in that. The work between students and faculty here is enormously important.

How can Agnes Scott build upon the academic and administrative reviews?

A Time for Prayer

Interim President Sally Mahoney is joined by The Rev. Harris T. Travis, guest speaker at Baccalaureate Vespers on May 12. Vespers is a worship service for members of the graduating class and their parents.

The first day of "service to others"

IN MAY CEREMONIES, 117 RECEIVE BACHELOR'S DEGREES, FIRST MEN RECEIVE MASTER'S FROM AGNES SCOTT.

This is your day, this is your event, and this is for you" were the opening words of the address presented by Georgia State Senator Mary Margaret Oliver, at Agnes Scott College's 106th commencement exercise on May 13.

Oliver addressed the 117 women receiving bachelor's degrees and the 18 recipients of master's degrees, including the first three men to receive Agnes Scott's Master of Art in Teaching (MAT) Secondary English.

As a member of the Georgia Assembly in the House of Representatives, Oliver helped pass more than 30 pieces of legislation, including the 1990 Child Protection package. She also authored and pushed for the passage of Senate Bills 1, 2 and 3 which revised child abuse investigation procedure.

Her speech to Agnes Scott's graduating class, entitled "Service to Others," took account of the horrific conditions that have plagued the world in recent times such as the high rate of poverty and the increase in child abuse. However, she went on to add, "women will solve these problems." More than 1,200 guests attended the graduation ceremony on the Presser Quadrangle.

Baptist Church in Marietta, Ga., was the guest speaker at the Baccalaureate Vespers ceremony on May 12.

SM: In bringing closure to the academic review, we fully appreciate that it has been done in such a way that it has further empowered faculty governance.

The academic review was not simply some independent committee that when it closed its tent its agenda would dissolve and never be heard of again. The values and proposals of the review have created plenty of room for building. It's a good foundation document.

Most of the administrative review had to do with quality service—that is, with efficiency and effectiveness—on a student-centered campus. Its emphasis on collaboration and cross-constituency team work will have a long-term effect in the way the College works. However, this review didn't really focus on student life as a functional area. So I think that is where we have our next opportunity for self-analysis and consideration of possibilities for improvement.

The College will move forward with this agenda, which I've discussed with Mary Brown Bullock, along with whatever other ventures our new president wants to propose.

What will you take with you from Agnes Scott?

SM: This year at Agnes Scott reaffirms that I enjoy the task of leadership.

LAURA SPICZKA '96

Profile editor-in-chief
Hometown: Smyrna, Ga.

The Profile, Agnes Scott College's independent student newspaper, is an uncensored medium of communication, in which students candidly voice their opinions on current issues.

As editor-in-chief of the biweekly, Laura Spiczka '96 hopes to increase the newspaper's staff size by encouraging students of all academic majors to write. "Many students are under the impression that only English majors write," said Spiczka. However, she believes this type of limited representation is contrary to the paper's goal of presenting a broad range of viewpoints.

Spiczka hopes to steer the Profile toward involvement in the Georgia College Press Association (GCPA). The GCPA sponsors several contests throughout the year and Spiczka feels confident that the Profile can continue to garner additional GCPA awards as it has done under previous editorial staffs. "Recognition would boost the morale of current staff writers," said Spiczka, "and we definitely have the ability [to win]."

The rigors of academic life at Agnes Scott and the responsibilities of being editor have taught Spiczka time management. "When you only have 24 hours a day and 48 hours worth of work, you learn how to do two things at once. When there's stuff you don't know how to do, you ask; when there's stuff you simply don't have time to do, you delegate. Everything else, you do to the best of your ability," said Spiczka.

SYLVIA MARTINEZ '96

Senior class president
Hometown: San Antonio, Texas

As senior class president, Sylvia Martinez's '96 primary role is to lead her class. She also acts as a liaison between her class and the College administration. Among the projects her class plans to accomplish, graduation outranks the rest. "It's our last year here—we want to go out with a bang," said Martinez.

Paramount to a successful graduation is increasing class spirit. Martinez plans to work toward keeping the class "focused and together"; and hopes to finally secure a Black Cat victory for the class.

Elected class president for four consecutive years, Martinez admits contributing "a lot of hard work and a lot of love [to the class and the College]. Even though it's sometimes frustrating to get everyone together for meetings, the effort pays off in the end." Junior production was a "great emotional high which pulled everyone together" last year.

Taking on a class leadership role has sharpened Martinez's speaking skills. Even though she was outgoing and outspoken before she came to ASC, Martinez said she is able to convey her message to an audience much more effectively now because of her many public speaking opportunities.

Martinez said her involvement with the administration's Presidential Search Committee has been the most rewarding aspect of her leadership experience at Agnes Scott.

Searching for patterns of the mind

PROFESSOR/STUDENT RESEARCH TEAM STUDIES RELATIONSHIPS AMONG REACTION TIME, MEMORY SKILLS AND READING COMPREHENSION.

Tom Hogan, chair of the psychology department, enjoys giving Agnes Scott students the opportunity to "participate in unique research experiments." Last fall Hogan enlisted Sara Wolfe '95 and Karin Ford '96, as a part of the class Psychology 324 (cognition and brain processes) to conduct experiments dealing with the relationship of reaction time, memory skills and reading comprehension.

Wolfe appreciated the opportunity to work one-on-one with a professor and to conduct her own research. "Even though the research was mainly his idea," said Wolfe, "we actually got to give input as to what factors might be causing [the results]. Ford also enjoyed the active role she played in completing experiments. "I had a lot of responsibility," she said.

For the past six years Hogan has tapped two to four students to work on this cognitive research project. He said the students, "get a lot of experience carrying out experiments in terms of dealing with participants in the study. And it obviously helps them to have the research background on their curricula vitae."

In order to determine the relationship between short-term memory, reaction time and reading comprehension, Hogan devised three experiments conducted with the help of 22 students from Agnes Scott's general psychology classes. The first experiment required students to read a passage and mark the word they were reading at the end of two minutes. Next, they answered 30 multiple-choice questions to test their reading comprehension. One month after the first experiment, the subjects completed a short-term memory test.

Hogan, Ford and Wolfe hypothesized that faster readers would exhibit shorter reaction times. They also theorized that those with good reading comprehension skills would have better short-term memory skills.

The results of their experiments supported these hypotheses, but also led to an unexpected conclusion: short-term memory of sentences relates to reading speed as well as to reading comprehension. However, they could not determine whether short-term memory affects reading speed or whether the practice of reading improves the short-term memory.

While many studies have been conducted on reading comprehension, Hogan said there is always more to learn about the process of reading and how to teach reading.

This is especially important to Wolfe, who wants to be a kindergarten teacher after graduating.

"I really understand the cognitive process and how much a child can remember."

She looks forward to using her research experience with Hogan to find creative and effective ways to improve her future students' long-term memory.

Considering a Return to College

Some 24 women from the Atlanta area were on campus June 8 for Return-to-College Visitation Day during which they were given information about applying as non-traditional age students and financing their education. The group of women also heard a presentation on the career planning and counseling services available and was treated to anxiety reduction exercises. RTC Tina Backus '97, left, was among the current students conducting campus tours for the prospective students.

New Trustees elected by board; four leave ASC service

JONES, HENDRIX AND KING JOIN TRUSTEES ON BOARD.

The Agnes Scott College Board of Trustees elected three new members at its May meeting.

■ The Rev. Walter M. Jones, pastor of Alpharetta Presbyterian Church and current council member for the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta, is the son of Fannie B. Harris Jones '37 and the grandson of Lillie Bachman Harris '09. A graduate of Columbia Theological Seminary, the University of Georgia and West Georgia College, Jones has served on several boards, including the DeKalb Rape Crisis Center.

■ James P. Hendrix Jr. has been the headmaster of The Lovett School in Atlanta since 1991. He is a former dean of admission and financial aid, trustee and alumni association president of Davidson College, his alma mater. He has taught history at The Lovett School and Greensboro Day School and Ravenscroft School, serving as headmaster at both institutions. His master's and doctoral degrees are from Louisiana State University.

■ Harriet M. King '64, vice provost for academic affairs and associate professor of law at Emory University in Atlanta, is returning to the board after rotating off in 1993. She has held teaching positions at Vanderbilt and Harvard universities, from which she holds J.D. and L.L.M. degrees, respectively. She is a member of the Chief Justice's Commission on Gender Bias in the Judiciary and is a volunteer arbitrator for the Better Business Bureau of Atlanta.

Each member will serve a three-year term beginning July 1.

Rotating off the board are JoAnn Sawyer Delafield '58; Katherine A. Geffcken '49, professor of Greek and Latin at Wellesley College; Douglas W. Oldenburg, president, Columbia Theological Seminary; and James R. Lientz Jr., president, NationsBank of Georgia.

Re-elected for second four-year terms are Clair M. Muller '67, James D. Philips Jr., Sara E. Vagliano '64 and Dan C. West. Joseph R. Gladden Jr., chair, Anne R. Jones, vice chair; and Lea Ann Hudson, secretary, were re-elected for one-year terms.

Travel blitz '95 plans to repeat first-year success

STAFF, ALUMNAE SEEK FUTURE STUDENTS, DONORS.

As the leaves begin to turn colors this fall, Agnes Scott recruiters, fund-raisers and alumnae staffers will be on the road again. Travel Blitz '95 begins in September and expands into eight additional states. Encouraged by the success of the award-winning Travel Blitz '94, the alumnae, admission, development and public relations functions of the College are again joining hands and merging missions to reach prospective students, donors and friends of the College.

Travel Blitz '94, touching 15 markets in Georgia, Florida, Tennessee and South Carolina, produced 10 new members to the Frances Winship Walters Society (a planned giving club), garnered eight regional and national media placements, created alumnae goodwill and increased the number of prospective student contacts (by 175 percent in Pensacola, Fla., alone). The coordinated travel program was also recognized by the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education with a regional Award of Excellence.

Georgia markets for the fall include Macon, Thomasville, Valdosta and Dalton.

In Florida, the target markets are Tallahassee, the Tampa/St. Petersburg area, Jacksonville and Miami.

Tri Cities (Johnson City, Kingsport and Bristol) and Chattanooga are on the list again for Tennessee, and visits to Greenville and Spartanburg, S.C. are set.

New markets for the blitz include Charlotte, N.C., Montgomery and Birmingham, Ala., and Houston and Dallas, Texas. Markets that will receive special attention during the Travel Blitz season include Atlanta, the Washington, D.C., Baltimore, Md., Richmond, Va. area, New York state and the California cities of San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego.

—Sara Pilger

■ Alumnae and friends to be visited in the blitz cities will be notified by mail this summer of activities and events planned for those cities. The College is seeking names of prospective students and potential individual and corporate donors in these cities. Please contact the College at 1-800-868-8602.

SEARCH FOR "PERSONAL TOUCH" LEADS ST. JOSEPH'S STAFFER TO AGNES SCOTT

Next month Starlyn Minke, senior women's administrator/compliance coordinator of the athletic program at St. Joseph's College, will become Agnes Scott's first chair of athletics and physical education.

"I was looking for a small liberal arts college with an excellent academic program," Minke said of her decision to join the ASC faculty and staff. "In the larger programs, you lose the personal touch."

While at St. Joseph's, Minke has been responsible for administration of athletic contests and contracts and for compliance with all rules and regulations governing the Northeast Women's Athletic Conference, the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) and the regulations of the college which is located in West Hartford, Conn. During that time Minke also served as head coach in two sports, volleyball and softball.

Prior to that she served as assistant to the athletic director at Mount Holyoke College in South Hadley, Mass., and as a graduate teaching assistant at Kent State University in Ohio where she earned a Master of Arts in Physical Education. Her undergraduate degree is from the University of Wisconsin.

Minke's responsibility here will be to chair both physical education (an academic department) and athletics (a function of the dean of students). "Star Minke impressed me as being unique in articulating the differences and similarities between athletics and physical education," notes Dean of the College Sarah Blanshei. "I think she is uniquely qualified to be the first chair."

Minke will help with recruitment of student athletes and will work with the College as it explores the possibilities of joining a conference (like the Southern Collegiate Athletic Conference) or "creating a conference" for women's colleges.

"It would require a lot of work. But it would be fun," said Minke.

Dean of Students Gué Hudson is pleased that the College was "able to hire someone of Starlyn's caliber. She has had experience at Mount Holyoke and St. Joseph's, and has taken St. Joseph's program from beginning level to a competitive program. I am hopeful that will happen here."

A tree takes root in Garden for Peace

ASC'S RESPONSE TO THE OKLAHOMA BOMBING TRAGEDY.

The distance between Agnes Scott College and Oklahoma City shrank from 800 miles to as close as a television on April 19, when the explosion of a Ryder truck chock full of fuel oil and fertilizer ripped a nine-story gash in the facade of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building. When the smoke cleared in the Oklahoma town, the state—indeed the nation—found itself staring at the crumbled concrete grave of 167 people and dealing with an emotional wound even more tremendous than the 8-foot-by-30-foot crater that lay at the base of the Murrah building. As horrific as this scene may have been, the more frightening reality for most Americans emerged in the faces of those accused of the treacherous act—other Americans.

Oklahoma City's response to the tragedy has been a case study in compassion and diligence. On campus, the ASC community came together, May 1, for a memorial service and tree planting in the Garden for Peace (a part of the Alumnae Garden adjacent to the Anna Young Alumnae House). The Rev. Paige McRight '68, Agnes Scott chaplain, officiated at the ceremony which included a reading of Psalm 121 by Marley Maupin '97 from Enid, Okla., and excerpts from the poem "A Prayer for Children" by Ina Jones Hughs '63 (see complete poem in Agnes Scott Alumnae Magazine Summer 1995). Those gathered took turns shoveling earth onto a newly planted Cherokee Princess Dogwood.

Lucia Sizemore '65, director of alumnae affairs, joins others in memorializing the victims of the Oklahoma City bombing.

"We had the service at the request of members of the staff and student body," explains McRight. "We felt it was important to recognize the loss in Oklahoma and to celebrate the efforts of those who responded to the relief efforts. We wanted to note that peace is important and that violence can't have the last word."

Planning a holiday? Trip the A.G.N.E.S. Fantastic!

Need lodging in Atlanta, Boston, Charlotte, Houston or Washington D.C.? Want to help create a scholarship at Agnes Scott? You can do both.

Through the Alumnae Guestroom Network Endowing Scholarships (A.G.N.E.S.) program, the ASC Alumnae Association will secure economical lodging for alumnae, students, faculty and administrative staff at the homes of alumnae in these five cities.

The money earned through the room charges will endow a scholarship for ASC students and spark relationships with alums.

■ For rates and reservations two weeks in advance of your trip, call the alumnae office, 1-800-868-8602.

Remodeling & Refinements

A slightly altered version of the president's house will greet President-designate Mary Brown Bullock '66 when she arrives this summer. In late May the physical plant began renovation work on the interior of the house to accommodate the Bullocks' 5,000-volume library and to ready the basement for use by the Bullocks' children and guests. In addition to the rear of the house (by contractors Kendall & Murff) was begun as well, that will include a breakfast area, family room and two-car garage. The work is expected to be completed before the family arrives in August.

Alumnae develops leaders in Atlanta's "at-risk kids"

"FUTUREFORCE TEACHES EXPANSION. AGNES SCOTT DID THAT FOR ME AND THAT'S WHAT WE'RE TRYING TO DO FOR THESE YOUNG PEOPLE."

When Angela Scott '85 completed her study in physics at Agnes Scott College, everyone expected her to enter the scientific world. Yet today, Scott is pursuing a master's in public administration and coordinates FutureForce, a two-year-old program aimed at developing leadership skills in "at-risk" Atlanta students between the ages of 12 and 19.

Some 250 students have already benefited.

Through enrichment activities, community service projects, discussion groups, networking opportunities, field trips, out-of-town retreats and award presentations, Scott, a wife and mother of two, is guiding the youth of Atlanta toward leadership and responsibility.

Meeting with staff, training volunteers and dealing with students' problems are among her daily tasks.

Admits Scott: "My ear is glued to the phone all day." Occasionally, her job takes her beyond the confines of the office to allow her to do her favorite work: making direct contact with students.

Students have traveled to such places as Rock Eagle and a ski resort in Crested Butte, Colo., to improve self-confidence in fun surroundings.

But not all of her tasks are as pleasant. "Visiting incarcerated students and having to go to funerals of children that I've had contact with is hard," Scott solemnly admits. "Knowing that they're there [incarcerated] and I can't do anything to help."

Scott entered this profession sort of indirectly. During her high school and college years, she volunteered with Program Reach Out, counseling young girls with unstable families, and at Georgia Regional Hospital, caring for severely retarded children. One summer, while working as a designer of fundraising projects, Scott joined the EXODUS/Atlanta Cities in Schools projects, the parent organization of FutureForce. "They liked me and I've been coming back ever since," Scott boasts.

The FutureForce coordinator attributes much of her success and stamina to her alma mater. Making the transition from an all black high school to a predominantly white college posed some problems for her. "Rejection became a daily part of life. I didn't feel it from the faculty but from my peers, so my comfort zone [was tested and eventually] expanded.

Angela Scott '85 coordinates FutureForce, a program aimed at developing leadership skills in "at risk" Atlanta teenagers.

There is a piece of our [FutureForce] curriculum that teaches expansion. Agnes Scott did that for me and that's what we're trying to do for these young people."

P.A.C.T. draws strength from collaboration

CUSTODIAL STAFF GETS NEW INSIGHTS, OPPORTUNITIES IN PROGRAM DESIGNED TO IMPROVE JOB SKILLS AND ENHANCE WORK RESPONSIBILITIES.

With Total Quality Management (TQM) concepts in efficiency becoming commonplace across the globe, Agnes Scott's custodial services staff has worked hard to stay a step ahead.

As a result, the staff members have improved their work performance and confronted sagging morale.

Last year, the Office of the Physical Plant hired independent consultants Roesel Kent and Associates to help make improvements in the operation of the custodial department. From these suggestions emerged the Positive Action Custodial Team (P.A.C.T.).

P.A.C.T., a 10-member group that has taken an active role in improving the operations of the custodial staff, is made up of lead workers from both shifts; one elected member from each shift; three volunteers; one rotating member; Victoria Lambert, manager of campus services; James Ojeda, custodial supervisor; and Elsa Peña, director of physical plant.

As one of its first actions, P.A.C.T. changed the way jobs are assigned to the 19-member custodial staff. Rather than have their supervisors assign jobs, a job lottery determines assignments. "There's less friction, less griping," said team member Earnest Sanford. "No one can say there's favoritism."

Right now, the entire custodial staff is in the process of learning the most efficient and effective ways of doing various jobs. P.A.C.T. members, who meet weekly, are standardizing the performance of certain duties as well as testing new methods and equipment.

Students have noticed P.A.C.T. changes, including the addition of central garbage cans on each floor of the residence halls. With students bringing trash to the central cans, custodial workers have fewer receptacles to gather. Custodians are also testing new floor mats in several campus buildings in order to determine the most effective choice for each area.

This new way of running the custodial department has encouraged staff members. "It makes me feel good to know we are doing something to influence other people, doing something to better ourselves, the department, the physical plant, the whole campus," said Sanford.

Many P.A.C.T. members express a renewed sense of pride in their work and the image of the custodial staff. "I jump on better sneak a little practice," said Pierce. This kind of self-motivation proves the real success of P.A.C.T.

Peña is impressed. "They feel very proud—P.A.C.T. gives them something that belongs to them. They feel that they can make a difference."

P.A.C.T. values teamwork. Solutions to most problems have come through group brainstorming. Ojeda said P.A.C.T. has given people "a chance to voice opinions. They're learning things, and we get a chance to learn from them, too." Rather than being charged with making decisions concerning the custodial staff, Ojeda plays the role of collaborator: "When it comes to the P.A.C.T. team, I'm just one of the members."

Recently the group made a presentation to inform the Building and Grounds Committee of the board of trustees of P.A.C.T.'s progress. "That was a challenge," said team member Horace Stephens, of the presentation. "It was quite an experience just to see the people sit listening to you. We caught their attention because we did so well." Elmira Pierce enjoyed the experience for a different reason. For her, the presentation meant the opportunity to do something in the board room besides clean it up.

According to Lambert, "the whole concept behind P.A.C.T. is to empower people who haven't had much power . . . by allowing them to be part of the decision-making process and showing them we'll act on [those] decisions."

By looking for creative solutions to problems, P.A.C.T. has created a more efficient and fair work schedule, purchased new products that better serve their needs, and created a positive work environment.

P.A.C.T. members have earned accolades from the College administration. "I'm delighted with [P.A.C.T.'s] effectiveness," said Vice President of Finance and Development William Gailey. "I have a tremendous amount of respect for what they have done."

The entire campus benefits from these changes because, said Pierce, "this is a team working together for the good of Agnes Scott."

other people if I see they are not doing something up to par," said team member Travis Nolley.

Elmira Pierce, a P.A.C.T. member who has cleaned the alumnae and president's houses for nine years, "drew" the library in the job lottery this year. Because she had never used a floor polishing machine, she enlisted the help of Corrie Cash, another custodial staffer, to teach her how to use it. "I thought I'd

Tower Council sets 'lofty' goal for each member

UNIQUE FUNDRAISING COMMITTEE SEEKS TO RAISE AT LEAST $1,000 FROM EACH OF 70 DESIGNATED ALUMNAE.

The Tower Circle Committee, an organization with "lofty ambitions," derives its name from the tallest building on campus, the Agnes Scott Hall bell tower.

The committee, made up of current and former trustees and alumnae, is unique among the College's many fundraising committees in that the goal of its seven members is to raise a minimum of $1,000 from each of 70 designated alumnae and friends of the College.

As of late May, committee members Faye Sisk '73, Lamar Oglesby, Louise Isaacson Bernard '46, Margaret "Wardie"

Abernethy Martin '59, Sally Skardon '70, Laura Klettner Bynum '81 and Joie Delafield '58 have raised $41,000 for the Annual Fund, with a total of $88,000 for all funds.

The committee was formed last October as a means of increasing volunteers' involvement in fundraising and personalizing Agnes Scott's fundraising activities, said Anne Schatz, manager of stewardship.

"As donors are contacted personally we have the opportunity to educate them about what is happening on campus, to hear their concerns and to thank them for their giving," said Schatz.

Major gifts

WEAVER SCHOLARSHIP ESTABLISHED; SCHOLARSHIPS AND AN ANNUITY REACH $178,000 IN APRIL AND MAY.

In April and May, donors to the College contributed more than $178,000 toward scholarship funds and an annuity. Friends and family of Rebecca Weaver '75 established, through her estate and supplemental gifts, a $54,171 scholarship fund in her name. The estate of Cama Burgess Clarkson '22 contributed $15,000 to the John and Sallie Burgess Scholarship Fund. The College received a gift of $12,530 from the Jessie Ball duPont Fund. Martha Boone Shaver '41 and her husband, John, made a generous donation to the scholarship fund in memory of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B.E. Boone Jr. Miriam Thompson Felder '32 established a second planned gift with the College, a charitable gift annuity.

Annual Fund group reorganized

COMMITTEE TO MEET QUARTERLY TO UPDATE FUNDRAISING APPEALS.

The Annual Fund Advisory Committee, comprised of alumnae volunteers, was reorganized in March. The committee will take on a more active role in the College's fundraising planning by meeting four times a year with the Office of Development to discuss the Annual Fund's programming, phone and mail appeals, reunion giving and personal solicitations. "The development office felt that under the previous structure volunteers had less ownership of the committee. [With the reorganization] we want them to have more input into the methods we use to solicit donors," said Sarah Cave, acting director of the Annual Fund. Confirmed members of the advisory committee include Mary Madison Wisdom '41, Anne Diseker Beebe '67, Claire West '90, Marilyn Hubbard '70, Anne Curtis Jones '79 and Katherine Stubbs '67.

In other Annual Fund news, reunion classes were recognized during Alumnae Weekend for outstanding giving to the Annual Fund. The class of 1975 raised the largest amount, $59,796; the class of 1945 had the highest percentage of participation, 69 percent. The class of 1960 was also recognized with a 62 percent participation rate.

During the Annual Fund Phonathon April 10-12, students received 339 pledges, with alumnae contributing $16,957.

The 1994-95 Senior Campaign raised $7,250 in pledges. Fifty-five students pledged to the Annual Fund for a total participation rate of 48 percent.

QUALITY TIME

Alumnae Weekend

More than 550 alumnae gathered at Agnes Scott for Alumnae Weekend to "Celebrate 100 Years of Agnes Scott Alumnae at Work." During the three-day centennial celebration, April 28-30, alumnae took part in a number of events including a silent auction of items donated by alumnae, trustees, faculty, staff and students to benefit the Annual Fund. Alumnae also attended a dedication of the College's self-guided tree tour. Reading sessions and book signings were presented by authors including Mary Arnall "Marni" Broach McGee '65, Memye Curtis Tucker '56 and Susan Henson Frost '70.

"I was glad to see so many alumnae back on campus, some of whom had not been back since their graduation 30 or 40 years ago," said Amy Davis, manager of alumnae programs. "I don't know of a better way to celebrate 100 years of alumnae service and involvement than with a weekend like this, which drew on the help of so many alumnae volunteers."

100 Years Young

The Alumnae Association celebrated its 100th anniversary during this year's weekend festivities. Lowrie Fraser '56, president of the Alumnae Association, provided alumnae with a brief history of the organization's founding, centered around the themes of "scholarships, ongoing educational experiences and the desire to be the nucleus of union and energy for all interested in the furtherance of Agnes Scott." A time line of the first 37 years of the association is excerpted from Fraser's speech.

- 1895 - Six women meet in the library of Agnes Scott Institute to form the Alumnae Association. Mary Josephine Barnett '93 was elected as its first president.
- 1901 - The first Annual Fund drive helps raise funds for a new gym.
- 1906 - Birmingham, Ala., alumnae form a chapter.
- 1913 - The association established a loan fund for juniors and seniors.
- 1916 - Mobile and Chattanooga alumnae form chapters.
- 1917 - ASC Board of Trustees elects the first alumnae members, Bessie Scott Harman, Inst. and Mary Wallace Kirk '11.
- 1921 - An Alumnae Register, predecessor to the alumnae directory, is printed and distributed to 1,200 alumnae.
- 1922 - The Alumnae House is dedicated and named for Anna Irwin Young '95, making it the first alumnae house in the South and the second in the nation.
- 1929 - Orlando, Charlotte and Richmond alumnae form chapters.
- 1932 - Alumnae Association chapters begin to use "moving pictures" of campus scenes to encourage interest in Agnes Scott.

KUNTZ, TUCKER, WEBB SINGLED OUT: HONOREES COMBINE SERVICE TO OTHERS WITH SUCCESSFUL CAREERS.

MARION LEATHERS KUNTZ '45 Distinguished Career

She has received medals and professorships, recognitions of accomplishment for distinguished scholarship, and she is about to publish her sixth book, but Marion Kuntz found her greatest satisfaction as a mother. "I love being a mother," she says. "That's still my most important career." She married during her senior year at Agnes Scott. One son came after 18 months, another four years later; it would be 17 years before she resumed her academic life.

A divorce and the need to establish a career outside the home brought her back to school. The same year she received an M.A. in Latin and Greek from Emory University, her youngest son graduated from grammar school and her oldest from high school. "We grew up together and graduated together," says Kuntz.

She holds a Ph.D. in renaissance studies in Latin from Emory. Since 1966, she has been on the faculty of Georgia State University. For 10 years, she served as chair of GSU's foreign languages department. The university has recognized her research in 16th century Venetian studies with Fuller E. Calloway, regent and research professorships.

Her routine is rigorous. She teaches 10 hours a week; doing research accounts for another 90 hours. Since January, she has written six major papers and almost completed a book on Dionisio Gallo, an unknown French prelate attempting reform in the 16th century Catholic Church. She discovered his writings while researching in a Venice archive.

Kuntz has been offered opportunities at other universities. "But I've been lucky," she says. "After college, both my sons settled in Atlanta." Now there are five grandchildren underfoot. "I have a wonderful life."

MEMYE CURTIS TUCKER '56 Distinguished Service to the College

Memye Tucker has had a lifelong relationship with Agnes Scott. "I feel like I've been involved since 1922," she laughs. "My mother was a graduate (Mary Freeman Curtis '26) and I grew up inside all her memories of the College. I always knew I was going to school there."

In 1972, Tucker became president of the Agnes Scott Alumnae Association during a time of enormous change at the College. President Wallace Alston retired that year and the director of alumnae affairs had died. What Tucker assumed would be a figurehead position soon demanded her full attention and she resigned other responsibilities to attend to it. She reorganized the Alumnae Association, working toward greater geographical representation—"I had lived for a while in New York City and had some idea what it felt like to live far away"—and giving members genuine responsibility—"which means you don't have as tight control, but it opens up the organization to their creativity."

From 1974 to 1978, she was an alumna trustee. For the past 10 years, she has served as moderator for the panel of the annual Agnes Scott Writer's Festival. Through it she has helped bring top contemporary writers to the campus. An accomplished poet with an M.A. from Columbia and a Ph.D. from Emory, both in English literature, Tucker has occasionally taught at the College since 1968. In 1993, she was honored with the first Agnes Scott Distinguished Alumna Writer award and last summer she was John Ciardi Scholar in Poetry at The Breadloaf Writer's Conference in Middlebury, Vt.

But this alumnae award had particular significance, reminding her of her family's long involvement with the College. In the audience was Tucker's father, 91-year-old Dr. Walker L. Curtis, who had courted her mother while she was a student at Agnes Scott and he was a medical student at Emory.

PATRICIA WEBB M.D. '45 Distinguished Community Service

For Patricia Webb, community service has been international. As a medical researcher on viruses for the U.S. Public Health Service, the National Institutes of Health and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the graduate of Tulane University Medical School has worked in remote corners of the world on some of the most difficult and dangerous diseases of this century.

From 1955 to 1961 Webb worked with the U.S. Army Medical Research Unit in Malaysia. She then joined the Mid-America Research Unit in the Panama Canal Zone. There her work centered on the Machupo virus, the causal agent for Hemorrhagic Fever. Her studies took her to Argentina, Bolivia and across Central America.

She returned to Atlanta in 1976 to work in the CDC's famous environmentally-enclosed heart lab after the first Ebola outbreak, then moved to Sierra Leone to work on Lassa or Hemorrhagic Fever, in Africa.

"It's pretty nice to be paid to go to all these different places," said Webb. "But it was difficult in the field." Her last research position was with the CDC's laboratory in Fort Collins, Colo., where using bed bugs, she investigated the possibility of transmission of AIDS through insects. "Fortunately, it doesn't seem to," she said.

Since retirement in 1987, she has lived in Kilcreggan, Scotland.

PARTING WORDS

Bittersweet memories of college life

AT GRADUATION, ALUMNA SORTS THROUGH FOUR YEARS TO PRESERVE FRAGMENTS OF LIFE AT ASC.

Today I must pack four years into boxes. I must sort through multicolored memories, through letters, photographs and papers, toss some onto the pyre and place others in my own time capsule.

Artifacts from my first year include a Black Cat dress that reminds me of a smaller self; the picture on my ID card that identifies another person. On my finger I wear the fossils of my sophomore year. Faded pajamas chronicle the craziness of my junior year's capping activities. In many ways I have documented the events of my senior year with the enthusiasm that a new mother employs recording the "firsts" of her baby.

Yet as I review the past four years, I realize it has been difficult. My personal evolution includes discovering what it means to be a woman and weighing how people respond to me as an African American. Sifting through the years, I realize that there are moments I am not certain how to archive and there are faces I may or may not choose to keep in my album. There are things about Agnes Scott that I will exclude from my book but not from my memory.

What will I do with the hieroglyphics a professor wrote me in the margins of my papers? Her comments did only pertain to that particular assignment, but the words remind me of her obliquely offensive remarks made throughout the semester—the references to me as "the class's only African-American representative" which I attribute to her lack of tact. I will exclude her from my archives since most of my professors have been demanding and supportive.

I have purposely lost the scrolls students received in introductory foreign language lab to help improve our Spanish—the bingo cards with pictures instead of numbers. I refused to put a single chip on the cardboard grid after I saw a jet black face with watermelon lips look up at me from one of the squares on my card. Although the assistant said that negrito was just an expression, I felt maligned by the caricature and will not preserve it.

I will, however, remember a silver-haired woman who stopped by my room one day. She did not seem uncomfortable with my race although I, who had just showered, was uncomfortable being clad in only a towel. She had sterling memories of the time she spent at the College. We talked about how I had rearranged the furniture and about our families. I only wish that I had had the forethought to take her picture—it would have had a place in my archives.

—Shlawnda Calhoun '95 lives in Atlanta. She was the 1995 recipient of the University of Mississippi's Robert Frost Prize in Creative Writing.

Committed to Diversity

In Latino multi-ethnic societies references to race often have positive connotations not immediately obvious to a student of the language. El negrito, for example, can be an expression of affection rather than a racial slur. To prevent any future misunderstanding, the Department of Spanish will delete that figure and the figure of a Native American.

The department's deep commitment to cultural diversity is illustrated by activities such as active recruitment of Hispanic students and by such events as the evening of African-Caribbean poetry reading. Furthermore, the department has also served as a safe space for discussion of issues of diversity.

Blackshear poet laureate

ALABAMA WRITERS' CONCLAVE NAMES ASC GRADUATE THE STATE'S TOP POET

Eighty-four years of Alabama history are etched on the welcoming face of Helen Friedman Blackshear '31. This month another line of history was added when the Montgomery resident was named Alabama's poet laureate by the Alabama Writers' Conclave. Between Elderhostel trips to Mexico and Poland, Blackshear returned home to discuss her life's work, reflected in her teaching, her marriage and her writing, which has fetched her nearly 50 state and national awards in the past five years.

Blackshear traces the origin of her interest in poetry to Georgia Poet Laureate Robert Loveman, her great uncle, who shared a house with her family in Tuscaloosa, Ala. Blackshear says Loveman taught her "to see things, to use my eyes to look at things differently." At his encouragement her eight-year-old observations took shape into poetry. Then came the influence of her high school teacher Wanda Detlie. "When I found she liked poetry, I wanted to write poetry that she liked."

The spark that Loveman and Detlie gave was disciplined by Agnes Scott's own Emma May Laney, an indomitable force in the English department from 1919 to 1956 whom Lest We Forget author Edward McNair described as "the most powerfully influential person who has ever taught at Agnes Scott."

"She was quite strict but she had a way of letting us know what parts were good and what parts were not acceptable without crushing our creativity," recalls Blackshear. "[She also] taught me how to get things out of people. Later on when I was teaching creative writing I used her methods—having people sit in a circle and read and then pointing out first the good things. . ."

While Laney became Blackshear's teacher-mentor, Robert Browning became her muse. Attracted to "his intellectualism and sarcasm," she says she hungered for the "realism that he showed."

Her first two published poems were about her Georgia alma mater. "A couple of years after I was married [to William Mitchell Blackshear], we didn't have enough money to make our car payment; I was afraid we were going to lose the car and I said, 'Maybe I can sell a poem. I had gotten an invitation to a reunion. Not only did I not have the money to go, I didn't want to go. I wanted to remember college the way I thought of it. I [wrote the poem 'Reunion,'] published it in Good Housekeeping and got $35 for it. That made our car payment. A couple of years later I published 'On Leaving College,' a poem she wrote on the night before her graduation from ASC.

After leaving ASC and receiving a master's degree from the University of Alabama, Blackshear set her writing aside for nearly 35 years while she taught and raised a family. Her first book, Mother was a Rebel, about her growing-up years in Tuscaloosa, wasn't published until 1965. Since then she has published another book of essays, Southern Smorgasbord; Creek Captives, stories for children based on Alabama history (for which she received a Freedom Foundation Award); a book about her father's family, From Peddler to Philanthropist: the Friedman Story; and three books of poetry, individual poems of which have appeared in more than a dozen poetry reviews nationally.

She has been active in the Creative Writers of Montgomery for 20 years, the Press and Authors Club and the American Association of University Women. She has served as an officer of the Alabama Poetry Society (and Poet of the Year in 1986) and in the 72-year-old Alabama Writers' Conclave.

"I have tried all my writing career to keep it simple," says Blackshear, an admirer of intellectualism, who loathes "things written to impress. If it comes from the heart and you really mean it, it will come across."

CHALLENGING COURSES, SAFE PLACE OFFERED TO WOMEN ARTISTS

The magnolia branch is weighted down by a knapsack, giving the artist an unobstructed view of a magnificent blossom.

The artist, Julia Beeman '55 of Mineral Bluff, Ga., smiles as she explains that this is her first time working with watercolor. She admits that the best aspect of watercolor is the ability to correct mistakes. "I'm glad that it is easy to make changes because it's also the first time I've painted without first drawing the image," Beeman adds.

Beeman was among the 71 participants in Agnes Scott's Summer Studios Program. From June 17 through 25, the students and their professional artist instructors experienced different media including watercolor, encaustic, beadwork, computer graphics and theatre.

"We don't want our program to be typical, we want it to be an intense, immersion experience that allows students to get involved in the creative process," explains Myrna Lubin, director of special programs for ASC.

The Summer Studios Program attracts a mix of ages, backgrounds and experiences. In the "Watercolor and the Visual Journal" class, the students included Anna McPherson, an Agnes Scott student who took the class during the summer because it isn't available during the school year. Another watercolor student, Jo Hunsinger '55, says she enjoys painting with oils but has always wanted to learn how to work with watercolor.

This is the third year Agnes Scott has offered Summer Studios to enable serious students of the arts a chance to experience a variety of topics in visual arts, music, theatre and creative writing. Anne Kaiser of Atlanta says she registered for the "Watercolor and the Visual Journal" class because she's always kept a written journal and she's always been interested in watercolor. "When I saw journal-keeping and watercolor combined I found the courage to sign up," says Kaiser.

A safe environment that encourages students to take risks is one of the program's objectives, says Lubin. Classes are small (the watercolor class had five students) because there is a greater spirit of camaraderie in the small group, Lubin adds.

The watercolor class was taught by Miriam Karp, an Atlanta painter whose work has been exhibited widely both locally and nationally.

"Watercolor is a very forgiving medium," says Karp. She challenges her students to take chances since mistakes with watercolor can be rubbed out, painted over or even left in the painting. "In fact, some of the best work I've seen with watercolor is usually an accident," she adds.

The format of the class is more than just teaching watercolor technique and telling students to paint. Instead, Karp has the students produce a visual journal of their week at Agnes Scott. Using small, postcard size pads of paper, the students work around the campus, painting what they see—the whole context or scene, an individual piece of the scene and a close-up of the individual piece.

Hunsinger worked in the garden within the Dana Fine Arts Building on one day. Her visual journal included paintings of a segment of the garden, an individual flower and even one of her classmates as she sat painting.

In addition to "Watercolor and the Visual Journal," studios and workshops offered were: Pop-Up Books; Waterbase Monotype; Introduction to Computer Art; Art Therapy, Children and Disabilities; Book Art; Monotype; Advanced Computer Art; Encaustic and Dimensional Beadwork. Students of the theatre enjoyed three workshops and two public seminars offered by the Omaha Magic Theatre, a cutting-edge multi-disciplinary performance ensemble of artists.

"Our instructors are all professional artists who are recognized as experts in the field and in addition to having Atlanta-based artists we have instructors from New York, Seattle, Nebraska and Maryland," says Lubin.

The key to Summer Studios' success is original topics and qualified instructors. As Lubin says, "We want to offer stuff you don't get anywhere else."

Administrative staff changes

MAHONEY MAKES TOUGH DECISION IN JUNE TO ACHIEVE BALANCED BUDGET FOR 1995-96 FISCAL YEAR

On June 2, Agnes Scott's Interim President Sally Mahoney announced that seven regular staff positions—six people—would be "vacated" due to an unexpected shortfall in the enrollment goal.

"Our retention projections and our projections regarding out-of-state entering students are tracking as projected. But we expect to be at 135 full time equivalent students (FTE) (20 less than the 155 FTE planned) by the opening of school," said Mahoney at an address to the faculty and staff.

The shortfall was in the projected number of entering Georgia students. "The budget impact is $325,000 to $350,000. Our obligation is to enter the new fiscal year with a balanced budget plan," said Mahoney. "The impact is largely in professional staff functions and it involves people whose work is of high quality and honored."

The president's office lost an administrative assistant position (which was currently vacant). Personnel reductions included one position (the director of special programs) from the office of the Dean of the College Sarah Blanshei; two (the coordinator of student activities and the assistant director of health services frozen until January) from the office of Dean of Students Gué Hudson; and three (manager of community relations and special events, part time editorial assistant in publications, coordinator of class activities from alumnae affairs) from the office of Vice President for Finance and Development Bill Gailey.

The decision to vacate positions was made after Mahoney and officers met with the budget work group consisting of Associate Professor of History Katharine Kennedy, Professor of Biology Harry Wistrand and then-Student Government Association Treasurer Jennifer Langston who reviewed options which also included salary freezes (across the board) and/or program cuts. Twice in the past five years (in 1990-91 and 1994-95) the College had frozen salaries (but in 1994 offered 2 percent raises after the monies became available). As part of the normal budgeting process, changes have occurred each year in the way monies are allocated and spent. Among the concerns expressed by Mahoney was the protection of faculty positions and the salary pool (at 3.5 percent) for faculty and staff. Members of the budget work group agreed that the circumstances required an unpleasant solution and the unanimous decision was to vacate staff positions. "In our discussions we did not talk about which positions would be eliminated," said Kennedy, who noted those decisions were shouldered by the officers. But she said, there was "real sorrow felt for our loss of valuable people."

After Mahoney made her remarks, she opened the meeting to questions which ranged from how the Georgia HOPE program had affected first-year enrollment to why the College had chosen staff reductions over drawing further on the endowment for operating monies.

While HOPE (Helping Outstanding Pupils Educationally) increased its grants to $1,500 for qualifying Georgia students enrolling in private colleges this year, its offer of full tuition, book allowance and mandatory fees for B-average Georgia high school graduates entering state-supported institutions this fall had a clear negative impact on Agnes Scott's entering Georgia student enrollment which was down 35 percent.

This year the endowment will contribute 42 percent of the ASC operating budget (tuition contributes 34 percent; room and board contributes 10 percent; the annual fund, 6 percent). Mahoney noted that the board of trustees had actually increased the endowment contribution to the 1995-96 operating budget. It was pointed out that compared with the use of endowment by other colleges, the ASC percentage is high. (According to figures from Higher Education Data Sharing Consortium, among liberal arts class I colleges, in 1994 endowment provided a mean of 11.4 percent of the operating budget compared with 37.8 percent allowed that year for Agnes Scott.)

By late-August, enrollment among Return-to-College Students was up (a head count of 28 this year compared to 10 last year) and overall head count was at 182 (a head count of two more than last year). "We increased applications and we increased quality (this year's entering class scored an average 40 points higher on the SAT than last year)," reports ASC Director of Admission Stephanie Balmer. Preliminary fall 1995 total FTE figures were 535 compared to 534.38 for fall 1994.

The 1995 figures are affected by the inclusion of 7 Japanese exchange students and 2 German exchange students who are enrolled for one semester only. Dean of Students Gue Hudson '68 notes that although this fall's total FTE numbers are comparable to last fall's, the figures are a bit misleading. The College was not able to reach its goal of 155 new students, so a sustained solution (greater number of full time equivalent students) remains illusive. "We are developing new market strategies and trying for increased geographic distribution," notes Hudson, "in an attempt to enroll more first-year students"

Student Leader Profiles

LEE, CHEAVE DISCUSS RESIDENCE HALL LIFE, SPORTS

TAWANA LEE '96
Residence Hall Association president
Hometown: Hephzibah, Ga.

The Residence Hall Association (RHA), composed of an executive board, resident directors, resident assistants and judicial representatives, assists in making students comfortable in their new homes, the residence halls. RHA helps first-year students make the transition from home to college and offers peer education workshops on such topics as celebrating diversity and dating in college.

As president, Tawana Lee has three main goals for RHA in the coming year. Lee would like to see RHA more active and visible on campus through more dorm parties, stress-reduction workshops and jointly-sponsored activities with other campus organizations. She also wants to encourage greater student involvement within the respective residence halls through increased interaction and communication among fellow students and RHA members. "It all starts in the dorm. We as RHA members have the opportunity to touch each student here. We just want to do our part, but we have to have the students' help."

Her final goal of raising the visibility of RHA at the state level, has already been accomplished. Agnes Scott's RHA won the bid to host the statewide conference of the Georgia Residence Hall Organization in 1996, making it the first time a small institution has served as host. Approximately 250 people will converge on campus for the conference in February. Lee hopes to make the event a success for ASC's RHA.

DEBBIE CHEAVES '97
Basketball team captain
Major: Biology/ Chemistry
Hometown: Lake City, Ga.

"Winning isn't everything," says Debbie Cheaves, a rising junior at Agnes Scott. "The women who played last year were dedicated players who simply love the game. We had to be." Cheaves, who has played basketball competitively since the fifth grade, plans to bring a fresh new attitude to the game next season. With the naming of a new athletic director, Starlyn Minke, and the search for a new basketball coach in progress, Cheaves acknowledges that things will be different. "I'm excited. It gives us a new chance to prove ourselves. It's a new beginning I guess you could say. We hope we will have more participation and more players come out next year." Cheaves served on the search committee for the director.

Not only will things be different for the basketball program next year, Cheaves thinks positive changes will be made in the whole athletic department. "The new athletic director has some good ideas about all our programs. She wants to move them to a new level which will in turn give ASC athletics a stronger foundation."

Annual Fund update

GIVING PERCENTAGE UP

The percentage of alumnae giving to Agnes Scott's 1994-95 Annual Fund reached 40 percent by the close of the fiscal year, June 30. Alumnae contributed $656,820 to the total $1,176,118 raised.

Those giving at the Founders' Club level ($5,000-9,999) in the final month of the campaign were Flavel McMichael Godfrey '68, Catherine Warren Dukehart '51, Jeanne Kaufmann Manning '72, Louise Isaacson Bernard '46, Virginia Milner Carter '40 and the estate of Mary Miller Brown '32. The Annual Fund received $36,978 from the estate of Romola Davis Hardy '20.

DEGREES

JOSEPHINE BRADLEY, assistant professor of sociology, received her doctoral degree from Emory University on May 8. Her dissertation, "Wearing My Name: School Desegregation, Greensboro, North Carolina, 1954-1958," is a social-political-historical autobiography which traces her involvement in early desegregation efforts at a Greensboro high school. KRISTINA BROOKS, a part time instructor in English, received a Ph. D. in English from the University of California at Berkeley in May. NATHAN GRISBY, director of Joyful Noise, received a master's degree in music education from Jacksonville State University. NANCY HALLORAN, associate director of admission, received a master's degree in counseling psychology/community counseling from University of Georgia.

DEPARTMENT CHAIRS/ PROGRAM DIRECTORS

Newly-appointed academic department chairs and program directors for 1995-96 include TERRY MCGEHEE (acting), art department; LINDA HODGES, chemistry department; CHRISTOPHER AMES, English department; RAFAEL OCASIO, modern foreign languages and literatures; STARLYN MINKE, physical education and athletics; TINA PIPPIN, religious studies; VIOLET JOHNSON, Africana studies; GAIL CABLSIUS, women's studies; and ISA WILLIAMS, Atlanta Semester.

CONFERENCE CONVENERS

At the recommendation of the Agnes Scott College Academic Review Committee, new academic conferences have been created for all academic areas. Conferences are minimalist structures intended to encourage creativity and collaboration across disciplines. Serving in the newly-created positions are: Creative arts, DUDLEY SANDERS, convener, 1995-97; TED MATHEWS, co-convener, 1995-97; humanistic studies, INGRID WIESHOFER, convener, 1995-97; PEGGY THOMPSON, co-convener, 1995-97; social sciences, ED SHEEHEY, convener, 1995-97; MARTHA REES, co-convener, 1995-96; natural and mathematical sciences, HARRY WISTRAND, convener, 1995-96; LILIA HARVEY, co-convener, 1995-97.

GRANTS

LINDA HODGES, William Rand Kenan Professor of Chemistry, received a $12,470 grant from the National Science Foundation's Instrumentation and Laboratory Improvement Program for investigative chemistry using gas chromatography. This money will be matched by the College and used to purchase a capillary gas chromatograph.

PUBLICATIONS/ TELEVISION

KIM BARD, assistant professor part time in psychology, had her work in the application of remedial social skills in nursery-reared chimpanzees featured in a recent edition of Smithsonian

Magazine and on the PBS television series "Scientific American Frontiers" hosted by Alan Alda. GUS COCHRAN, professor of political science, discussed his sabbatical research in an article entitled "We Participate, They Decide: The Real Stakes in Revising Section 8 (a)(2) of the National Labor Relations Act," which appeared in the July edition of The Berkeley Journal of Employment and Labor Law. SALLY MACEWEN, associate professor of classical languages and literatures, presented her paper, "Greek Tragedy and the American Western," at the meeting of the American Philological Association, December 1994, in Atlanta, and her paper "Multiculturalism and the Classics: One Possible Unit for Non-Classical Courses" at an April meeting of the Classical Association of the Middle West and South, in Omaha. THE REV. PAIGE MCRIGHT '68, the Julia Thompson Smith Chaplain at Agnes Scott, recounted her experiences as a first-year college chaplain in an article entitled "Celebrate!" which appeared in a recent newsletter of the National Association of College and University Chaplains. RAFAEL OCASIO, associate professor and chair of modern foreign languages and literatures, contributed several chapters to David William Foster's book Latin American Writers on Gay and Lesbian Themes, published recently by Greenwood Publishing. Ocasio's writings were "Estela Portillo Trambley," "Floyd Salas" and "Carlos Varo." REGINE REYNOLDS-CORNELL, Adeline Arnold Loidans Professor of French and chair of the departments of French and Japanese, published a review of Raymond C. LaCharite's book Writing the Renaissance: Essays of Sixteenth-Century French Literature in Honor of Floyd Gray, in the April edition of French Review. DONNA SADLER, associate professor of art, had her paper "Courting Louis IX in the Sculptural Program of Villeneuve-L'Archeveque" published in the April 1 edition of Majesta. The article explores the motivation for an ornately carved 13th century Gothic portal on a nondescript church in the country between Sens and Troyes. PEGGY THOMPSON, associate professor of English, published an article, "Facing the Void in The Wives' Excuse; or, Characters Make Themselves," in a recent edition of Papers on Language and Literature. VICTOR WILSON, assistant dean of students, had his article "Top Ten Tips for Students of Color at Predominantly White Institutions" published in the newsletter of the Southern Association for College Student Affairs.

READINGS/ RECITALS/ VISITING ARTISTS/ EXHIBITIONS

ANNE BEIDLER, assistant professor of art, served as visiting artist to the contemporary book arts class at Rollins College in Winter Park, Fla., Jan. 9-10. She presented a lecture on book arts as well as her own work and gave hands-on studio demonstrations. Beidler's fine art works were included in an exhibit entitled "Gender Issues" at Augusta College, March 30-April 27, and her ongoing project "Reclaiming the Body" was also exhibited and discussed at Augusta College, April 27, as part of the 1995 Cullum Series entitled "Women in Today's World: Continuity and Change." CALVERT JOHNSON, professor of music, performed organ recitals for ASC alumnae groups in Georgia, Texas and Tennessee during the month of March.

WORKSHOPS/ CONFERENCES/ SYMPOSIA

MARYLIN DARLING, professor of dance and chair of theatre and dance, presented a paper, "The Glass Ceiling: Female Representation in Academia," at a meeting of the National Association of Physical Education in Higher Education held Jan. 5 in Palm Springs, Calif. MYRTLE LEWIN, associate professor of mathematics and chair of education, delivered a lecture on the use of constructivism and nontraditional teaching techniques in content-driven math courses to the math department of the University of Central Missouri at Warrensburg, and led a discussion on gender issues in the of teaching mathematics in a cross-disciplinary faculty forum, March 15 & 16. She served as a consultant for a National Science Foundation grant proposal being written jointly by faculty in mathematics and women's studies. REGINE REYNOLDS-CORNELL, Adeline Arnold Loidans Professor of French, served on the planning committee of the University Center in Georgia's ninth symposium entitled "Conflict Resolution and Education in the 21st Century," held April 21, at the Carter Presidential Center in Atlanta. Reynolds-Cornell was one of 14 women professors presenting papers at a seminar entitled "Contextualizing Writing by Early Modern Women," held April 7-8 at the Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington, D.C.

MARTHA REES, associate professor of anthropology, presented a paper entitled "Gender Role Socialization" as part of the 1995 Cullum Series, "Women in Today's World: Continuity and Change," presented May 16 at Augusta College. LARRY RIDDLE, associate professor of mathematics, presented a lecture on "Individualized Computer Investigations in Multivariable Calculus" at the Southeastern Section meeting of the Mathematical Association of America, held April 1 at the University of North Carolina in Asheville. N. J. STANLEY left this summer to accept a new position with Disney Studios in Burbank, Calif. The former assistant professor of theatre, presented two lectures, "What's Taboo About You? The Performance of Laurie Anderson, Anna Deavere Smith, and Rachel Rosenthal" and "Performing the Self: Making the Personal Performance," March 30-31 at Monmouth College in Monmouth, Ill. EDMUND SHEEHEY, Hal and Julia Smith Chair of Free Enterprise, delivered a paper entitled "Trade, Efficiency, and Growth in a Cross Section of Countries"; chaired a session, "Oil Economies"; and discussed his paper "Strategy of a Non-oil Economics, 1951-53: The Case of Iran," at The Eastern Economic Association's meeting. PEGGY THOMPSON, associate professor of English, presented a paper, "The Comic World of the Eighteenth Century Theater Audience," at the annual meeting of the Society for 18th Century Studies, April 5, in Tuscon. JULIE WEISBERG, assistant professor of education, made three presentations this winter and spring. To the Georgia Science Teachers Association in Savannah, Feb. 3, she spoke on "Global Thinking Project: Telecommunications and Environmental Educations; at Georgia State University's Continuing Education Conference "Microcomputers Online With Education '95," March 16, she spoke on "Collaborating at a Distance Through Telecommunications"; and to the National Science Teachers Association in Philadelphia, March 25, she addressed the subject "Global Thinking Project: Linking Schools in Environmental Understanding." VICTOR WILSON, assistant dean of students, presented an article at the American College Personnel Association Annual Convention, entitled "Imperatives for further Learning: Discussions Between White and Black Men."

AMONG THE MANY STAFF DAY ACTIVITIES on May 23 was the announcement of "Employee of the Year" awards to Elmira Pierce, Dorothea Markert and Mary K. Jarboe '68, left to right. Pierce, a custodian I, was the recipient in the campus services staff category; Markert, coordinator of campus events and conferences, in the administrative support staff category; and Jarboe, registrar, in the administrative staff category. Pierce began her service to the College in December 1984 and Jarboe in July 1974. Markert retired this summer, following 34 years of service to Agnes Scott.

PARTING WORDS

I'm not the same

I KNOW WHAT IT IS LIKE TO BE A WOMEN COMING OF AGE IN THE 90'S

Goodbyes are so hard. The ones I said to family and friends when I left my home state of Alabama just four years ago were poignant. I parted ways with people I had known since childhood, and college pals and professional associate friendships I had made in Mobile over 16 years. Though travel had taken me to other parts of the country, I had never actually lived outside of Alabama, never more than 60 miles away from my hometown of Atmore. For me, going away to college at age 33 (that is to say, taking the job as assistant publications manager at Agnes Scott), was far more traumatic than going away to college in Mobile at 18. Ending relationships, leaving projects unfinished and packing every dang book I'd collected in my lifetime, made the baggage, both real and emotional, much weightier.

But I arrived here with memories, books and boxes in June of 1991, hopeful and enthusiastic, just a couple of months before the class of 1995 arrived. And I struggled, as they did, with new geography, buildings and people, learning that first October what Black Cat was, and remembering, as I had learned at 18, how simultaneously frightening and exciting a new place can be. As time passed, the distance to Atlanta from Decatur became less of a journey; the words Buttrick, Main, Rebekah and Evans worked their way into my vocabulary; the faces of faculty, staff and students became almost as familiar as the ones I had left behind.

I grew fond of this place and looked forward to seeing the students daily, attending their Blackfriars productions, succumbing to solicitations for every organizational fund-raiser, helping them through difficulties with stern professors, receiving fun little gifts and greetings at Christmastime, hearing about their spring breaks and formals, listening to the rumble of music on the Quad or the crack of a softball bat on the field behind the library, and even standing and chatting in the familiar cafeteria line with students who chugged Cokes and downed bagels as they rushed off to class.

So many of those same faces lined up with caps and gowns this May and processed from Dana to the same end as thousands before them—graduation and the real world. I was proud of them and felt as if I had completed a journey with them. For I am not the same woman I was when I first came here. I think I know better now what it is like to be a woman coming of age in the '90s, and I understand the social, political and economic challenges she faces. Both they and I have worked and grown from our individual and mutual experiences at Agnes Scott and have been changed by our time together. I have learned much from them (how to listen) and maybe they have learned a little from me (how to laugh).

So I say goodbye to the class of 1995 as if it were my own, wish its members well in their many endeavors and say farewell to the part of me that moves on with them. But already, I long for the reunions that will bring their faces back to campus.

Registrar Mary K. Jarboe gives students final directions before they graduate.

Sharon Maitland-Moon responds to disaster

AIDING VICTIMS OF ANDREW, INIKI & OKLAHOMA BOMBING

Sharon Maitland Moon '80 uncharacteristically turned on her radio April 19 as she worked in her Richmond law office. Her "unusual" action became fortuitous as news of the bombing at the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City began to filter in over the airways. Moon, a past director of the Young Lawyers Division of the American Bar Association, immediately placed a call to current Young Lawyers Chair Mike Bedkey of Tampa, Fla., to advise him that President Clinton had declared a state of emergency in Oklahoma City, activating the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). Under an agreement between the Young Lawyers and FEMA, members of YL's Disaster Legal Services Division (DLSD) agree to provide free legal assistance for victims of federally declared disasters. According to Moon, the Young Lawyers mobilized within 24 hours of the bombing. "A perfect example," says Moon, "of how Disaster Legal Services works."

Moon, who received her law degree from the University of Richmond in 1988, began her work with the Young Lawyers almost immediately after law school. She was appointed a director of the division for 1992-93 (one of six directors who advise the chair) with the responsibility of overseeing seven substantive committees, including the DLSD. "I had just begun to understand what all my committees were responsible for when Hurricane Andrew hit," says Moon, referring to the September 1992 storm that devastated Dade County, Fla., and turned out to be the costliest natural disasters to-date in American history (surpassed only by the January 1994 Northridge, Calif., earthquake). "I had to quickly learn what to do when disaster strikes."

When Hurricane Andrew struck, Moon was renegotiating a more efficient working agreement between the Young Lawyers and FEMA. As a result, she knew exactly what her organization was required to do. Moon called members of the Young Lawyers outside the disaster area—most people don't realize that lawyers in the disaster area are victims themselves—in Jacksonville, Orlando and Tampa. When getting to the disaster area proved nearly impossible, Moon arranged staffing for a hotline that victims could call when phone service was restored. Once the immediate issues of food and shelter were resolved, survivors of the disaster faced numerous legal problems. Some had lost Social Security and Medicare cards and, most important in South Florida, proof of citizenship. Within weeks of the disaster, residents whose homes or apartments were destroyed or rendered uninhabitable were receiving past-due rent notices.

Eventually, landlord-tenant conflicts gave way to problems with insurance companies and contractor fraud. "All in all," says Moon, "we provided legal services to Andrew's victims for over a year."

Hot on the heels of Hurricane Andrew, came Hurricane Iniki, which decimated the Hawaiian Island of Kauai. "We had to fly lawyers over every day from the big island (Oahu)," says Moon. "It was a logistical problem of how to pay for the airfare. We eventually worked out a voucher system with FEMA."

In the three years since Andrew and Iniki wreaked their havoc, numerous large-scale natural disasters have continued to make headlines from coast to coast. In California, floods and fires were compounded by the Northridge earthquake. The flood of 1994 in Georgia, Alabama and Florida was sandwiched between the historic Midwest floods of 1993 and their recent, milder, descendants. Throughout this period, Moon has served in an advisory capacity for the YL's Disaster Legal Services Division. During her tenure as a YL director, Moon helped revise the Disaster Legal Services Agreement that her agency had with FEMA. The new agreement, signed into law July 1993, has a statutory basis, says Moon. "Public law requires FEMA to provide legal services. Still, our function as lawyers has become easier with the revamping of FEMA." The federal agency, which came under fire for slow responses to hurricanes Hugo and Andrew, has undergone a considerable re-organization since James Lee Witt was appointed director. "Those of us in disaster services have seen a substantial change in the energy and focus of FEMA since James Lee Witt arrived," notes Moon. According to Mary Hudak of the public affairs office for the Atlanta Regional Office of FEMA, "We now put a majority of our resources into planning and response for all hazards."

Although Moon's year as a director of the 170,000-member YL ended in 1993, she continues to function as an unofficial adviser to Disaster Legal Services while working for the law firm of LeClair, Ryan and Joines. "You might say I've been a statesman. I train bar organizations on how they should respond to a disaster."

MOTHER, TRAVELER, TEACHER, FARMER HAS A 3.43 GPA

Susan C. Dowd '72 did a double-take on June 14 while reading her Minneapolis Star Tribune. In it columnist Jim Klobuchar relayed the story of a student named Agnes Scott, age 93, who graduated from the University of Minnesota on June 4. Processing with cane and gown, the Lakeville, Minn., native completed her college education which she began at Mankato State in 1924. With a 3.43 grade point average, the former Apple Valley dairy farmer, wife, mother, teacher and world traveler, received a degree in social awareness. Although Scott suffered a mild stroke a week after her graduation, the Star Tribune writer indicated that nothing has "squashed the euphoria of her graduation."

Agnes Scott College, upon receipt of the news of her graduation, forwarded a note of congratulations and a copy of Edward McNair's history of the College, Lest We Forget, to the newfound "Scottie."

Bellringers chime

NEW ADDITION TO CLASS NEWS IN THIS EDITION

Alumnae who have long looked to the Class News section of Main Events for updates in the lives of their classmates will see an addition in this and future editions. "Bell ringers" from the most recent graduating class and the current senior class will be included in the Class News sections of the December, April and August editions of

ME. For the fourth year, the Office of Career Planning and Counseling has encouraged seniors who secure jobs or are accepted to graduate programs to participate in its "bell ringer" program. Bell ringers climb to the top of Agnes Scott Hall and ring the tower bell each Friday of spring semester. CP&C will provide Main Events with a list of ringers.

LUCIA'S TURN

Writing an annual report remains a challenging, yet rewarding exercise. The process pulls together in one document the work of the Office of Alumnae Affairs and the Alumnae Association with a different kind of "bottom line" assessment than other offices consider. Our achievements, although in some ways quantifiable, are more feasibly measured on a "good will and commitment" barometer. Highlights of the year ending June 30 include:

- Alumnae Leadership Conference 1994 brought more than 120 alumnae leaders back to campus for training and updating about the College.
- The names of 1,700 alumnae willing to serve as career resources for students were gathered from surveys of four reunion classes given by the Office of Career Planning and Counseling during eight Alumnae Weekends.
- Fifty-seven class presidents sent fall letters which were mailed between Oct. 1 and Dec. 31, 1994.
- Sixty-eight alumnae chapter meetings were coordinated through the alumnae office with the "Chapter Chat" newsletter serving as a link for ideas and feedback among chapter leaders.
- The 430 Exam Care Baskets, sold and assembled this year, raised $1,800 for the Student Government's Student Development Fund.
- Last August a reception was held to welcome new M.A.T. students into the Alumnae Association; new students were treated to an orientation trip to the World of Coca-Cola Museum followed by a picnic in the Alumnae Garden to meet members of the Young Alumnae

Chapter; in a February "Study Break" performance, alumna Fran Brodnax Franz '75 portrayed Decatur's Civil War heroine Mary Harris Gay, and valentines were delivered to student boxes; African-American students, alumnae, faculty and staff became acquainted through "Witkaze Connections"; a tea honoring the senior class was held Alumnae Weekend; a graduation dinner welcomed the seniors into the Alumnae Association as did a party, sponsored by the Decatur Alumnae Chapter, for international students and their families following Baccalaureate.

- Continuing education opportunities were provided through the fourth annual "Progressions" seminar in November on women's health issues and the January seminar, "Women and Social Change."
- A tote bag, campus landmark note paper and an ASC historic buildings cotton afghan were new alumnae gifts introduced this year.
- The Office of Alumnae Affairs supported development's fundraising efforts resulting in 40 percent of alumnae contributing a total of $656,820 to the Annual Fund.
- During Alumnae Weekend 1995, the College celebrated 100 years of alumnae service to Agnes Scott with over 500 alumnae attending.
- In June the Alumnae Board held a retreat to evaluate programs of the past year and plan for 1995-96. New goals include increasing alumnae giving and percentage of giving, implementing a communications/technology plan, enhancing the College's image worldwide, and involving more alumnae in the work of the association especially in admission outreach.

With the coming of a new president and the beginning of a new year for the College community, there is much to celebrate as we begin to build the framework for next year's annual report. Don't miss out on the fun; get involved today!

Sincerely,

Lucia H. Sizemore

In April, at the annual dinner of the Greenville, S.C., Urban League (attended by more than 900), Carolyn Essig Frederick was presented with the Order of the Palmetto, the highest honor given by the state of South Carolina, in recognition of "her interest in and friendship to the State of South Carolina and her people." Daughter Lynn Frederick Williamson '59 was visiting at the time. Two weeks earlier, accompanied by husband, Holmes, and daughter Peggy Frederick Smith '62, Carolyn enjoyed a day in Columbia with all current and former women state legislators at a luncheon at the governor's mansion. Unfortunately, a fall and subsequent hip surgery followed in May, but recovering is helped by happy spring memories.

Jo Smith Webb's twin daughters, Jody Webb Custer and Judy Webb Cheshire, graduated from Agnes Scott in 1956. Jo's granddaughters, Julie Custer Altman and Anna Cheshire Levitan, graduated from Agnes Scott in 1984 and 1986, respectively. Jo became a great-grandmother on Oct. 11, 1994, to Lee Merritt Levitan, daughter of Anna, and again on Nov. 2, 1994, to Julian Phillips Cheshire, son of Layla and Webb Cheshire.

Four of the class of 1930 gathered on campus for their 65th class reunion on the weekend of April 28. Bee Miller Rigby of Kingsport, Tenn., the outgoing president; Shannon Preston Cumming of Decatur, the incoming president; Ruth Bradford Crayton of Atlanta; and Jo Smith Webb of Donaldsonville were present. They met together for a luncheon meeting in Rebekah Scott Hall in what used to be the student dining room. Photographs of children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren were shared. Shannon brought two Silhouettes and some photographs which recalled old days at college.

Also at the meeting, a letter from Martha Stackhouse Grafton of Harrisburg, Va. was read. She and her husband live in a retirement center there where they enjoy the sunrise and sunset in scenic Shenandoah Valley.

Mildred Hutcheson Rouse relayed her discovery that she and Martha Stackhouse Grafton's husband were in the same high school class in Shanghai.

The 60th class reunion at Agnes Scott was a great success for the dozen or so who attended. The weekend got off to a good start on Friday, when Nina Parke Hopkins was hostess at an elegant luncheon at the Ritz-Carlton. Personalized menus, individual rose bouquets and the joy of seeing friends again after five years made this a memorable occasion. The events on campus were interesting, well-planned and very informative. After the annual meeting, 13 members of the class of 1935 recessed proudly with the needlepoint banner made by Betty Lou Houck Smith.

At the class meeting in the Alumnae House, Betty Lou was elected class president. Her latest adventure was being on the ill-fated Christmas cruise of the QE2. She suffered none of the discomforts, however, and received a full refund of her fare. She plans to spend two weeks this summer at Kay Weydon, her 35th trip there.

Katherine Hertzka reported a wonderful trip through the Panama Canal. Her sister Ruth

AGNES SCOTT WINS BRONZE MEDAL IN NATIONAL COMPETITION

The Council for the Advancement and Support of Education, a national organization for educational institutional advancement professionals, awarded Agnes Scott College a bronze medal in the Institutional Relations Special Events category for its Historic District Celebration held on campus Oct. 9, 1994.

The party, which was open to the campus community and the College's neighbors on South Candler Street, featured students in period costumes, old-fashioned entertainment and refreshments, collector's edition commemorative Coca-Cola bottles, an archival photograph display and recognition by the city of Decatur.

The South Candler Street-Agnes Scott College Historic District was placed in the National Register of Historic Places in July 1994, the first such district to be designated in Decatur.

Carolyn Wynens, former manager of community relations and special events, and the South Candler Street Neighbors Association were recognized for their efforts in orchestrating the event which was chosen from among 70 entrants. Two gold, two silver and two bronze awards were conferred in the competition.

accompanied her on 15 days of great scenery and adventures. They plan to go to Costa Rica next, and to an Elderhostel.

Mary T. Adams has "two new knees" thanks to replacement surgery. She is getting along fine, except on stairs. She had a delightful cruise to Norway last fall.

Eva Poliakov Goodman visited ASC from San Francisco. She had come back east to observe the 95th anniversary of her father's store in Abbeville, S.C.

Vella Behm Cowan is off soon for two weeks in Italy. She is simultaneously planning the trip, selling her house and buying a condo.

Sybil Rogers Herren had cancer surgery in 1993, but is doing well. She has two sons and four grandchildren, and was glad to attend the reunion.

Fidesah Edwards Alexander recently visited Mary Lillian Deason, who suffers severely from arthritis. They enjoyed a visit to the Festival of Lights at Calloway Gardens.

At the time of the reunion, Mary Virginia Allen was on the high seas. She and a cousin sailed on the QE2, for several days in England and the rest of a month in France.

Rosalyn Crispin Robinson retired as director of the Shepherd's Center in Harlingen, Texas, and has moved to Kerrville, where her younger son lives. Rosalyn plans to continue her informational assistance to macular patients in Kerrville. She is planning a trip to Egypt in September.

Others who attended the reunion were Anne Scott Harmon Mauldin, Grace Robinson Hanson and Marie Simpson Topple.

Betty Fountain Edwards Gray was gracious hostess and chauffeur to Marian Calhoun Murray and Anna Humber Little. They enjoyed events on campus and off, and on Sunday ended the weekend by attending beautiful services at All Saints Episcopal Church.

In March, Betty's daughter Margaret came down from Vermont and took her to Epcot in Disney World in Orlando for Betty's birthday. In April, Betty's younger daughter, Alice, came over from Houston and celebrated Stephen's birthday at Canterbury Court.

Marian is anticipating a very special trip with a friend, riding the famous train through Copper Canyon in Mexico. Then she intends to spend the summer on Edisto Island, swimming.

The retiring class president, Elizabeth Heaton Mullino, was unable to attend the reunion because of scheduled surgery on her leg. She is in good health, but finds it is difficult to get about with both legs impaired. She sent greetings to the class and regretted that she was absent.

Outgoing secretary Anna Humber Little thanks everyone who has sent in news, and wishes health and happiness for all the members of the class of 1935.

The alumnae office received the news that Esther Henderson Handrahan and her husband recently celebrated their 58th anniversary. Her 82-year-old golfer husband lays claim to a hole-in-one.

Mary Squires has three great-grandsons.

After a month in Italy and three weeks in France, much-traveled Rebecca Cashion Hunzicker and her husband returned to their home of 57 years in Oklahoma City to find grief-stricken friends and neighbors after the bombing on April 19. Fortunately, none of their four children or 26 grandchildren and great grandchildren were in or near the bombed Murrah Federal Building. But they were among those who responded to the acute needs and were impressed with not only the help of locals and other Americans, but also with the concern of people outside the country. Rebecca received many phone calls from India, England and elsewhere.

Gretchen Kleybecker Chandler has moved into a retirement facility following the death of her husband.

Shirley Christian Ledgerwood and John recently took a trip to Tennessee; Shirley to Chattanooga for a reunion of Girls Preparatory School and John to the 200th anniversary of his alma mater, University of Tennessee. Shirley signed copies of her Unlocked Dreams, a collection of poems by Sarah Catherine Wood Marshall LeSourd, as well as Shirley's biography of "Scat." An article in a Palo Alto newspaper reported that since Shirley's Phi Beta Kappa days at ASC, Shirley has had 53 years of marriage, 25 years of teaching English at Foothill, and 50 years of friendship with Sarah Catherine Wood Marshall LeSourd.

Ruby Hutton Barron went to England and Scotland in June with her daughter Lucie Barron Eggleston '68. Her other daughter, Sarah Hutton Barron LaBadie '72, is an Atlanta attorney. Lucie is president of her business, Letter Perfect, in Columbia, S.C. One of Ruby's sons is a minister and the other teaches English at the University of Alabama. Ruby, along with other members of the class, spends time at Montreat, N.C., each year.

In late spring Helen Handt Morse watched her husband Rear Adm. John T. Morse deliver diplomas to the graduating class of the U.S. Coast Guard Academy, of which their grandson, Peter Mather, was a member. Jack and Helen also saw Peter's sister receive her law degree from Duke University.

Kelly will join a law firm in Los Angeles.

Frances James Donohue is glad her son Daniel, his wife, Carol, and their sons live near by and all the more since her housemate of 10 years died in March. Frances attended her friend's funeral in Ohio and since has had several of the friend's relatives as her house guests.

Mildred Clark Sargent enjoyed walking with Rebecca Whitley Nunan and Carlton in the glorious woods surrounding their home during a recent visit. Mildred was impressed with Rebecca's book for children, The New Little Witch. It is delightfully illustrated by her granddaughter, Robin. All the Nunans were present at Robin's marriage in Helen, Ga., to a Spanish national and physicist. Older son, Alec, owns and operates A Book Nook near Emory. Carlton has recovered from a serious injury in January, but Rebecca notes that it was the first New Year's Eve she did not spend with Carlton in 60 years. They celebrated their 58th wedding anniversary in May.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Rosa From Poliakov celebrated the 95th anniversary of D. Poliakov Department Store with townspeople, family and guests in Abbeville, S.C. Since its founding by David Poliakov, father of Rosa's late husband, Myer, the store has been operated by only two generations. Rosa took over its operation in 1985. About 250 people gathered in the plaza of the Belmont Hotel on April 30, to mark the occasion. Many of them wore green buttons proclaiming "I worked at Poliakov's." Some of the buttons were worn by mothers and their daughters, including Rosa's daughter, Doris Poliakov Feinsilber '63. Among the celebrants was Eva Poliakov Goodman '35, Rosa's roommate at Agnes Scott, who traveled from San Francisco for the happy event. The South Carolina Jewish Historical Society chose the occasion to hold its annual meeting in Abbeville.

Nell Allison Sheldon spent Christmas 1994 with her daughter Allison and family. Nell reports that her parents were Presbyterian missionaries in China at the same time that George Thompson Brown's parents were. George is the father of ASC President Mary Brown Bullock. Nell's biggest thrill was hearing the bell in Main Tower ring out to announce Mary's appointment.

Lib Blackshear Flinn spent Christmas at home with her children, grandchildren, cousins and "a few other stray souls." Lib's Elderhostel experiences have been wonderful, the latest one in Savannah at Armstrong College.

Elizabeth Cousins Mozley celebrated Christmas 1994 at home with all three children and most grandchildren. They also celebrated Sam's 80th birthday and their 53rd wedding anniversary.

Guidelines For Submitting Class News

The Class News deadlines are as follows: Jan. 5 for the April edition, May 5 for the August edition, Aug. 5 for the December edition.

Please send your Class News, notices of births and of deaths to the alumnae office. The alumnae office will send you a postcard acknowledging receipt of your information.

Please include the alumna's maiden (birth) name and class. Please verify spellings. All news needs to be typed or written clearly. If you or your classmate has an unusual spelling of a name, please call that to our attention.

In sending a birth announcement, please include the husband's name, even if the alumna does not use it in her mailing address. Also include the baby's name and birthday.

Please report weddings and other planned events only after the fact.

Agnes Scott has nearly 10,000 living alumnae. We want to keep in touch with all of you and keep you in touch with each other. Except for budget restraints limiting the number of pages, CLASS NEWS is printed with only minor editing, so be selective. Let us hear from you regularly.

To the anonymous donor from our class, I want to say many thanks for adding this spot of beauty to the beautiful spring campus at Agnes Scott."

In May, Martha Ray Lasseter Storey and Wallace planned a three-week trip to Europe, an experience they were looking forward to with much excitement.

Clare Bedinger Baldwin and Walter remember the wonderful golden wedding anniversary/family reunion given by their children in August 1994.

Mary Louise Duffee Philips and Frank were given a 50th wedding anniversary party last June by their four children. Mary Louise and Carolyn Fuller Hill Nelson '45 along with their husbands plan a week's visit together.

Aurie Montgomery Miller reports that she, Ruth Farris and Betty "Smiley" Williams Stoffel get together in Charlotte, N.C., from time to time. Aurie has also recently seen Elizabeth Edwards Wilson and Mercer, who have three children who are medical doctors.

Julia Harvard Warnock and Bob had a wonderful trip to San Antonio for Bob's reunion with his World War II squadron. The trip included a day trip to the Texas hill country to see the beautiful wild flowers. In March, the Warnocks visited their daughter and two grandchildren in Florida where they saw the "Treasures of the Tsars" exhibit.

Polly Cook Crowley and Bill recently had Patty Barbour Liipfert, Mary Louise Duffee and Frank Philips, and Joe and Katie Arnall Hollis as guests at their farm in Madras, Ga.

In March, Ruth Farris visited Ann "Pat" Patterson Hammer '59 in Phoenix, Ariz., where they had a delightful lunch and visit with Mary Scott "Scottie" Wilds Hill '41 and Joe. Ruth had a wonderful visit on this trip with her physical education teacher from Shanghai American School in China where Ruth had been a student. What a great reunion! They had not seen each other since 1940. On May 15, Ruth planned to begin a month long visit to China with her niece.

Quincy Mills Jones attended her 55th reunion at Marietta (Ga.) High School. Her summer plans include a cruise to Bermuda, a visit with her daughter (class of '75) in San Clemente, Calif., and a two-week trip to Italy and Greece.

Jane Edwards Hales reports that "life is great." Counting hers and Bill's, they have 10 children, 15 grandchildren, and two great grandchildren. Their time is spent in Virginia, Florida and Hawaii. Retirement keeps them busy traveling, visiting family, and golfing.

Nell Turner Spettel had congestive heart failure in February of 1995. She has now lost 20 pounds and reports that she likes to walk past a mirror.

Martha Rhodes Bennett has just finished her term as president of her local League of Women Voters. She is looking forward to spending time with her four children and their families as well as playing more tennis, and being more active in the Westchester, N.Y. chapter of the United Nations Association. In June, Martha is going on a trek to the Czech Republic with the American Rock Garden Society.

The alumnae office heard from Margaret Powell Flowers reports that she is very busy running a dress shop and keeping up with 14 grandchildren!

Margaret "Teddy" Bear Moore writes that she finished her book and is now waiting to see if it will be accepted by a publisher.

Mary Ann Courtenay Davidson accompanied Jack to Atlanta for his 50th reunion at Georgia Tech. She had a good visit with Margie Naab Bolen and a brief telephone chat with Eleanor Reynolds Verdery.

Edwina Bell Davis and Betty Glenn Stow '45 enjoyed an Elderhostel together on the Georgia coast. While attending they each won a free trip to another Elderhostel.

In May, Jean Fuller Hall had eye surgery which was so successful that for the first time since she was 13, she doesn't have to wear glasses, except for reading. One of two sets of her twin granddaughters turned 16 in May. It has been seven years since Buck had open heart surgery and he is active and well. They made a return trip to Alaska last year which they enjoyed as much as the first, taken several years ago.

Celetta "Lella" Powell Jones says that with seven grandchildren in Thomasville, she's constantly at soccer and baseball games. She and Harry spend lots of time in their new house in Montreat.

Marjorie Naab Bolen loves her volunteer work at the Atlanta Botanical Garden giving children guided tours.

Betty "Robin" Robinson Hilliard visited her son Fred in Decatur in the spring. She had a tour of the campus one day and visited with your secretary. She attended a luncheon meeting of the Decatur Business Association in the old dining room in Rebekah. In honor of her upcoming 50th reunion and the fact that Fred is this year's association president, she was presented with roses. "I cried," she wrote. She enjoyed seeing Kay Wright Philips '43 and Gene Slack Morse '41 while in town.

Jean Stewart Staton, though officially retired from her medicine practice, remains busy. She is on both the national and Georgia boards of the Arthritis Foundation. She is a trustee of Wesley Homes and the Physicians' Alliance for Community Service. She is working as a volunteer with "Georgia Striders," a group which encourages older people to walk more. She ran into Maud Van Dyke Jennings, who was at the Atlanta airport on her way home from Maine.

Class mini-reunions have been particularly popular this year, most recently in Black Mountain, N.C. One of those attending was Ruth Ellis Hunley, whose last note to your secretary mentioned her pleasure seeing old friends at Black Mountain, and the class she was teaching in Advanced Placement English at Morse High School in Charlotte.

Ann Stine Hughes and John celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary recently in Waukegan, Ill. John is a retired judge, and he and Ann have both served their First Presbyterian Church as officers and vocal soloists. This was the interest that originally drew them together in Sanford, Fla., when John was just home from a South Pacific tour as a Navy carrier fighter pilot.

Also bringing back the war years was the recent marriage of Anne Scott Farrar and her Georgia Tech V-12 beau, Frank Willett. Both had recently lost spouses, and after meeting again in Thomasville at the home of Sissy Jeffries Williams, Anne and Frank were married in Atlanta, with a reception at the Piedmont Driving Club. Betty Andrews Lee and Lawrence, Sweetie Calley Cross and George, Anne Eidson Owen and Bill, Sissy Jeffries Williams and Frank, and Beth Walton Calloway and Bo all attended the wedding. Anne and Frank are living in Chattanooga.

Your secretary asks that you note the change of her address. She is moving back to her home area and she and Laura Winchester Hawkins will be neighbors.

The alumnae office learned recently that Peggy Pat Horne Martin's grandson, Johnathon Tate Martin, was born on Sept. 9, 1994, to Dr. and Mrs. Johnathon Edward Martin.

Julia Weathers Wynne retired this June after teaching for 22 years in DeKalb County, Ga., schools. She looks forward to travel with husband Don, visiting family and continuing volunteer work with the Atlanta Symphony.

Nancy Park Donnan was busy painting and repairing her boat "Second Love" prior to a May sailing departure.

Julianne Cook Ashmead loves participating in a tutoring program at Tate Elementary School (near her home in Big Canoe, Ga.) working with two second-grade boys. Last year Julianne joined a tour group that traveled to Greece and Turkey, following the journeys of Paul.

Virginia Vining Skelton and husband Jim, with their first grandson and his parents, visited Mexico in March. When she's home, "Gin" studies French at Oglethorpe and does volunteer work.

Jane Efurd Watkins and husband Charles traveled in Canada, New England, and the mid-Atlantic states in 1994, viewing presidential libraries of "FDR in Hyde Park and JFK in Boston."

Dorothy Quillian Reeves and Harrison visited Israel in December and are planning a tour to the western United States with two grandchildren in the summer.

Nancy Dendy Ryle and Dallas also went to Israel this past January with their Methodist minister daughter Patty.

Ivy Morris Dougherty is making plans for a trip to England to see an ancestral home. Her oldest grandchild enters Emory University in September.

In April, 10 members of the class of 1949 held a mini-reunion at Wintergreen, Va., on the Blue Ridge Parkway. They had a wonderful weekend, hiking, reminiscing, showing pictures of grandchildren, looking at old yearbooks and scrapbooks which Mary Price Coulling had brought along, singing "God of the Marching Centuries" and "Come Thou Fount" and talking. Eleanor Bear Wallace announced that she and husband Cam will be moving to Westminster-Canterbury in Richmond in 1996 and Lee Cousar Tubbs told the group that she and husband Jim will spend the next full year at their summer place in Newland, N.C. Georgia Powell Lemmon spoke of her work compiling 100 letters written by her father to her mother during World War I, and Edith Stowe Barkley told of the recent trip she and Brock took to Australia and New Zealand.

Ann Faucette Niblock amazed the group with her ability to entertain large groups at her "tree farm" in Maryland. Alice Crenshaw Moore reminisced about years of library work in Bristol, and Evelyn Foster Henderson shared color photographs of her exquisite portraits of her granddaughters. Doris Sullivan Tippens served as wildflower expert (along with Edie) on the hikes. Kate Durr Elmore (flying up from Alabama for the mini-reunion) regaled the group with stories of her 61 trips to Switzerland, including rope-climbing expeditions up and down the Matterhorn and Mount Blanc. Unfortunately, Marie Cuthbertson Faulkner and Patty Persohn were unable to attend.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Katherine Loemker Kokomoor and husband Don savor their retirement years, dividing their time between a residence in Palm Harbor, Fla., and a summer home in Moretown, Vt. They spent the month of May traveling in Greece, Turkey, Bulgaria, Romania and Hungary. Katherine has many wonderful memories of Agnes Scott 44 years later.

Also traveling for a month in late spring were Dorothy Adams Knight and John. They flew to Bangkok, where they boarded a cruise ship to take them to many places in the east: Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, India, Egypt, Israel and Greece.

Betty Ziegler Dunn and Clyde are enjoying their new permanent home in Raleigh, N.C., where they welcomed children and grandchildren over the holidays in 1994.

Marjorie Orr Brantley is planning a move in 1995 from Marietta, Ga. to Phoenix, Ariz. Marjorie has been a real estate broker for 28 years. Her daughter Ashley lives in Phoenix, and Marjorie plans to develop there a national real estate marketing business, with the aid of her son-in-law's computer skills.

Freddie Hachtel Daum's husband Larry is now retired from his civilian job as a physicist with the U.S. Army. Freddie, however, continues to enjoy her two jobs too much to think of retirement. She works in the Gwinnett County (Ga.) School System designing and building special equipment for handicapped children. She is also an information specialist for the Norcross, Ga., public library. Her son Fred is working full time and finishing his education at Georgia State University in Atlanta. Daughter Marie graduated Phi Beta Kappa a few years ago from the University of Georgia, and then spent a year at the University of Kiel in Germany on full scholarship, after which Freddie joined Marie for a trip through Germany and Scandinavia. This was Freddie's sixth trip to Europe. Marie later earned a degree in commercial photography, and won a national honor in this field, which is now her area of work.

Betty McClain Ivy's husband Kelley is doing well healthwise. Their daughter and seven-year-old grandson will be living close to them in Norcross, Ga., when their daughter's new home is completed. In May the Ivys enjoyed a trip to Nashville and Memphis, Tenn., seeing the Imperial Tombs of China exhibits at a museum in Memphis and watching the ducks at the Peabody Hotel, where they stayed.

Your secretary enjoyed a springtime visit in LaGrange, Ga., with Amy Jones McGreevy and Ken, whose retirement home there is lovely. They toured nearby Callaway Gardens, where Amy and Ken do volunteer work each month. They showed pictures of grandchildren, and Gail showed some of her twin granddaughters who were born in February.

ONE OF THREE WINNERS IN 1995 POETRY CONTEST

Harriet Stovall Kelley '55 of Dallas, is one of three winners of The Chattahoochee Review's 1995 Poetry Contest for her poem "Cradle Stones," which was inspired by childhood visits to the Stovall home place in Lavonia, Ga.

Kelley, a native of Atlanta who received a degree in art from Agnes Scott, is a two-time recipient of the grand prize for poetry of the National Federation of State Poetry Societies in 1995 and 1992, and is a member of the Poetry Society of Texas, from which she has received a number of awards. Alumnae of Agnes Scott have seen her works in several College publications; the latest, "The Secret of the True Shamrock," appeared in the February edition of Main Events.

A charter member of the Georgia State Poetry Society, Kelley says she is often asked if she would return to her home state.

"When I'm asked if I want to move back," says the writer, "I realize that missing is more of a motivation sometimes, and a muse, than actual presence. Some of us can relate only to what is within the range of our immediate five senses.

Those are the people who greet me gladly when I'm back. But it is that sixth sense, memory and imagination, in which we most truly live; and those who know this are the ones I hear from, far away, and keep me going."

In recent years, Kelley worked with Peachtree Publishers' Helen Elliott on a Civil War book and numerous other projects. Her latest publication is a joint venture, in which she collaborated with two other Agnes Scott alumnae to edit and publish a memorial collection of poetry, The Butterfly Hotline, by fellow classmate Georgia Christopher, a former professor at Emory University and Milton scholar, who died Dec. 16, 1994.

Harriet Stovall Kelly '55

Your secretary, Mary Wayne Bywater, is proud to announce the arrival of her first grandchild, at last, on May 11. He's a beautiful baby boy, the son of Lisa and Bill Bywater, who live in Orlando, only a mile away from the lucky grandparents.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Theresa Kindred Brown's daughter Amy was married on New Year's Eve, 1994. Amy and her husband had been working together in the travel business for the last five-and-a-half years.

Theresa's second daughter Jennifer lives in Germany and has managed the Braunschweig Ballet Company for the last two years.

Ellen Hines Smith received the $10,000 Kutak Dodds Prize in Washington, D.C., May 1, from the National Legal Aid Defender Association.

Several alumnae gathered at Lelia Jones Graham's in February and later forwarded a wealth of news. (There was an unverified report that no one could leave Lelia's home without making a contribution for the class news.) Al lurked in the background, waiting for cookies.

Betty Ann Gatewood Wylie visited Nancy Duvall Hargrove to tell stories to Nancy's Mississippi State University honor students. In July, Betty Ann presented a workshop at the National Storytelling Conference in Atlanta.

Susan Winbigler Ware worked in the office of a Fulton County public school of which the 900-member student body comes from 36 countries, and 10 percent speak English as a second language. Son John is married, lives in New Jersey, and works for Scientific Atlantic. Son David and his wife, both architects, work with John. Daughter Anna is a student at Clemson University and is spending a semester at King's College in London.

Susie Favor Williamson and Bob keep busy with their four grandchildren, church work and cave diving. Bob is a cave diving instructor in his spare time.

Pat O'Brian Almy and Jim enjoy traveling and playing golf. Pat thoroughly enjoyed Dr. Sims' winter seminar at Agnes Scott, together with Valerie McLanahan Goetz, Anne Miller Boyd and Janie Fincher Peterson. Youngest daughter Scottie graduated from high school in May.

Leland Draper now manages her own business. Her latest project involves visiting youth detention centers to interview faculty and determine how Georgia cities and schools can help them.

Page McGavock Kampmeier is a computer programmer. She and Bill took a few days off for a skiing trip to Utah. Their youngest daughter is in graduate school at Tulane University studying international public health and parasitology.

Cantey Bryan Mills and John visited Savannah for a few days, a combination of business and pleasure. Their son John was married last spring.

Valerie McLanahan Goetz and Charlie are constantly on the go, to Nantucket and elsewhere. They managed to squeeze in a brief trip to Fredericksburg over Easter to visit your secretary, Cornelia Bryant.

The alumnae office received word that Jane Gilbertson McGuffin incorporated her business last year.

Martha Wornom Rippe and Peter spent two weeks at Easter in Poland with the Fulbright Exchange Teacher who just spent a year with them. They also had three days in Berlin, where they found "Rippe roots" in East Berlin. Maria saw Eleanor Lee and Mary Lou Laird at their 35th high school reunion in Richmond in the end of April.

Mary Lou Laird's Adventures in Mission program took her to Russia May 8-17 to plan a Vacation Bible School for July and a theological education project that will send U.S. pastors and teachers to teach short, intensive seminary courses to Russian clergy. She'll also be looking for future opportunities for short-term missions.

Sue Keith-Lucas Carson reports that their commuter lifestyle is working fine. George is a federal administrative law judge in Charleston, W. Va., and gets home to Winston-Salem most weekends. Oldest daughter Betsy is teaching at an Episcopal prep school in San Antonio. Elinor is a first year student at Wellesley, doing well academically and enjoying the swim team, but she has found the Yankee image of Southerners rather disconcerting and somewhat humorous. ("Yes, we do have indoor plumbing and so do most of our friends!") Jill is a seventh-grader, plays the flute, and earned a Royal School of Church Music Red Ribbon for her work in the church choir. The current family project is making a teenagers' room in the basement. When the two older girls were home for Christmas, Betsy painted the floor dark blue with teal, orange, violet and cream spots.

Dale Davenport Fowler and Phil are becoming what Florida residents call "snowbirds," spending as much of the winter as is possible at their condo in Marco Island, though Atlanta is still home, too. Lauren and Clay are both at Georgia State, Lauren working toward a degree in interior design, and Clay in a joint MBA/MHA (health care) degree program. Dale is an enthusiastic and successful distributor of a line of nutritional products that she finds has given her dramatic relief from her rheumatoid arthritis.

Peggy Barton Driggs suggests that as an "effort to turn the tide of the post-Christian era," we should start dating all correspondence with the saint's day and the year.

Mary Womack Cox and John spent Mother's Day weekend in New York with daughter Gillian, who is overworked, under-appreciated, and living in an apartment with no furniture, but nevertheless eager to show her parents her city.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Nina Jagers retired from Cobb County Public Schools, June 13, after being named Teacher of the Year.

Jeanne Whitaker Clabough and her husband have joined the faculty at a private school in Farmville, Va., which Atlanta's Fortune 500 financier J.B. Fuqua bought last year and endowed with $10 million. Charged by Fuqua with making this the best secondary school in rural America, Jeanne as head of the science department is rewriting the science curriculum and Howard is the athletic director.

Ann Howard Sheild Bishop's son Whit married Alison Ray, the daughter of Lila McGeachy Ray '59 in late April. Whit and Elizabeth Perusse, the daughter of Florence Willey Perusse, became good friends while students together at Presbyterian College.

A great time was had by all at the 20th reunion on the weekend of April 29, reminiscing about the "Pizza by Candlelight" days. A day on campus was followed by a lovely Italian dinner at the home of Ruthie McManus Mansfield in Atlanta. The reunion committee chaired by Ruthie and composed of Allison Grigsby Spears, Angie Rushing Hoyt, Shelby Cave Cobb, Charlotte Gillis, M.A. Bleker, Kay Teien Blackstock, and Fran Maguire Paist worked hard to pull the party and class directory together.

Louise Dawsey Caldwell moved to Charleston, S.C., in June, after having spent 13 years in Atlanta. Her 11-year-old daughter and 9-year-old son were excited about the move. Louise has been teaching kindergarten in Gwinnett County for four years and plans to pursue that endeavor in Charleston after getting acclimated.

Catherine Pugh Cuneo lives in Greenville, S.C., and has two teenage children. She works as a paralegal and says she has "nothing much to complain about, having survived the 40's mid-life crisis."

Karren Tilley Richardson, married for 15 years, has lived in Atlanta for nine years and has two boys, aged 6 and 10. She teaches high school math and is active in aerobics and tennis and is very involved with her boys.

Nancy White Morris has twin teenage sons and is teaching the first grade.

Vail Macbeth is a new homeowner, having purchased a house near Emory University. She has her own training and consulting business.

Allyn Fine Crosby came to the reunion with Becky Thompson, Rose Ann Grover Cleveland Fraistat and Robbie Goodall Boman. They stayed with Becky's parents on the way down to Atlanta. Allyn has recently separated and is busy adjusting to a single lifestyle. She will graduate in May with a horticulture degree and is looking forward to full-time landscape design. Robbie Boman is teaching two sections of remedial English and one section of journalism at a small Baptist school, North Greenville College. She says she loves the students and the dynamism of this small, rapidly growing school.

Beth Wickenberg Ely is a vicar at two churches in the Charlotte area.

Joyce McKee McDonald is a part-time prosecutor/attorney and the mother of three girls.

India Culpepper is learning to survive the cold winters in Pennsylvania.

Linda Woodward Jacobson and Sarah Brooke Coleman tied for having traveled the furthest distance for the reunion: Linda from Tanzania in East Africa and Sarah from England.

Carolyn Webb Thomas, Knight Webb Upchurch, and Beth McFadden Rouse all traveled together to Atlanta for the reunion. They enjoyed catching up with Susan Gamble Smathers, Allison Grigsby Spears, Fran Maguire Paist, Mary Jones Underwood and others.

Nancy Oliver LeSourd is an author and attorney, very involved in her family's interests in the Catherine Marshall properties, such as the television program Christy.

Mindy Rapp Stuk and Della McMillan were also at the reunion party and thrilled to "pass the typewriter" to new secretaries, Fran Paist and Lou Anne Cassels. Lou Anne is living in Decatur and works for the DuPont Company. In December 1994, she completed an M.S. in human resource development at Georgia State University. Della McMillan just published a new book, Sahel Visions, that describes her longitudinal impact of planned settlement and river blindness control in Burkina Faso.

The alumnae office received the following information:

Your secretary had the pleasure of hosting Catherine Mclauchlin Hylands during a trip to Florida. Catherine lives in Horrogatwe, England. She and Bernard have two boys. Catherine is working for an accountant firm while she completes the very lengthy and vigorous requirements to obtain her English accounting title. Catherine's trip took her through Alabama, then over to Augusta, Ga., where she visited Sarah Arthur Spears before going to her homeland of North Carolina where her parents live.

Catherine also visited Judy Bohan Miller who recently moved to Asheville, N.C. Judy is a bookkeeper. Her husband Michael is a banker and they enjoy their two boys.

Marty Lovvorn Moore works as a free-lance floor covering designer. Some of her mat patterns will appear in Wal-Mart this Christmas. Marty enjoys playing in a handbell choir which is apparently quite accomplished as they have played with the Cobb Symphony at the Biltmore House. The choir is planning a performing tour of European cathedrals for 1996. In her spare time, Marty is the vice president of the PTA.

Susan Barker Johnson is enjoying her 10th year in Valdosta with her husband David and 12-year-old daughter, Emily. Susan is a counselor and consultant, with both a private practice and work at the Valdosta State University. She has done national and international consulting, assisting schools with creating student assistance programs.

Betsy Fletcher and husband Wendell love living in Boulder, Colo. They have been skiing in British Columbia and Finnish Lapland, sailing in the Caribbean, and railroading through Russia, but she is the same old Betsy as she sends her daughter to camp in North Carolina and still signs her name with a flower.

Lynne Oswald and a friend took a nice trip in May, which started at the Columbia Theological Seminary commencement, where they watched Lynne's best friend from high school graduate. While in Atlanta, they had wonderful lunch at the home of Ann Turner Kimsey '76, along with Sarah Arthur Spears, who was recovering from a whirlwind of shopping. From Atlanta, they traveled to Lynne's family mountain cabin in Balsam, N.C., where they thought many times about calling Judy Miller Bohan and Grace Allen, but never had time. They ambled down from the mountains to Augusta to visit Sarah Spears' new home, then across Georgia to spend the last night in a restored plantation inn.

Lynne is the supervising attorney of a team of felony prosecutors in Orlando. Her work is demanding, interesting and fulfilling.

Seven members of the class of 1979 had a mini-reunion in Atlanta in March celebrating the May 1994 marriage of Linda McInnis to Dean Miller. Linda and Dean live in Pueblo, Colo., where Linda works in the regional sales department for QualMed, a large western Health Maintenance Organization. Toasting the newlyweds were Melanie Best, Sandy Fowler, Eleanor Graham, Virginia Rockwell, Elizabeth Wells Lang with baby Andrew, and Ginny Lee McMurray, with Margaret and Michael in tow. The night ended in Fayetteville, Ga., with dinner at The Village Cafe with owners Susi Gomez Boutier and Patrick. The next day Virginia Rockwell hosted a "packing party" getting some help with her recent move to Charlottesville, Va.

Look for news in the "Births" section from Kay Kirkland Hellwig, Angela Carter Sprunger, Nancy Rogers, and Melanie Meadows Jordan. Melanie writes that her best babysitter is Crystal, her Llasa Apso, who barks when baby C.J. cries. Kay and Angela both have their hands full, as both gave birth to twins this time around. Kay and David are joined by son

Dane, 6, in welcoming Rachel and Hunter. Angela and her husband Mark are working as missionaries for the Mennonite Central Committee in Burkina Faso, West Africa. In addition to now year-old twins David and Daniel, their family includes Jason, 6, and Benjamin, 4. David and Daniel were born in the United States, and Angela enjoyed visiting with Ginnie Risher Wilcox while she was in the states.

Lynden Cooper-Harris lives in the country near Chapel Hill, N.C., where her family includes dogs, cats, sheep, goats and rabbits. Lynden's husband Chuck runs Polymer Reclaim and Exchange, an industrial reclamation company. Erin, 11, and Noah, 10, attend the Emerson Waldorf School in Chapel Hill, and the family is active in the Waldorf School movement.

Tish DuPont Easterlin lives in Louisville, Ga. Her family spent the summer of 1994 renovating another 100-year-old home, moving in August.

Emily Sheffield Hollingsworth is busy in Roswell, Ga., with son Clayton, 6, and daughter Katherine, 3. The Hollingsworths spent a weekend in October with Liz Jenkins Thompson and her family at their home on the beach on Sullivan's Island, S.C. Emily and her family also traveled to Buenos Aires, Argentina, for two weeks in March.

Catherine Crook Hagood also had an exotic vacation in March. She won a trip to St. Thomas from Club Corporation of America as one of its top 25 catering directors. Catherine recently changed jobs, becoming Membership and Activities Director for the Thornblade Country Club in Greenville, S.C. Catherine's hobbies include gardening and making wedding cakes.

Peggy Pfeiffer Elder stays busy in Peachtree City, Ga., with Lauren, 11, and Kelly, 7. She also serves as an elder at her church and volunteers at a local thrift shop benefiting battered women and abused children. Peggy's husband Bill works with TransQuest designing a new reservation system for use by Delta Airlines. Thanks to Peggy for passing on a Christmas letter from Gyni Byrd Wood. Gyni and Mark are living in Macon, Ga. with Gary, 12, Bethany, 9, and Laura, 7. Gyni teaches nursery school at her church and volunteers at the church library and at the elementary school.

Ginny Lee McMurray is recovering from spring break—a family car trip to Madison, Wis., where Ginny attended a board meeting for the Bolz Center for Arts Administration at University of Wisconsin-Madison. A trip highlight was a visit to the Laura Ingalls Wilder Home and Museum in Mansfield, Mo. Kathleen, eight, and Margaret, five, are big fans of the "Little House" books.

The alumnae office received the following information: Catherine Paul Krell has opened an antique shop in downtown Decatur called Decatur Interiors Market, and occasionally sees Agnes Scott people.

Angela Fleming Rogers finds that her ASC education comes in handy as she nurtures two young boys every day and tries to encourage them to love learning.

Joy-Jun Faurot, who continues to run Ginet Inc. from her Charlotte home, sent an update to say that she is faring well after a year of "growth and discovery." She has regained 90 percent range of movement in her left elbow following surgery in September. Joy visited Marge Long Cianchetti and David Thompson in San Francisco this past year; then took trips to Maui with her mother and Paris with the Faurots. She spent Christmas in Norway with Raginhild Daasvand. Joy also enjoyed a mini Agnes Scott reunion with Marge Long Cianchetti, Allyson Stephens Rhymes, Ann Conner Harrell and Emily Hill Ross.

Teace Sanders ran into Marge Long Cianchetti in Birmingham, Ala., and discovered that the two live only about one mile from each other. Marge is a sales representative for Glaxo Pharmaceuticals.

Janet Musser-Granski and her husband Steve live in Riverdale, Ga., with their adopted daughters, who are sisters, Rachelle Ashley, 4, and Michaelee Nicole, 3. They thank God for this miracle and hope that one day they will have a little boy, too. Janet completed a graduate certificate in Biblical studies from Columbia Seminary in Columbia, S.C. and has also completed a master's in social work from the University of Georgia. For now, Janet wants to "stay home and enjoy being a mom."

Jim and Kathy Fulton Banta and their daughter Molly moved to Singapore in May and expect to be there for a few years. Jim applied for the Singapore stint with his company, GE Capital. Kathy said they were excited about experiencing a different culture, even though most people speak English. Kathy and Jim plan to take advantage of the extensive travel opportunities and will welcome all visitors.

Steve and Sonia Gordon Dettweiler send greetings from Nigeria. Their year-old son Joel is adjusting well to his new environment. In keeping with Nigerian culture, they had a naming ceremony for their new son, Micah John, but maintained the North American custom of naming the baby themselves. The Dettweilers will be relocating to the northwestern part of Nigeria. Sonia says they are making progress on the question of which language group to work with and ask that everyone remember them in their prayers.

Teace Markwalter Sanders's family was featured on a special outer wrap cover of the May issue of Southern Living. Her husband, Richard, and their two children, Caroline, 7, and Winn, 6, were modeling Olympic wear to promote the official Olympic wear catalog. They were also featured inside the catalog which was mailed in May.

SPECIAL EDITION
AGNES SCOTT COLLEGE
ANNUAL REPORT

President Mary Bullock on a Season of Change

I had forgotten the beauty of Agnes Scott's gardens and the tall, old trees which grace its grounds. They have been tended well in the nearly 30 years since I graduated.

Walking across the campus in idyllic autumn weather, it occurred to me that the task of leading a liberal arts college is not unlike that of tending a beautiful English garden. How do you know if the soil is rich enough? What do you do to improve it? Is your design appropriate to the site? Or, as a Chinese proverb puts it, shui-tu fu-bu-fu? Will you adapt to the soil and the water?

What makes a lively but harmonious garden, where each individual flower, plant or tree enhances the overall scene? How do you decide the proportion of hardy perennials, always re-seeding themselves, with more delicate annuals, which may change from year to year? Which colors and in what quantity? Is the effect most pleasing with the blues and purples together, or with splashes of red and orange in their midst?

What makes one garden's beauty remembered while others are forgotten? A sense of relationships, a discerning eye for the core and the periphery, and openness to creative bursts of innovation make a good gardener, a good liberal arts college, a good Board of Trustees and a good college president.

In January 1995, Agnes Scott's Board of Trustees announced my selection as the seventh president of Agnes Scott College. During the spring and summer, I was kept abreast of campus happenings by Interim President Sally Mahoney and Board Chair Joseph R. Gladden Jr. Although I remained in Washington, D.C., until August, I am honored to write the introduction to this year's Annual Report.

In this season of change, Agnes Scott College revised its academic curriculum, worked with an interim president, selected a new president, and enjoyed extraordinary community support. Agnes Scott's Board of Trustees provided the continuity and leadership necessary to guide the College through these major transitions in governance. As a result of effective leadership at all levels, the academic year 1994-1995 was one of significant accomplishment.

The spirit of the 1995 Agnes Scott Academic Review Report is found in the appreciation of intellectual relationships and the willingness to explore new juxtapositions of disciplines. "Connected Learning" is the distinctive theme.

Connected learning embraces programs such as Global Connections and the Atlanta Semester and pedagogies such as quantitative reasoning across the curriculum. All are linked to an eloquent new statement of values:

- ✓ a commitment to women,
- ✓ a commitment to teaching and learning,
- ✓ a commitment to the liberal arts,
- ✓ a commitment to an appreciation of diverse cultures and
- ✓ a commitment to a community that values justice, courage and integrity.

The Academic Review process included a faculty, staff and student committee, scores of public hearings, position papers, and a final review and vote by the full faculty. It resulted in the weeding out of 79 courses, the creation of 46 new courses for a net course reduction of 33. The number of majors dropped from 36 to 26, the departmental structure was pruned, four new interdepartmental "conferences" were created, and additional recommendations are under consideration.

As a result of the self-study Agnes Scott had undertaken in connection with the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, the faculty also approved two important new evaluation mechanisms—student evaluation of faculty and periodic (five-year) reviews for tenured faculty.

In addition to the academic changes, the college completed a parallel Administrative Review which examined the ways in which the College operates. It recommended and implemented numerous customer service improvements and cost-saving changes.

This transitional year was marked by the gracious leadership of Interim President Sally Mahoney. Bringing to the Agnes Scott community more than two decades of leadership experience at Stanford University, President Mahoney tended our college well during a year of sometimes difficult transition. She chose to "celebrate" Agnes Scott's successes, no matter how small or individual. "Don't hide your light under a bushel" was her refrain. She recognized the pursuit of excellence everywhere. She reached out to Decatur and Atlanta. The new Decatur Campaign and the creation of the South Candler/Agnes Scott National Historic District were highlights of this effort. Future presidents will need to emulate President Mahoney by encouraging Agnes Scott's renewal as a community of civility, collegiality, intellectual vitality, warmth and good humor.

The success of Agnes Scott is dependent upon the annual generosity of its alumnae and many friends. Not just financially, but as a way in which we keep in touch with how we are meeting society's needs. Our yearly rating in U.S. News & World Report is based, in part, on the percentage of our alumnae givers. That percentage was 40 percent in 1994-1995, well below such schools as Hollins, Rhodes, Sweet Briar, Randolph Macon Women's, Converse and Davidson.

The legacy of giving has been strong here. Please help us next year by encouraging at least one alumna friend who rarely or never gives to make a contribution. Our goal is 45 percent—but wouldn't it be great if we could go over the 50 percent mark?

Taken as a whole, the seeds for a robust and distinctive curriculum, for a self-renewing faculty, and for an effective administration have been sown. In embracing these, I look forward to providing ongoing leadership which will make the liberal arts at Agnes Scott College more "connected"—more interdisciplinary, more local and more global, and more scientific. We now have the promise of vigorous hybrid growth. To think across the disciplines keeps us from becoming too narrow or pedantic, alerts us to questions of significance, and trains us for critical thinking in the new millennium. The real test for all these reforms will come in the immediate years ahead—in the implementation, the time-consuming cultivation.

Autumn has now become the Advent season. I am fortunate to be here as the seasons change, as we approach a new year. On behalf of myself and all fellow alumnae, I am grateful to those quiet but dedicated souls, within and without the institution, who nurtured Agnes Scott College during this long leadership transition.

—Mary Brown Bullock '66

Annual Giving Report, 1994-95

Alumnae giving to the Agnes Scott Annual Fund in 1994-95 totaled $656,820 (excluding one-time bequests), with participation at 40 percent, the highest percentage in this decade. Total alumnae giving to the Annual Fund, including $156,333 in one-time bequests, reached $813,153.

Corporations and foundations contributed a total of $217,211 to the Annual Fund.

The Annual Fund supports faculty salaries, student financial aid, academic programs, departmental budgets, facilities maintenance, student activities and all the programs and services that contribute to an outstanding educational experience. Alumnae contributed over 70 percent of the Annual Fund grand total of $1,176,118.

Agnes Scott is most appreciative of the tremendous response received from donors whose generosity ensures that funding needs are met.

■ Agnes Scott sophomore Stephanie Rothstein of St. Cloud, Fla., dies in car accident involving two other ASC students.

October 9, 1994

■ Agnes Scott and a portion of South Candler Street join in a neighborhood celebration after being named to the National Register of Historic Places. The area, known as the South Candler Street-Agnes Scott College Historic District, is the first designated in Decatur. The party later wins a national bronze award from the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education.

October 12, 1994

■ The Office of Development moves to 342 S. McDonough Street to make room for Information Technology Enhancement Program projects in Buttrick Hall. This is the first office to expand into a former residence owned by the College.

October 17, 1994

■ BellSouth Foundation awards ASC a grant for faculty technology development and training in the amount of $50,000.

November 1994

■ The Women's College Coalition is awarded a multimillion dollar grant to produce public service announcements encouraging a supportive environment for girls. The ads are to begin in one year.

■ Agnes Scott establishes a policy to hold weddings on campus, in Thatcher Chapel in the Alston Campus Center.

November 3, 1994

■ Australian visiting artists Simi and David Roche participate in the private inaugural dance performance in the new, state-of-the-art Martha Wilson Kessler Dance Studio.

November 12, 1994

■ Agnes Scott hosts the fifth "Progressions" seminar, sponsored by women's colleges for their alumnae in the Atlanta area and focusing on health-care issues for women. More than 40 women attend.

November 30, 1995

■ The College celebrates Bertie Bond Day, recognizing her 34 years of service to the College. Mary Alverta "Bertie" Bond '53 served as secretary to the board and assistant to the president. She is later honored with emerita status in both positions.

December 12, 1994

■ President Emeritus Marvin Banks Perry Jr. dies of cancer in Charlottesville, Va. Perry retired in 1982 after serving ASC for nine years. He is memorialized on Founder's Day, Feb. 22, 1995.

December 30, 1994

■ The market value of the College endowment stands at $212 million.

January, 1995

■ Agnes Scott enters the information highway, launching its

<http://www.scottlan.edu>

January 11, 1995

■ The first ever Decatur Campaign, "Great City, Great College, Great Possibilities," kicks off. By campaign's end, the total raised is $28,821.

January 25, 1995

■ Mary Brown Bullock '66 is elected the seventh president of Agnes Scott. The announcement is made from the gazebo by Board of Trustees Chair Joseph Gladden Jr. and accompanied by joyous ringing of the bell from the tower of Main.

January 26, 1995

■ The Board of Trustees approves a program which provides an opportunity for employees to elect early retirement through an Employee Retirement Incentive Window Plan. Of 39 eligible employees, 15 enroll in the program.

April 1995

■ Katie Stromberg of Erwin, Tenn., is Agnes Scott's third consecutive Fulbright Scholar. She will study at the University of Halle, Germany, in fall 1995.

June 1995

■ The College bids farewell to the Presser Dogwood. For years its flowering branches brought beauty to Presser Quadrangle—but age and disease caused a decline in the tree's health. The dogwood is replaced by a Kousa dogwood planted on Arbor Day, February 17, 1995.

June 30, 1995

■ The market value of the College endowment stands at $251.6 million.

Alumnae Giving by Class

Alumnae who contributed to the College during the 1994-95 fiscal year are listed by giving club within each class year. Giving clubs at Agnes Scott are at the following levels:

- The President's Circle $10,000 and above
- The Founders' Club $5,000 to $9,999
- The Deans' List $2,500 to $4,999
- The Tower Circle $1,000 to $2,499
- The Colonnade Club $500 to $999
- The Gazebo Club $250 to $499
- The Century Club $100 to $249

The Consecutive Giving Program was begun in 1990-91, the first year of Agnes Scott's second century, to recognize donors who give consistently to the College. The numeral preceding each donor's name indicates the number of consecutive years that person has given since the program's inception.

Profiles in Giving

ROMOLA DAVIS HARDY

Hardy, class of 1920, began her career in education. But her success in a "sideline interest"—real estate and insurance underwriting—led to her becoming district manager of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company, stationed in Charlotte, N.C. She soon established herself as the leading woman producer in the nation, earning inclusion in the company's Leader's Club for top performers. Several times Hardy addressed the National Life Insurance Association's annual meeting, speaking on the subject of women in business. In Charlotte, she served as president of the ASC Alumnae Chapter, where there was a large membership. Over the years, Hardy set aside funds for a scholarship for students from her home county, Coweta, Georgia. After her death in 1988, the College was notified of a bequest which established three new funds: a one-time gift of $25,000 to fund the Romola Davis Hardy Classics Scholarship; $16,000 per year in perpetuity toward funding the Hardy Chair in the Classics, and an additional $74,000 each year designated for the College's general scholarship fund.

Reunion Giving

Four classes led special efforts in 1994-95 to support the College in honor of their reunions. The classes of 1960, 1970, and 1985 organized campaigns for increased support of the Annual Fund, and all three classes raised their total giving and percentage of participation significantly. The class of 1945, to celebrate its 50th reunion, established an endowed scholarship fund in honor of its lifetime class president Molly Milam Inserni.

Numbers below reflect Annual Fund totals, except for the class of 1945, which elected to designate its giving to endow the Molly Milam Inserni Scholarship Fund.

Class	RG Leaders	Total Gifts	% Participation
1945	Betty Glenn Stow Barbara Frink Allen	68%
1960	Elizabeth Lunz Mary Jane Pickens Skinner	$15,333	63%
1970	Kay Parkerson O'Briant	$11,197	36%
1985	Bradie Barr	$4,343	39%

SARAH GLENN BOYD

Boyd, class of 1928, committed herself to education early in life, graduating from the College at age 18 and returning to her home in Hickory, N.C., to teach school for five years. She earned a degree in library science from University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill and moved to Washington, D.C., where she worked for the library system, primarily in the children's department—she was “crazy about the work.” After marriage, she and her husband returned to North Carolina. In Lumberton, she volunteered with the North Carolina Symphony and Girl Scouts while rearing her three children. In 1984, Boyd anonymously established

SARAH GLENN
(from the 1928 Silhouette)

ASC's Carolinas Scholarship, providing financial assistance to full-time students in good academic standing from the Carolinas. Her sister, Susan Love Glenn, class of 1932, joined Boyd in endowing the fund which now totals $318,301. Always interested in the students' work, Boyd wanted them to have adequate financial assistance. Although she died in 1995, her commitment to education—and that of her sister—lives on through the Carolinas Scholarship Fund.

Profiles in Giving

VIRGINIA F. PRETTYMAN

Prettyman, class of 1934, focused her study of 18th-century English literature on poetry and the art of William Blake. After earning her degree, she completed a master of arts at University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill and returned to ASC to teach English for two years. Following doctoral studies at Yale in 1943, she became an instructor at Smith College, then moved on to become a professor of English at Wellesley College until her retirement in 1974. After her death in 1986, Agnes Scott received a generous estate gift of almost $200,000 designated for general support of the College. Almost 10 years later, in 1995, the College was again the beneficiary of Prettyman's estate planning, this time receiving the corpus of a charitable remainder trust established in 1976. The gift, totaling more than $100,000, was applied to the most pressing needs of the College, including the "Language Across the Curriculum" program, a fitting use for a gift from such a devoted scholar and teacher.

Profiles in Giving

REBECCA MacPHERSON WEAVER

During her short life, Weaver, class of 1975, was a woman on the move, transferring wherever her company—IBM—needed her, from Atlanta to Nashville, from Columbia, S.C., to Danbury, Conn. As she rose on the corporate ladder, Weaver remembered Agnes

Scott in her financial planning. By making ASC

the beneficiary of one of her annuities, she enhanced the future of those who would

come to appreciate her

generosity and her strong ties to the College: her mother, sisters, an aunt and a cousin are ASC alumnae. After her

of nearly $54,000 established the Rebecca M. Weaver

Scholarship, which will provide financial assistance for students who are majoring in mathematics or music.

Gellerstedt Has "Had a Vision for ASC's Future"

Ask any Agnes Scott administrator to recall those indelible moments of working with Lawrence L. "Larry" Gellerstedt Jr., and you'll likely hear about his brisk, early morning phone calls.

"Bertie ... Larry," is how Mary Alverta "Bertie" Bond '53, presidential assistant and secretary to the Board of Trustees, recalls the opener for many 8:30 a.m. conversations with Gellerstedt, long-time Board of Trustees member—including 10 years as chair—and staunch volunteer for numerous Agnes Scott College projects and fund-raisers.

It's as if he'd been working through complex problems, tossing around creative solutions, making lists of questions, and then waiting impatiently for the world around him to wake up and stumble through the day's first cup of coffee.

"He's very clear about what's important to him," notes Bonnie Brown Johnson '70, former vice president for development and public affairs, who has raised money with Gellerstedt at both Georgia Tech and Agnes Scott. She says that it's "hard to imagine anyone who has done more for any institution. He was willing to involve himself for the good of Agnes Scott at a substantial personal sacrifice."

For years, Gellerstedt, CEO of Beers Construction Company in Atlanta, has efficiently juggled a strong commitment to higher education, particularly for women, with his devotion to his family, his flourishing business and the city of Atlanta. He understands the value of philanthropy and has given generously of his money and time. "Civic rent" is how he describes the motivation behind his philanthropy, which has included leadership for the High Museum of Art, the United Way, Central Atlanta Progress, the Atlanta Botanical Garden and Agnes Scott.

Of course, his Agnes Scott roots run deep, with wife Mary Duckworth Gellerstedt '46, daughter Gayle '71, and father Lawrence Sr., all having served as Board members here. The Agnes Scott track and field complex bears his name.

Last month, the College honored him as a trustee emeritus on the very day he reached the age of 70, which is the mandatory age for that title. The emeritus status also requires a minimum of eight years of service—Gellerstedt has given nearly three times that, chairing the Board during campus construction and renovation in preparation for the Centennial Celebration. His influence has been felt on several ASC committees, including two presidential search committees.

"He pushed us to be better, appreciated our heritage and had a vision for the future," notes Bond. "And he raised money with a vengeance, as well as giving his own," leading a $3 million campaign to renovate Campbell Science Hall and a $35 million capital campaign.

ASC Board Vice Chair Anne Register Jones '46 used to marvel at Gellerstedt's accomplishments. But soon she was receiving those early morning phone calls. "After my first telephone conversation with him, I knew," she recalls. "He doesn't waste time talking. The 'good-bye' sometimes comes before you are ready."

Jones '79 Chairs Annual Fund

SETS GOAL OF 45 PERCENT ALUMNAE PARTICIPATION

spring, Jones admits to thinking that fund raising was not one of her strong suits. "But, through my experiences with the phonathons, I felt comfortable asking people for money because I believe in Agnes Scott. I also think it helps that I'm a good organizer and am capable of getting people to look at goals and clarify plans." Jones works directly with Sarah Cave, acting director of the Annual Fund. Together, they hope to reach a goal of 45 percent alumnae participation in the 95-96 campaign which seeks to raise a total of $1,094,125 for the Annual Fund. "We feel

"She is that wonderful sort of typical ASC graduate," Cave continues. "When women graduate from Agnes Scott, they go on to be leaders. Anne took that ideal and incorporated that into her life not only in her career but also with in the structure of Agnes Scott as a volunteer."

Jones came to know more about Atlanta and ASC through Faye Allen Sisk '73, a then-family neighbor in Jacksonville, Fla. While a high school senior, Jones remembers her Mother subtly encouraging her to consider Agnes Scott. Jones didn't know why until years later when her mother explained she had wanted to go to Agnes Scott but World War II prevented her. Jones adds, "It only took one meeting with the College's admission office and I knew Agnes Scott was the right place for me. Mom was right."

With a degree in economics and history and Phi Beta Kappa key in hand, Jones joined BellSouth where she facilitated training sessions and worked with people on problem-solving issues for 15 years as an analyst and staff manager. Once she realized she wanted a more detailed understanding of how change management and the transition process impacts the individual and company, she decided to accept an early retirement offer, under BellSouth's Career Alternative Plan, and enrolled in graduate school.

With the advanced knowledge, Jones hopes to work for a consulting company, conducting training programs on the management of change following downsizing and reorganization.

But for now her time is well spent as a student and volunteer.

"My enthusiasm for Agnes Scott has helped me as chair of the Annual Fund. Agnes Scott has been an important part of my life and helped me get to where I am today. It has been a big factor in my development as a person. I want to make sure this experience continues for other women."

—Audrey Arthur

Anne Curtis Jones '79 has experienced a year of change. Not only did she move from the ranks of Alumnae Association Board of Directors committee member to annual fund chair this spring, she also made the transition from working professional to full-time student in Georgia State University's master of science in management program this fall.

The Raleigh, N.C., native has been no stranger to Agnes Scott since her graduation. "I started out on a small scale [working on] phonathons for the Annual Fund and the Young Atlanta Alumnae group," she recalls. Later she was elected class reunion chair and class president and then served as chair of the Alumnae Association's Continuing Education Committee and as a member of the Strategic Planning Committee.

When selected fund chair this past that with a new president and the first alumnae president, we will meet our goal," says Jones.

The College also wants to up its standing among other women's colleges in alumnae giving. In a line up with other women's colleges such as Hollins, Mount St. Mary's, Randolph-Macon, Scripps, Sweet Briar and Wellesley, Agnes Scott is just about dead center. The Higher Education Data Sharing Consortium report for 1993-94 indicated a range of alumnae giving from a high of 47 percent to a low of 27 percent among the group list. ASC ranked midway with 38 percent of alumnae giving.

Cave feels that she and Jones make an effective team. "Anne is very organized and goal oriented. We both want this to work and to be different and creative in our efforts. We are always looking for new ideas and bouncing ideas off each other.

The voices of Agnes Scott

BENNETT, MALCOM GREET THE PUBLIC

Alumnae, parents and friends who call Agnes Scott will hear a new automated "on-hold" phone message featuring the voice of Susan Bennett, a local performing artist, whom many will recognize as the "voice of Rich's." In the recording, Bennett describes the attributes of the campus and community and ends her message with numbers to call for further information.

Bennett, who is from Clinton, New York, received a Latin degree from Brown University in 1971.

Although she has sung and performed in high school and college plays, her career in the performing industry began when she moved to Atlanta with her husband in 1972.

Bennett adds her ASC work to a list of influential business clients. In addition to singing backup with Roy Orbison 1982-83, Bennett has done radio and TV voice-overs and jingles for Coca-Cola, Rich's and The Atlanta Journal and Constitution, and has done industrial films and narration for Coke, BellSouth and AT&T.

Switch board operator Carolyn Malcom, the behind-the-scenes voice of Agnes Scott College, avoids attention, preferring, as she says, "to stay in the background."

A Monroe, Ga., native, Malcom grew up in Ohio, studied telecommunications at Career Technical Institute in Dayton and lived in California before joining the staff of Agnes Scott eight years ago.

Alumnae, parents and friends have no doubt heard her cheery "Good morning, Agnes Scott College," a greeting she imparts as many as 100 times a day to off-campus callers, or her simple, even-tempered "Operator" greeting repeated countless times to on-campus callers. In addition to greeting callers, Malcom unlocks or clears telephone passwords and handles general programming of voice mailboxes through AUDIX; and maintains the central campus fax machine.

AGREEMENT RENEWED—Agnes Scott College's exchange agreement with Kinjo Gakuin University in Nagoya, Japan was renewed on Nov. 7, during signing ceremonies held in Katharine Woltz Reception Room of Rebekah Scott Hall. Kazuie Sankui, president of Kinjo Gakuin, second from right, and Michiko Shibata, director of the Center for International Programs, right, participated in the signing, as did Pres. Mary Brown Bullock '66, gesturing, and Dean of the College Sarah Blanshei. The agreement extended ASC's student, faculty and staff exchange with Kinjo which was originally set in 1991. This semester, seven Kinjo students have studied at Agnes Scott.

TRULY A 'TEAM EFFORT.' That's the way Athletic Director and Volleyball Head Coach Star Minke describes the performance of the 1995 Scottie volleyball team. She says the team's win/loss record of 6-16 "certainly does not reflect the accomplishments these teams has demonstrated. I have never coached a team [that's] increased its skill level as substantially as these women have."

PRESIDENT'S COLUMN

As this holiday season nears I am honored to send you greetings for the first time as President of Agnes Scott College. George, Graham, Ashley and I have had a wonderful time settling in on the campus. The rhythm of campus life resonates with our family—from Sunday afternoon faculty softball, to N.C.A.A. soccer and volleyball and basketball matches, to the Halloween costume contest (Mona Lisa won) to Thursday night with Friends and ER and (the first) President's Holiday Dinner.

I returned to Agnes Scott because I believe it has the resources—financial, human and geographic—to become a great liberal arts college for women. After three months I am more than ever committed to that mission. What I have discovered, or perhaps re-discovered, is the quality of the people of Agnes Scott. The human resources are richer than I had even imagined. Many of them are you, the alumnae. Over and over I have been impressed with how much Agnes Scott graduates care about the future of this institution. The students are every bit as articulate as we are and the Agnes Scott tradition of teaching-scholars lives on in the faculty.

It will not surprise you to know that we are focusing on enrollment growth. All of the ASC community is actively involved—from designing a World Wide Web homepage, to phoning prospective students and their families, to hosting desert and discussions, to holding departmental open houses at Great Scott!, and providing new funds for scholarships. Students, staff, faculty and alumnae participation has been superb.

After a busy fall, we look forward to the holidays, a time of remembrance and renewal. Your support—through calls, letters and contributions—has been most encouraging.

Our best wishes for joy and peace,

Mary Brown Bullock

RACISM FREE ZONE, HONOR COURT DISCUSSED

RHIANNON GERALD '97
Racism Free Zone president
Hometown: Evansville, Ind.
Major: African-American studies

Racism Free Zone is a three-year-old organization that is working to establish a safe and trusting environment, recognizing the worth of all individuals and the value of their difference. As the president of Racism Free Zone, Rhiannon Gerald '97 tries to set a standard for all students. "I make it a point to do something every day for RFZ. Some days I just brainstorm for ideas of things that could improve RFZ, and other days I research current events that are connected to the organization. I want to show [the student body] that with hard work, things will get done and changes can be made."

Gerald's goal for Racism Free Zone is to make it a more prominent and active organization on campus by promoting ASC's cultural diversity. She wants to emphasize to the ASC community that Racism Free Zone is not an organization exclusively for African Americans, but for everyone. Gerald hopes that ASC faculty and staff members, as well as students, will become involved.

Also, Gerald has modified the Racism Free Zone Declaration and plans to establish a tradition of having staff, faculty and students re-sign the declaration each year to re-affirm their commitment to a racism-free campus. Already this year, RFZ has been successful in moving the declaration from the basement of Buttrick Hall to a more prominent place in Alston Center's Scotland Yard.

Development Roundup

OVER $97,000 DONATED THIS FALL

The fall months have been busy and productive for the Office of Development at Agnes Scott College.

On Nov. 2, 176 alumnae and friends of the College attended an Ambassadors Dinner with Pres. Mary Brown Bullock '66 in the Katharine Woltz Reception Room. The event featured music by the Collegiate Chorale and brief speeches by Bullock and Board of Trustees Chair Joseph Gladden.

GIFTS AND GRANTS

Gifts donated to the College during September and October totaled more than $97,000. Trustee Louise Hill Reaves '54, made a significant contribution to the scholarship fund named for her mother, Caroline McKinney Clarke '27. Carolyn Smith Whipple '25 established an endowed scholarship in her name. More than $19,000 was donated from the estate of Justin M. Day, a friend of the College. In memory of her parents, Waddy H. & Maude C. Hudson, Anne Hudson Hankins '31 gave a major gift to a fund bearing their name. The SHARP! Women Program received $7,500 from NationsBank. In honor of her 45th reunion, Sara Jackson Hertwig '51 donated a gift at the Founders' Club level. A BellSouth matching gift of $5,000 was added to the gift of Martha Boone Shaver '41 and her husband toward the Mr. and Mrs. B.E. Boone Jr. Scholarship Fund (named in memory of her parents). The Akers Foundation contributed $5,000 to its scholarship fund.

PHONATHON BEATS GOAL

Thirty-five students volunteered their evening hours on four consecutive nights in October during the Annual Fund Fall Phonathon, soliciting $39,869.50 in pledges from 414 alumnae. A pre-phonathon mailer ("Don't let us interrupt your dinner!") reaped $21,357 from 256 gifts, bringing the phonathon campaign total to $61,226.50, surpassing the $50,000 goal by more than $10,000.

A Parent's Council, co-chaired by F. Marion and Sarah Cumming Mitchell '63, met during Family Weekend in October and set a goal to raise $10,000 from current and former parents.

SENIOR CAMPAIGN SET

The 1995-96 Senior Campaign, co-chaired by Tara Spuhler of Jacksonville, Fla. and Lori Brittle of Bristol, Va., was kicked off with a party in the Dana Fine Arts Building, Nov. 9. This year's class sets its participation goal at 60 percent. The class of 1995 raised $7,250 in pledges with 48 percent class participation.

KARA MOORE '96

Honor Court president
Hometown: Shelbyville, Ind.
Major: Physics

"The Honor Court is not a campus police force," says Honor Court President Kara Moore '96. It is the judicial body of the Student Government Association, designed to uphold and protect the Honor Code, which she says, "is necessary to maintain the atmosphere at ASC that enables students to grow spiritually, intellectually and socially." Moore feels the Honor Code helps create an environment in which ASC students can trust their peers. Without it, she feels students wouldn't be as free to grow and express themselves.

As a member of Honor Court for four years, Moore has been preparing for the presidency since her first year. Moore praises her fellow court members, characterizing them as "good thinkers and sympathetic listeners. There is a strong feeling of unity within the group, and it shows in their cooperation, thoroughness and clear communication."

As Honor Court president, Moore says she has learned diplomacy and gained listening skills. She feels that she is now a more focused and disciplined person who can "effectively communicate with people across the board."

Moore hopes students will take the Honor System with them after they leave ASC, and continue the promotion of the values that it stands for in the "real world."

Holt Stumps for Women in Beijing

"WOMEN HAVE SAME PROBLEMS ALL OVER THE WORLD. IT IS ONLY A MATTER OF DEGREE."

Within weeks of celebrating birthday 79, Bertha B Merrill Holt '38 was in Beijing with a delegation from the Commission on Women in North Carolina, attending, primarily, the NGO (non-governmental organizations) portion of the Fourth United Nations Conference on Women.

She returned from the conference with telling observations on the world of women, beginning with the South African delegation who climbed to the upper level of a crowded Olympic stadium—with suitcases in tow—and sat in the aisles near her during spectacular opening ceremonies.

Holt later saw women conferees encircle Tibetan women protestors, successfully blocking Chinese security guards.

She and passengers riding on a leaking bus "raised our umbrellas," during a downpour. Waiting in the rain outside a conference space in Huairuo, she held out her umbrella to shelter several drenched Chinese young people (many of whom worked as translators). "Pretty soon," says Holt, "other women began holding their umbrellas over these children."

Of particular interest to Holt were the plenary sessions on health, education, poverty, the treatment of girl children and domestic violence. "Most countries of the world do not educate girls," she laments. "Among the worst problems is genital mutilation, and in armed conflict, women often become victims of violence and rape."

Women's rights and women's issues have also been at the heart of Holt's 20-year career in the North Carolina legislature. During that time she campaigned hard for the Equal Rights Amendment (which lost by a single vote). She helped gather state support for shelters for women who experience domestic violence and she helped secure funding for displaced homemakers.

Holt was also part of a 31-member women's caucus in the North Carolina legislature which last year pushed through a marital rape law that "cleanly removed the spousal defense." Before that, in North Carolina the defense to forcible rape was marriage. Some men in the state senate claimed that tampering with the old law would break up the home, a contention Holt found laughable. "When we were debating the bill, I said, 'If you do not give women a legal defense they may take things into their own hands.' This coincided with coverage of the [John] Bobbitt trial. I was quoted on Public Radio. This law was my swan song."

A worthy adversary of gender discrimination throughout her life and career, Holt began to battle on the side of women soon after her own graduation from the University of Alabama Law School (1941). She recalls having interviewed with several law firms refusing to hire women as lawyers. "They told me, 'If you want to take a secretarial course, we could hire you as a legal secretary.'" Holt prevailed, finding work in Washington, D.C., as an attorney for the Department of Interior and the U.S. Treasury.

Early in her career she noted that laws, and lawmakers who execute and interpret the law, affect all aspects of life from economic development to the arts. With the idea that "politics can bring about change," she began working as a volunteer, eventually serving as president of the Democratic Women of Alamance and vice chair of the Alamance County Democratic Party and the North Carolina Democratic Executive Board. Beginning in 1974, she became the first woman to serve her district as a state representative.

Integrity, which Holt carefully guarded throughout her public life, along with the liberal arts training received at Agnes Scott, "supplemented by my professional training as a lawyer, has enabled me to form a basis for decision-making that was so necessary in creating sound legislation." By 1980 she was chosen chair of the legislative ethics committee; she also served twice as chair of the constitutional amendments committee and chair of the appropriations committee. It was through that experience, and through serving as chair of Former North Carolina Representative Bertha B Holt has made a career of being "the first woman" to assume numerous responsibilities on the state level in both politics and religion, including the first woman to serve as senior warden on the vestry of the Episcopal Church in North Carolina (daughter Harriett Whitley '66, has since served as senior warden). She has helped cut a clear path for women of later generations. (Granddaughter Allyson Whitley '91 and two sisters Tade Merrill Lampley '44 and Evelyn Merrill Daniel '53 are alumnae of the College.)

the finance committee of the Episcopal Diocese of North Carolina, that she felt the weight of the power of appointed and elected bodies, power that must "be carefully used."

Back in 1978, the Alumnae Association gave Holt the Outstanding Alumna Award for Community Service; today she continues to take seriously those community responsibilities, serving on numerous boards in a half dozen community organizations including the Salvation Army, the Board of Adolescent Pregnancy Prevention of North Carolina, and the State Executive Committee of the Democratic Party.

It may not come as a surprise that she ruffles at The Wall Street Journal's describing the recent U.N. conference on women as "a Junior League shopping trip." The end result of this will be what we make of it," insists Holt.

"What impressed me most about this conference is that women have the same problems all over the world. It is only a matter of degree."

Ambassadors Gather

FRIENDS CELEBRATE WITH PRESIDENT MARY BROWN BULLOCK '66

176 friends who have been important to the life of Agnes Scott College came together, Nov. 2, for a celebratory "Ambassadors Dinner," in Katharine Woltz Reception Room of Rebekah Scott Hall. Counter clockwise from upper left: Pres. Mary Brown Bullock '66 has a light moment with Maria Melo '96; the Collegiate Chorale entertains; Ansley Hammond '96 accompanies the group on the piano; Bonnie Johnson '70 extends a hand to Ruth Shippey Austin '34, who enjoyed dinner with Betty Sams Daniel '39, left, and Kathryn Maness Nelson '34; George Bullock chats with Sally Skardon '70, center, and Ruby Hutton Barron '36.

Tish Talks

Four years ago the board of directors of the Alumnae Association, under the guidance of then-President Gayle Gellerstedt, began an intensive self-study that culminated in the Strategic Plan presented to the Alumnae Association at its general meeting in 1994.

You may have participated in one of the many focus groups; perhaps you filled out the strategic planning questionnaire. Many of you attended chapter meetings and asked "Why?", "Why not?" and "What if?"

Hundreds of alumnae participated in the process that led to the creation and then the ratification of the Strategic Plan.

As president-elect of the Alumnae Association, I was awarded the responsibility of examining and restructuring the alumnae board as needed to ensure oversight and ownership of the plan's goals. As a savvy Agnes Scott graduate, I immediately found several alumnae to assist in the process: Wardie Abernethy Martin '59, a past president of the association; Nancy Lee Bryan '64, a past member of the board of directors; and Sallie Manning Ogden '82 and Anne Curtis Jones '79, currently serving on the board.

Over a period of months, we looked at every aspect of the alumnae board. We agreed that to best serve both alumnae and the College, the alumnae board must:

- Involve more alumnae in the alumnae association;

- Improve lines of communication and facilitate accurate transmission of news about the College and the association;

- Be set up in such a way that alumnae who volunteer to serve the College through the association will be able to use their time productively.

The flow chart that you see on this page is the result of our efforts. As you can see, we are serious about involving more alumnae at a wide variety of energy and time-intensive levels.

Some of our committees and subcommittees are brand-new. For example, the legislative relations committee will keep a close eye on state or federal legislation that may impact higher education. The communications committee will look for ways to connect alumnae electronically. The community events subcommittee will bring alumnae together to sample metro Atlanta's myriad activities.

Others will continue to provide support to alumnae, and to ask for their support to the College.

Look closely at the committees and subcommittees. Figure out how you'd like to help, and let your chapter president, or Director of Alumnae Affairs Lucia Sizemore, know. We're looking forward to working with you.

Rosalie Wooten Deck has been "adopted" by Puff, a black stray kitten with four white socks (like the Clintons' cat). They live together in Rosalie's home in East Lake. She still gardens and cans the vegetables, and apples from her apple tree. Thus, she is always prepared for visitors. Her two sons, Linton and David, visit her often. She celebrated her 90th birthday, Oct. 9.

Mary Knox Happoldt was completely surprised by a 90th birthday party given by her daughters, Mary Lou and Kay, who invited friends and relatives from New Hampshire, Chicago, Fairfax, Va., and Callaway, Ga. Part of the celebration included fulfilling Mary's long desire to ride in a fire truck. Mary was taken to a fire station in Marietta, Ga., where she boarded the biggest ladder truck available for her memorable ride. All of this was videotaped!

Hazel Huff Monaghan was also surprised with a 90th birthday party held at her cottage (as she calls it), a three-story house well suited to hold the 38 friends and family members. It is located on Lake Lanier (Georgia), providing boating and swimming for everyone. Guests brought gifts and cards and their special dishes for refreshments. The most unique gift of all was a framed birthday card addressed to Hazel and signed by President and Mrs. Clinton.

Louise Pfeiffer Ringel writes that she lives alone in Brunswick but her children, who live in Jacksonville, come to see her often. She is in perfect health and is active in civic affairs, is parliamentarian of a garden club, works in the Navy League, and Elks Aidmore auxiliary, and has been a trustee of Brunswick College for 30 years. In the past, she has been president of many organizations, state treasurer of Women's Club of Georgia, and state treasurer of American Association of University Women. This year, she has been to four regional bridge tournaments; and she swims an hour each day. Louise's son, Fred, practices law in Jacksonville, Fla. He has four children, graduated with honors and fulfilling very interesting careers. Louise's daughter, Margaret Ringel Zell, attended Agnes Scott, graduated from the University of Alabama, and has four children. They, too,

Margaret Perry Robertson is lucky that all of her family lives in West Palm Beach, her home. She has two children by her first marriage, Beverly Beacham Melcar and Horace Edward Beacham. Beverly has four children, all college students. Margaret's son, Horace, practices law in West Palm Beach. Margaret reports her health is good, and she is still able to drive her car.

Edyth Carpenter Shuey writes from Miami, Fla., that her family came together for her 90th birthday on August 24. She has three great-grandsons under the age of 5 who live in Columbus, Ohio. Edith has remained in the same house for 55 years.

Juanita Greer White moved into an assisted care residence that has been helpful in enabling her to live a fairly active life. Friend and helper, Anne takes her out to lunch and shopping nearly every day and every couple of months they get away for three or four days. At the end of June, they visited the Portland area and enjoyed the River Gorge. In September, they planned to visit daughter Sally in Texas. Sally urged them to stay home awhile as she planned an open house and dinner for Juanita's 90th birthday in November. Juanita met a woman 103 years old whom she said, "looked better than I did." Juanita too has set her sights on living to be 103.

The Taylors are growing miniature corn, picking it when it is four inches long, and eating cob and all.

Mary Bell has continued her

50-year project of managing the American Association of University Women used book sale for fellowship funds. Since a $100 bill was once found in a book, each book has to be shaken soundly before it is priced, so far, to no avail.

She recommends seeing the movie, The Postman, which took her back to first-year English at ASC 71 years ago. Life is rich and fulfilling in Grosse Pointe and she sends love to all.

Ruth Thomas Stemmons says she's "still in Dallas" with her tall long-john Texan. Their daughter Allison lives close enough to pick them up for church each week.

Miriam Anderson Dowdy has happy memories of her college years. The years have taken a toll in slowing her down (she no longer teaches), but she continues with church activities and sharing time and love with her children, grandchildren and their friends.

Edna Marshall Volberg Johnson hopes the group will keep the news flowing among classmates. She lives alone in the house she and her husband bought in 1957 in Athens. With a bit of help in the yard, she is enjoying friends "from way back" with whom she plays bridge and talks. Her family of four children, eight grandchildren and three great-grandchildren seems to be gravitating toward Lake Oconee and nearer Atlanta. Edna feels singularly blessed "to be in good health, to have kept a 'bit' of her mind and to be enjoying life at 86."

Patricia Collins Butler, whose husband died in March, notes with sadness the difference in a "two" or "we" oriented world. She divides her time between Washington, D.C. and La Jolla, Calif.

Shirley McPhaul Whitfield is in an infirmary and unable to write, but her husband Randy says he is "just an elevator ride away" and the children and grandchildren keep in touch.

A nice letter came from Anne "Chopin" Hudson Hankins. She has just lost her husband of 58 years, but her three children have been very supportive. She went to Australia with daughter Anne and visited son Tim's family in Sydney, where he is on sabbatical doing research in radio-astronomy. Chopin plays tennis and enjoys sailing her 20-foot O'Day with sailing buddies. She also has sailed with son Frank on his 27-foot Trimaran. Her nine grandchildren keep her hopping.

Molly Childress Yarbrough has remained in Greensboro, Ala., all her life and says it is a wonderful place to live, just like one big family. Molly broke her hip last year and has to use a cane, but she plays bridge and is proud of her college graduate grandsons and an adopted Romanian granddaughter in Minneapolis.

Helen Duke Ingram writes that she finds her condominium in Macon, Ga., a pleasant place to live. She is almost blind and has sprained her ankle, but luckily has a brother and sister nearby, whose children and grandchildren she enjoys.

"Dit" Quarles Henderson sends interesting news from Linville, N.C., where she just celebrated her 64th wedding anniversary—and still plays golf! She has a skydiving, architect granddaughter who is marrying a fellow sky diver; another granddaughter with Outward Bound in Washington state; and a third granddaughter who has graduated from the Rhode Island School of Design. Dit reports that Jeannette Shaw has live-in help and is not well.

Jean Grey Morgan says Shirley McPhaul Whitfield and Randy are across the street from her in Canterbury. One of Jean's grandsons is now at Chicago Divinity School. The other grandson is still in Riga, Latvia. Laura Brown Logan's daughter has moved to Atlanta, and Jean enjoys reminiscing with her.

News of the "Sprink" twins comes from Martha Sprinkle Rafferty in Williamsburg, Va., who reports that Mary Sprinkle

Allen is in a nursing home, but that she and Philip are "thankful to be healthy and try to hold on to their wits."

Marion Fielder Martin's husband is 102 years old and still gets around fairly well. Marion's son and his family live nearby in Atlanta. Marion still misses Sara Lou Bullock, who recently moved.

Carolyn Heyman Goodstein just celebrated her 85th birthday with a really wonderful reception at the Elizabeth Arden House in Summerville, S.C., with 250 guests including 25 different "sets" of relatives from everywhere.

Helen Friedman Blackshear, your secretary, is still walking on air over having been named poet laureate of Alabama.

A speedy recovery for Bella is wished by all. She says she would love to hear from her friends.

Dorothy Potts Lavendol and her sister have bought a home near Marietta and are living close enough to attend the "Fourth Monday" luncheons occasionally.

When Elizabeth Johnson Thompson was visiting family in Avondale this spring, she joined the "Fourth Monday" luncheon in May and entertained the group with tales about her interesting "Wednesday Club" in Danville, Va. She spoke of enjoying her son's delightful culinary talents when on a recent visit with him and his family.

In July, Kathryn Maness Nelson was hostess to a group of parishioners from the historic First United Methodist Church in Waldwick, N.J. Kathryn and her husband, Dr. O.C. Nelson, served that church for 30 years as the pastoral family. The church will celebrate its 200th anniversary in 1997. Kathryn's guests are dear friends who have been and are active in their church's activities. It was a delightful visit for all of them as they shared memories of old times. When Kathryn's son and daughter-in-law and family visited in August, their activities included taking granddaughters Kristen and Erin to Six Flags, Fernbank, Callaway Gardens, Stone Mountain, Paralympic Events—swimming, track and equestrian performances. Kathryn says she needed another quiet week at home to recuperate!

Plant Ellis Brown has moved from Macon, Ga., to Atlanta, and is living at Canterbury Court on Peachtree Road.

In June, Ruth Shippey Austin's home in Dunwoody was struck by lightning, hitting a 100-foot, 33-year-old poplar tree, damaging all electrical appliances, the security system and the telephones. Luckily, there was no fire and they were totally covered by insurance! This experience has certainly given the Austin family healthy respect for lightning and all its manifestations. In August, Ruth's granddaughter, Amanda Austin, after graduating from Druid Hills High School, enrolled at Central Florida University in Orlando, Fla.

As retiring president of the Whitfield-Murray Historical Society, Mary Hamilton McKnight was awarded the distinguished honor of Woman of the Year of the society. During her term of office, she spearheaded the launching of a successful financial campaign. She was instrumental in establishing a preservation award and began a movement to sponsor historical tours of the Whitfield County and Murray County area in Dalton, Ga., and environs. Congratulations to Mary on her well-deserved honor and her outstanding accomplishments in her home community.

Betty Fountain Edwards Gray's daughter Margaret treated Betty to three days at EPCOT Center in Disney World to celebrate Betty's 80th birthday. Betty takes classes at Atlanta's Senior University, where she sees several other Agnes Scott alumnae.

Eva Poliakoff Goodman is in a writing group taught by an author, and occasionally helps her grandson with English and grammar. Her interests include enjoying California food, visiting family and watching her grandsons grow up.

Carol Griffin Scoville, as a retirement home resident, is "adjusting to group living these many years after ASC." She's involved in American Association of University Women, exercise class and a creative writing group.

Betty Lou Houck Smith traveled to the Caribbean, visiting St. Lucia, Barbados, Grenada and Aruba. She is thankful for her good health, and that she can still get around with ease. Betty Lou is now the mother of three grandmothers.

Martha Allen Barnes has been treasurer of the Emory Hospital Auxiliary since 1981. She is also involved in women's Bible class at First Presbyterian Church. She and husband Jarvis like to travel and often take along their granddaughter and a friend.

Fidesah Edwards Alexander's interests include reading, taking short trips to fascinating places, coaching a child in reading and selling her house to buy a smaller one. She is director of her hiking club and is a member of a camera club.

Laura Stevens Chadwick traveled this past year to the Caribbean Islands, the Panama Canal, Alaska, Hawaii and California. She keeps busy with activities in the mobile home park where she resides.

Mary Virginia Allen traveled to England and France, crossing on the Queen Elizabeth II. She teaches an adult Bible class in Sunday school and tutors a student in French.

Caroline Long Sanford's main interest is trying to "keep up with the times" and keeping her mind as active as possible. She participates in a bridge club, travels, and is busy with the Women of the Presbyterian Church.

Dorothea Blackshear Brady keeps in touch with Frances Espy Smith, Anne Scott Harman Mauldin and Carolyn Cole Gregory. Her recent travels include Highlands, N.C., Gulf Shores, Ala., Biloxi, Miss., and Charleston, S.C.

HERE ARE THE 10 BEST WAYS YOU CAN ASSIST WITH RECRUITMENT

1. Recommend prospective sophomores, juniors and seniors to the Office of Admission so that they may be sent materials about the College.
2. Represent Agnes Scott at college fairs in your area.
3. Deliver Agnes Scott materials to local libraries in your area.
4. Deliver Agnes Scott materials to high schools which ASC's admission representatives are unable to reach during the recruitment cycle (high schools that are considered out-of-region).
5. Serve as an alumnae panelist during admission events throughout the year.
6. Correspond with prospective students in your area by telephone or a personal note to share your Agnes Scott experience with them as they make their college decision.
7. Bring a prospective student to campus to introduce her to Agnes Scott.
8. Attend admission Dessert and Discussions in your area (if applicable).
9. Host or assist in planning a reception in your area for accepted applicants.
10. Host or assist in planning an event for current students and newly-enrolled students before they depart for Agnes Scott in the fall.

Frances James Donohue and son Daniel were among the D.C. area alumnae honoring the new ASC president at a July reception at the capitol. The scholarly Mary Brown Bullock '66 is a cousin and Frances has known her, her mother and grandmother since childhood. Frances also enjoyed the meeting of the Washington area Emory University alumni at the Cosmos Club; Frances had worked as a librarian at the Cosmos Club when she first came to Washington. This Emory get-together honored Ambassador to Korea Jim Laney who is president emeritus of Emory. Frances is happily busy, sharing her interest in space with her lively small grandsons. Last fall, she and her sister Rebecca attended the wedding of a niece in Princeton, N.J.

Frances Miller Felts reports that her mother, who is over 108 years old, now resides in a nearby nursing home. Frances enjoys the many friendships she made during her happy 46-year marriage to Dr. James R. Felts Jr. At the time of his death, a scholarship named for him was established at Duke University in the School of Business Administration (now the Fuqua School of Business Administration). Frances had a pleasant reunion at Montreat, N.C., with Carrie Phinney Latimer Duvall, Mary Margaret Stowe Hunter and Sarah Spencer Gramling. The four of them enjoyed the tea where Lucia Howard Sizemore '65, director of alumnae affairs, spoke. Frances is very much involved with her son, daughter and six grandchildren, one of whom is a senior in high school.

Lita Goss Conrad continues to write poetry, as she did at ASC while editor of the Aurora. A year ago, she welcomed her sixth grandson, all of whom live nearby. Lita's third daughter manages her own catering business in California, but was present at a two-week family reunion at a beach near St. Augustine where the Conrads have been gathering for 12 years. Lita reports happy memories of her years as a teacher of Latin and English and would not have retired except for the age rule.

Shirley Christian Ledgerwood's second book, a novel, called The Voice of Thy Brother's Keeper, is currently being circulated by her agent to publishing houses. Especially enjoyable for Shirley was the book signing of her Unlocked Dreams in Chattanooga. Another special for Shirley was a trip to her ancestral home, built in 1663, on the Isle of Man, where she was entertained by Sir Clive Edwards. Shirley's ancestor, William Christian, is a hero of the Isle. From there, Shirley traveled to Normandy, France. Shirley and John welcomed a great-grandson, son of the Seattle grandson. Nothing amazes Shirley more than the athletic prowess of her 83-year-old husband, who skis and hikes about mountains.

Rosa Miller Barnes was visited by her granddaughter, who was vacationing from her work on the staff of a new congressman. There is great excitement in the media about the new magazine recently launched by Rosa's son Fred in Washington. Fred Jr.'s work appears in Reader's Digest, The Spectator, and he can be seen on television with The McLaughlin Group. Long associated with the New Republic, Fred will be working closely with William Crystal.

Mildred Clark Sargent and husband Jim decided not to accept an invitation to the dedication of the monument to the American and Chinese personnel killed in action in WWII.

Florence Lasseter Rambo enjoyed a week in May in Charleston, S.C., combining a visit with her daughter and events during the Spoleto Festival. She also found "off-site" summer concerts by the Atlanta Symphony enjoyable for the acoustics at The Temple and at St. Philip's Episcopal Cathedral.

Mary Johnson Tornbom is still at work in Mexico but inflation has made the cost of water double and utilities triple.

Mary King Critchell has hosted her 5-year-old grandson for several weeks at her home in Franklin, N.C. In October, she spoke to students at Kagoshima Kelzai University in Japan as part of their celebration of the end of the Pacific War.

Fannie B. Harris Jones was in Scotland in July for the wedding of a granddaughter. The bride's father, Walter Jones, one of ASC's new trustees, performed the ceremony at Newport on Tay, wearing a tartan created for a clergyman's kilt.

A good long letter from Mary Anne Kernan catches the class up with her, after a lifelong career as a librarian, retiring from Vanderbilt where she served as head of reference and collection development work from 1966 to 1983, and then as a part-time consultant until 1989. She claims no striking accomplishments or late-blooming talents since then, but is doing a "consistent, disciplined and enjoyable program of fitness activities at a center at Vanderbilt—water aerobics, Yoga, swimming (for which I bless ASC for requiring me to learn), and walking, as well as some weight machinery. This month I become the designated 'senior of the month' for the progress I've made over the past three years, losing 30 pounds and staying at 115 or so, which the doctors say is fine!" Mary Anne says the church is still the unifying force in her life and credits three and a half years of psychotherapy with a pastoral therapist at her church (Episcopal) for solving some critical issues in her life and helping her now to help others. Mary Anne recently attended a "conclave" of six cousins in Hayesville, N.C., with her brother John and his wife, home on furlough from mission work in South Africa. She sees former ASC history professor Philip Davidson at church almost every Sunday.

Nell Allison Sheldon was recently honored by Villa International of Atlanta with a Distinguished Service Award for her volunteer work as board member, president and chair of several committees over the past years. Nell planned to attend a reunion of her classmates from the American School in Shanghai this fall in Southwest Harbor, Maine, at an historic old hotel, just in time for "leaf-viewing."

Gleanings from the phonathon: Louise Bailey White is busy keeping up her house and yard for her sister and herself since her husband died two years ago.

Annie Hastie McInnis says "no more falls!" after breaking her hip twice and fracturing several ribs last summer. She visits her daughter in Sandy Springs occasionally.

Ruth Hertzka and her sister Katherine '35 fulfilled their dream by taking a Panama Canal tour via Costa Rica, a trip they have always wanted to take.

Jane Guthrie Rhodes celebrated her "vacation" this summer by cooking for 17 children, "grands" and their boyfriends at an annual family reunion in Lakemont, Ga., in July. Jane says she got down the steps to the lake one time and rested between meals, rocking on the porch. Highlights were fireworks over the lake, and a visit from her son and daughter-in-law, after working nine months in Russia on joint-venture business.

Gleanings from letters about kids and grandkids: Kennon Henderson Patton has three daughters and nine grandchildren. Daughter Blair Greene lives in Rhode Island; Jean Preston in Greenville, S.C.; and Susan Hamersky in Woodland Hills, Calif. Lib Blackshear Flinn has four sons: Bill Jr., David, Rick, and Perry, and five granddaughters and one grandson. Nell Allison Sheldon's daughter, Allison Sheldon

Rogers, has two sons and heads a teaching team of four as a sixth grade teacher in Oklahoma City. Louise Young Garrett has five sons, three in the family business, one banker, one farmer, 15 grandchildren, and five great-grandsons! Elsie West Duval has two daughters, one son, and seven grandchildren "ages 1 to 24!" Daughter, Martha lives in Atlanta, Susan in Seattle, and son Tommy in Newport News. Elizabeth Cousins Mozley has two sons, one daughter, and six grandkids. Son Sam is a biology, ecology-limnology professor at North Carolina State University in Raleigh. Son Donald is a Lieutenant Colonel in the Air Force Reserve at Andrews Air Force Base in Washington, D.C. Daughter Karen Smith has completed one-and-a-half years of law school at Georgia State and is a law clerk when studies allow. Margaret Douglas Link has three sons and one daughter. One son is a doctor in Winston-Salem and another is a professor of history at the University of North Carolina in Greensboro. Lettie McKay VanLandingham has three daughters, five grandchildren, and two "great-grands." Margaret Morrison Blumberg has two sons and two grandsons. Frances King Yager has two daughters and four grandchildren. Your secretary thought she was privileged because she could ride the train to Decatur for free because her father worked for the Atlantic Coastline Railroad.

The class of 1940 had a smaller group than expected at the 55th reunion; however those present found it easier to visit with the smaller number.

Harriet "Hat" Stimson Davis and Katherine "Kat" Patton Carsow accepted the job of class secretaries.

Mary "Polly" Heaslett Badger visited Sophie Montgomery Crane on her way to Alumnae Weekend. She stayed with "Hat" for the weekend and afterward visited friends in Atlanta and Birmingham before returning to Chicago.

Harriet Fuller Baker has been selling her home looking toward retirement. Her grandson, a student at Dallas Theological Seminary, traveled to Israel in the summer of 1995. He plans to work with needs of the inner city.

Esthere Ogden Blakeslee has a large family to keep up with— especially important is a 92-year-old sister in California.

Mary Reins Burge is recovering from a serious case of shingles. Although better, it continues to bother her. Husband Dan, a doctor, has ensured the best medical attention, and friends are attentive. Mary looks forward to being able to drive soon.

Katherine Patton Carsow and her husband, Bill, enjoyed a trip to Alaska this summer. They traveled with a group representing three generations in their family.

Mary Frances "Boots" Moore Culpepper visited England this summer, then traveled to Berlin to see a grandson, and later took a Danube cruise to Budapest.

Virginia McWhorter Freeman is retired from the Red Cross. Her son is studying computers at Denver University School of Business Administration. A daughter writes books on childcare.

Elizabeth "Dibba" Davis Johnston reports two new grandchildren: Hannah and Matthew, cousins, only three days apart in age. That brings a family total of five children and 10 "grands."

Annette Franklin King enjoyed a western trip after the class reunion.

Sara Lee Mattingly tops "Dibba"—she has six children, 14 "grands." They livened up Sea Island for two weeks this summer. Sara later traveled to London.

Bryant Holsenbeck Moore and her husband traveled to Washington, D.C. for the dedication of the Korean War Memorial. Their 12-year-old

Mary Lang Olsen Edwards saw Betsy Banks Stoneburner at Lookout Mountain near Chattanooga this summer.

Mary Matthews Scott had hip surgery in the middle of July. She reports a granddaughter, a student at the University of Georgia in Athens, spent a month this summer studying international law at Oxford in England. A grandson spent three weeks in Germany playing viola with an international youth orchestra.

Isabella Robertson White is happily settled in a Methodist retirement center in Charlotte, N.C.

Henrietta Thompson Wilkinson is living in Montreat, N.C., year round now, and is part-time interim associate pastor of the Presbyterian church in Black Mountain. She writes that she enjoyed the 55th reunion so much she would be ready for the 60th now if that didn't make the group grow older faster. She sees Mary Evelyn Francis Ault, Grace Ward Anderson and Grace Anderson Cooper frequently.

The alumnae office received news that Martha Zellner Webb is still doing ecclesiastical designing and enjoys making banners, too. She and George travel within and out of the U.S. Her son George Jr. has just retired from the U. S. Navy after a successful and harrowing career. Summer 1995 was a very special time for your class secretary. Olivia White Cave celebrated Independence Day in Boston with a lobster luncheon cruise and attendance at a Boston Pops concert. How thrilling it was to hear 40,000 voices sing patriotic songs. America truly is the "home of the free and the brave." Everyone is aware of "new wind" blowing in the old Pops in the person of Keith Lockhart, its new director, and all are eager to know what music is in store for the coming seasons.

The trip also included a concert at Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony, visits to Norman Rockwell Museum, home of Edith Wharton, novelist, and to many other Massachusetts landmarks.

Later in the summer, Olivia traveled to Poland, home of Copernicus, Kosciuszko, Marie Curie, Chopin and Paderewski. She was reminded of the concert she heard Paderewski play in Atlanta her first year at ASC. Prague and Paris completed her itinerary.

Dot Holloran Addison relayed word that eulogies for Nancy Green Carmichael were given at the Russel Family Reunion held in Winder, Ga., in June. Nancy's husband, Ben, delivered his memoirs which told of Nancy's life and her many accomplishments. Dot was especially touched by the words of Nancy's cousins: "Nancy was a quiet presence, but a powerful force. She is still that. Gloria Anne Melchor Lyon has had medical problems during the past year, but has still managed to continue with her interior design business. One of the homes she decorated was featured in Veranda magazine.

Doris Street Thigpen is very active at the Woodlawn Baptist Church in Decatur. Her daughter Janet, a clinical nurse specialist at Grady Hospital in Atlanta, accompanied a group of medical professionals sponsored by the World Health Organization to the Republic of Georgia last spring to visit hospitals and assess their needs.

Harriet Hargrove Hill says she stays busy with farming in Powder Springs, Ga. Her husband, Harry, is still horsing around (he raises showhorses). Even with last summer's drought, their garden produced a bumper crop, and she canned and preserved huge quantities of vegetables.

The big news, of course, is that the class's 50th reunion will be April 19-21, 1996.

Classmates should already have received information about the plans and been encouraged to attend by at least one classmate. The group's goal is that this will be the best-attended gathering ever.

The alumnae office received news that Stratton Lee Peacock was presented the Lifetime Achievement Award by the Presbyterian Religious Educators in February.

Please note the new address of your secretary, who eagerly awaits your news at the retirement home she and her husband have long dreamed of owning. What about you? Are you also living your dreams? Share them please!

A most active member of the class of 1947 is Florence "Fluff" Paisley Williams of Black Mountain, N.C. Many of you know she hosted a mini-reunion last fall, but did you also know that in the four years she's lived in Black Mountain, she has become very active in Black Mountain Presbyterian Church, including being moderator of the Presbyterian Women? She volunteers as a mentor for students at an alternative high school, visits and enjoys her three children and six "grands," as they are now formally dubbed by her generation, and recently enjoyed a trip to Scotland and the Lake District. She loves mountain hiking and tennis, and enjoys the concerts and plays in her area, as well as frequent bridge games.

Since class president Laura Winchester Hawkins and your secretary live just a block apart, they are already talking about the upcoming 50th reunion in 1997. If you have any good ideas for this celebration, now is the time to pass them along. You now have a year and a half to make plans. Did this group ever believe it would be back for a 50th? It's true, in April 1997 the class of 1947 will join other special classes at reunion time for a big celebration. Let's make a real effort to be together again.

Two big events for Betsy Deal Smith and Gil this past year have been the wedding of their daughter Allison, last November, and the couple's three-week trip to Spain in June. She said, "We learned a lot, had fun, and improved our Spanish a little."

Joan Hungerford Tilghman writes that she and Kelly have retired in Roswell, Ga., near her 96-year-old mother, who lives by herself. As chair of her 50th North Fulton High School reunion this summer, Joan expected to see many Agnes Scott friends. She reports good visits in July with Helen "Poochy" Gehrken Howie and her husband, Jim, now retired at Skidaway Island in Savannah, and with Julianne Cook Ashmead and Ed, living at Big Canoe, Ga.

Edith Stowe Barkley and Brock have had a busy summer traveling to Wisconsin, Michigan and British Columbia.

Edryce Reynolds in Tacoma, Wash., is now teaching inmates of a men's medium-security prison to use computers, as well as having a counseling practice and conducting university night school classes in "science, technology and community values." When she retires, she says she wants to join the Peace Corps!

In January, Willene Tarry Braun and Ted took an extensive trip to the Northeast in their new commodious motor home. In January, Willene was the coordinator of an international conference of psychologists, psychiatrists, theologians and academic personnel.

News from Annie Charles "Charlsie" Smith Harris includes word of a granddaughter—"I thought there'd never be a female Harris." Charlsie reports that husband Jim and her parents are about the same. She did have a wonderful five-day visit in San Diego. Mostly, she writes, "I look forward to stealing away during the day and propping up on a porch at the beach to do 'serious research on the motion of the waves.'"

Mary "Maic" Aichel Samford's plan for a four-day canoe trip down the Suwanee River in May was cut off by Hurricane Allison. Maic, children and grandchildren were wakened in the night, after an exhausting nine hours of paddling. "Everyone got out safely and courageously."

Julianne Morgan Garner, Virginia Kay Daniel, Jo Ann Cobb Kirby, Tiny Morrow Mann, Betty Rawls Skelton and Gregor Mitchell Smith enjoyed their annual spring house party in May at Gregor and Tip's plantation near Emelle, Ala.

Elaine Schubert Kester writes from Altamonta Springs, Fla., that she "loves reading class news and remembering college days and friends." Since the death of her husband, Howard, more than nine years ago, Elaine has stayed busy working for a dentist; teaching an adult Sunday school class; and enjoying her son and daughter, who live nearby and who have provided Elaine with three grandsons, ages 10, 6, and 3 months, with whom she spends much time.

Charlotte Key Marrow moved from Austin to Kerrville, Texas, in July and is now teaching at Schreiner College.

Betty McClain Ivy and Kelley moved in June from Duluth, Ga., to nearby Norcross. She says they somehow "survived packing 40 years of collected items and dust."

Virginia Feddeman Kerner writes that "there are just not enough hours in the day" for her busy life. She finished training in early summer for "Education for Ministry," a four-year program directed by the School of Theology at Sewanee, Tenn. Virginia and her husband, Dick (retired after undergoing cancer surgery but now running his own business), are passionate about peace and justice issues, and are committed to fighting violence in all its forms. She is serving her second term on the board of directors of the Greater Dallas [Texas] Community of Churches, and is currently chairing the committee against concealed handguns.

Virginia, in earlier years, worked as a teacher with an Episcopal school, then worked 19 years as a librarian with the Dallas Public Library, where she is still employed parttime.

She and Dick have two married daughters living in Dallas, one of whom has two sons. A third daughter graduated from Agnes Scott and lives in Decatur, where she keeps her mother "posted" on events at the College. Virginia and Dick's son lives in the Netherlands and has two daughters. The Kerners love visiting them.

Jean Longino Hilner reports from Blairsville, Ga., that she and husband, Bob, were very busy over the summer at their blueberry farm, called Blueberry Hill, which is a "You-Pick" operation. They have had bumper crops not only of blueberries, but also of plums, cherries, raspberries, blackberries, peaches and apples. Jean and Bob enjoy waiting on customers, making jams, and entertaining numerous grandchildren, who this year have visited them on alternate weeks. The Hilners have five children.

In September, a trip to Williamsburg is planned, where Jean and Bob will meet Australian friends and show them some of the country. In 1992, these friends hosted the Hilners to a look at Australia.

Jean is currently involved with the Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA) program for abused and neglected children, which she says is difficult but rewarding work. At present, she is a dvocate for three children in her area.

In June, Esther Adler Schachter of Pasadena, Calif., participated in the United Nations 50th Anniversary Celebration in San Francisco. Her husband, Marvin, president of the United Nations Association's largest chapter, was elected a member of the United Nations Association's National Council.

In the August edition of MAIN EVENTS, it was reported that Gail Thompson was showing photos of her twin granddaughters. ME should have reported that they were twin great-granddaughters. ME regrets the error.

The alumnae office received news that Jimmie Ann McGee Collings is working as a volunteer with immigrants for Mission Service Corps, and is presently serving as District IV director for the Tennessee Federation of State Garden Clubs.

As far as your secretary could find out, classmates in Florida successfully weathered that storm called Erin. Patti Boring Sellas and Eleanor Hutchinson Smith were out of town when the storm struck, not harming their homes. Eleanor was enjoying a family reunion in Senoia, Ga.; Patti was in North Carolina.

Dorothy Oatley Bell has moved from Fort Walton Beach to North Georgia.

After 30 years of high school teaching, retirement has come to Betty Scott Keane. What is she doing in retirement? Teaching! She's gone to the other end of the scale and is working with pre-schoolers at her church, Peachtree Presbyterian in Atlanta, where she also sings in the choir. These activities fit around the fun she has with her six grandchildren.

Another retiree is Genevieve Guardia Chenault. The Chenaults have travel plans for their leisure time.

Lois Dryden Hasty and Charlie are grandparents for the third time.

With both daughters pregnant, Bo Hancock Abernathy expects to "up" her complement of grandchildren to seven.

Betty Stein Melaver's youngest daughter chose Tybee Island for her quiet family wedding in June.

Nancy Lee-Riffe and Julia Grier Storey met up at an alumnae gathering in Montreat, N.C., in early August.

of the class were asking about her, Catherine "Kacki" Eichelberger Krell reports that she is "alive and kicking." Her husband retired in March as associate editor of a state newspaper, daughter Kathryn recently married in Greenville, and Kacki is still enjoying her work in the South Carolina State Budget and Control Board. She has nearly recovered from a stroke of three years ago and reports that she is able to do "most anything I want."

Jane Gaines Johnson has recovered quickly from a stroke last November and has returned to work at the microbiology lab she runs for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. She reports that she has found a neurologist who is a diver who will probably okay her going scuba diving again!

Her granddaughter's first birthday in Centerville and the renovation of their house in Vienna, Va., are primary interests of Ann Allred Jackson and her husband, Kent, at this time.

When their oldest son went to college in South Carolina,

Mary Love L'Heureux Hammond and her husband moved to Rock Hill, S.C., to begin their lives in a different direction. He set up a computer business and Mary Love helps in the business. Their oldest son, James, no doubt has some input into the business, as he is working on his Ph.D. in computer science at the University of South Carolina. Son David teaches math and science at St. Mary's school in Kansas. Mary Love keeps her library skills up by working in the church library.

Carolyn Crawford Thorsen missed the 40th reunion as she was presenting a paper in Glasgow, Scotland, at the Business Industrial Educational Conference there. She and her husband vacationed there as well. She is excited about her program at Georgia Tech (in which she instructs would-be science and math teachers.

Eleanor Swain All and your secretary met for lunch and had lots of fun. Eleanor and Bill sailed with friends to the British West Indies this year and "barged" in England last year. Their daughter is an administrative assistant with KinderCare. Their son followed in his father's footsteps as a Navy pilot and is headed to the Indian Ocean. Eleanor and Bill have five granddaughters. She is still working with special education students and is an observer watching out for cases of discrimination in teacher employment.

Ava Caldwell Averett lives in Atlanta and reports she has two daughters: Tricia Williams and Barbara Ingram, who is a minister in Concord, N.C.

Marijke Schepman deVries earned a graduate degree in biochemistry after suffering a broken neck in an auto accident. Finding relief from pain and debilitation through acupuncture, Marijke pursued a degree in acupuncture and set up practice in Albuquerque. Her sister, Anneke '63, is a registered nurse and Shiatsu therapist. They both have found a way to combine Eastern and Western philosophy and medicine to help people toward health and wellness. Congratulations, sisters!

Memye Curtis Tucker has had many awards and honors from ASC, including president of the Alumnae Association in 1972 and the first Agnes Scott Distinguished Alumnae Writer award recipient in 1993. Memye, like Mary Edna Clark Hollins, is the daughter of an ASC graduate and an Emory medical school graduate. She was fortunate to have her father in attendance at the Alumnae Weekend presentation of her most recent award—Outstanding Alumna for Service to the College—before his death on June 3 at age 91.

Elizabeth Ansley Allan visited Ecuador recently with a team from the Episcopal Diocese of Atlanta which is forming a companion relationship with the young diocese there. While touring small churches in the Andes Mountains, she reports that she actually stood on the equator.

Marilyn McClure Anderson sold her Jackson Lake home and moved to Jackson, Ga., where she has bought an 1888 Victorian house in a historic district. In addition to restoring her home, she is still teaching and is an elder in her church, as well as being active in the Daughters of the American Revolution, historical society, and as a hospital volunteer.

Virginia Redhead Bethune and Carolyn Herman Sharp and their husbands have returned from Europe, where they sang along with other members of the Blacksburg [Va.] Master Chorale. The group joined with choirs in Vienna and the Czech Republic for performances.

Mary Oates Burton and Bob spent July in Chambéry, France, where she attended a National Endowment for the Humanities Institute on Jean-Jacques Rousseau. After returning home for a family emergency, they left again for Florence, Italy, where Bob was to give a speech at an international philosophy conference. Their daughter Laura has her first full-time job as a museum educator at the Dickson Mounds Museum in Illinois.

Kathy Cole Butler says she is good as new after a total hip replacement in 1994. Her first grandchild, Ben Butler, was born in January 1994. She enjoyed a trip to France in May.

Pat Guynup Corbus is to receive an M.F.A. in poetry from Warren Wilson College in January. She and her husband had their daughter and son-in-law (both professors in the Charlotte, N.C., area) and grandson Nate as visitors at their summer home in Michigan. Ralph Nelson, whose late wife was Louise Vanhee Nelson, also visited them.

Dede Farmer Grow, a high school guidance counselor, plans to retire next year. Her husband was scheduled to have cancer surgery in August and her seventh grandchild was due in September.

Frances Patterson Huffaker and Jim are back home in Kingsport, Tenn., after living in Japan for nearly four years. Both are retired and enjoyed a three-week summer trip to Wales and Scotland. Their daughter is making plans for a May wedding, and their daughter-in-law is beginning her residency after graduating from medical school a year ago.

Helen Sewell Johnson and Don have kept the road hot with their recent travels. They visited Helen's mother in Atlanta, one son in San Francisco, and two sons in New York City. After vacationing at their summer home on Grand Maran Island in the Bay of Fundy, they traveled to Washington, D.C., for a poodle show, then returned with the four poodles for more relaxing at Grand Maran before going back to their home in Philadelphia, Pa.

Virginia Fuller Lewis is beginning her 37th year of teaching in Lake Waccamaw, N.C. She has especially enjoyed workshops at St. Andrews College which will certify her to teach the academically gifted. Her son Bryan lives near Mt. Hood, Ore., and son Eric lives at Lake Waccamaw. Her husband, Graves, is semi-retired.

Carolyn Barker Lonas and husband, Jack, had an extensive tour of England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales this past summer. Carolyn recently wrote and taught a course on "Jesus and Women" at New Church Fellowship Church in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Nellie Strickland McFather is assistant professor of English of South Georgia College in Waycross. New books she had published in 1994 were Moonspell, Tears of Fire and An Old-Fashioned Southern Christmas. Her son Rob, a computer science graduate of Tennessee Tech, works in Neptune Beach, Fla.

Sis Burns Newsome and Jim, and Martha Riggins Brown and Rod celebrated their mutual Aug. 29 wedding anniversary at an inn in North Carolina, where they have been going for several years. The Newsome family also enjoyed a family reunion (all 15 of them) at Callaway Gardens in July.

Anne Terry Sherren attended a three-week workshop on nuclear magnetic resonance and mass spectrometry in Bozeman, Mont., in August and planned later to attend a National American Chemical Society meeting in Chicago to present a paper. As of Sept. 1, Anne marked her 30th year of teaching at North Central College in Naperville, Ill.

Donna Walkup Tabor writes that she loves reading about the class of '57 and sends her first contribution to the news. After teaching 13 years in Perry, Ga., she has been selling real estate for these last 16 years. She and Allen have two grandchildren and are expecting a third.

Margie Hill Truesdale's husband, Ben, retired from Delta after 32 years. Family members went to Hawaii for the last flight with him back to Los Angeles. Their son Walter married in Atlanta in July.

Joyce Skelton Wimberly enjoyed a visit in June with Margie Hill Truesdale in San Diego, Calif., when she and John went there for him to attend a meeting. Upon their return, they took three grandparents to Florida for a "fun but exhausting" week.

Jackie Johnson Woodward wrote en route from Germany where she and Steve toured with the Bach Choir of Bethlehem, Pa. They concentrated on the areas in East Germany where Bach lived and worked. Jackie saw Marian Hagedorn Briscoe and Charlie on New Year's Eve in West Point, Ga.

Nancy Niblack Dantzer writes from Panama City, Fla., that Lorenzo IV "Larry" is busy with civic duties and she is a volunteer at the Visual Arts Center. Presently, she is painting mainly in water colors, has works in a gallery in town, enters shows and modestly reports that she has won a few ribbons over the years. She has taught drawing in the past.

dren—seven boys and only one Agnes Scott candidate to follow in the family tradition. The only granddaughter belongs to a son, Lorenzo V "Lorry" and Susan Warren Dantzer '83. Oldest daughter Cindy Dantzer Shearer '80 lives in Albany Ga., with her husband and three boys and teaches their children at home. Youngest daughter Susan Dantzer Armagost '85 is married to a captain in the Royal Navy and lives in England.

Nancy was planning her third visit during the summer of 1995. Her mother, Ethel Redding Niblock '26, divides her time between Biloxi, Miss., and Highlands, N.C. Nancy's family certainly holds the most alumnae record for the class of '58.

Harriet Talmadge Mill's daughter Meggie underwent neurosurgery in January. Thankfully she has recovered and is back at work at the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Son Andrew graduated magna cum laude in June of 1994 from the University of Massachusetts-Boston in business and is studying to take the CPA exams. Youngest son Jamie graduated in May from Emerson College in Los Angeles.

This past year Hattie spent some of her time cultivating plants, cuttings and seeds with 12 members of the Belmont Garden Club in one of the member's greenhouses. Maybe she will give the class a report on her success with growing things.

The alumnae office received word that Elizabeth Shumaker Goodman continues to be active in Danville Little Theatre productions, and is scheduled to perform in The Glass Menagerie in the fall. She is a science and language arts teacher for sixth graders in the public schools in Danville, Va.

More than 35 members of the class of 1960 came back in April for the 35th reunion. There was a lot of talk about grandchildren and retirement plans. Most have decided what they want to be when they "grow up." There is a new member of the class of 1960: Suzanne Hoskins Brown introduced the group to Casey, her seeing-eye dog. Casey took part in all the reunion activities. When your secretary called to check on Casey's name, Suzanne's husband informed her that Suzanne was on a trip in the Rockies ... with the same group with whom she cross-country skis.

A big thank-you to all of the Atlanta area alumnae whose hospitality was warm and welcoming. Becky Evans Callahan and Becky Wilson Guberman produced a questionnaire which filled the class in on news from those who attended and from others who could not make it. There was a REAL survey done by Kay Richard Summers, but it is doubtful that the results can be seen in print.

Barbara Specht Reed hosted Mary Crook Moran, Suzanne Hoskins Brown, Julia McNairy Thornton and Cynthia Butts Kelley at a reunion with Allison Williams, their retired minister and husband of alumna Jo Culp Williams '49. There were many reminiscences about Sunday evenings at the Williamses' house.

The alumnae office received word that Nell Archer Congdon had a visit from Corky Feagin Stone in January when she was in town for a linguistics convention. They had a great time catching up on news, and even toured New Orleans harbor on the steamboat Natchez.

DAVIDSON COLLEGE PROFESSOR TO SERVE ON COLLEGE'S GUIDING BOARD

Jack Perry, former director of the Dean Rusk Program in International Studies and Professor of Political Science at Davidson College, has been named to serve on the Board of Trustees of Agnes Scott College for a four-year term that began in November.

Perry's educational background includes Mercer University (A.B.), Columbia University (M.A.) and The Russian Institute (Ph.D.). He served in the armed forces during the Korean War and later became a U. S. Foreign Service Officer. Perry was named ambassador to Bulgaria by President George Bush for three years and recently completed his presidency of the Bulgarian-American Fellowship Society. Perry served as a reporter for the Associated Press in Atlanta and the Macon Telegraph and has published works in newspapers such as the New York Times and Los Angeles Times. His prior academic career includes work at The Citadel as professor of government and international studies.

Perry and his wife, Elizabeth Smith Perry, have four children, including daughter Laura, who graduated from ASC in 1990.

Kay's sister and her husband, Kay's daughter and her husband, Kay's son, Kay's husband and Kay went to Burlington, Vt., to celebrate the graduation of their youngest child, Katie. Katie is the last of 10 grandchildren to finish college, and her parents have been to everyone's celebration.

Martha Lambeth Harris and Ben, Judy Albergotti Hines and Paul, and Susan Abernathy McCreary and Bob gathered for Mardi Gras in Mobile this year. Martha wasn't sure whether the others anticipated the "lack of purpose" of the event, but a grand time was had by all. The theme of the float for Ben's mystic group this year was "Pepe (Ben) and the Three Amigos" (Martha, Judy and Susan). Ben and Martha became grandparents in June thanks to son Wayt and his wife, Elizabeth. Their other son, Ben, and his wife, Michel, have just moved back to practice law in Mobile.

Susan Abernathy McCreary has published Strawberry Serendipity—Unexpected Discoveries. This is her seventh cookbook and the third one on strawberries. This one focuses on history, folklore and how strawberries are found in serendipitous places such as art, music and religion.

The alumnae office received news that Nancy Moore Kuykendall is a counselor in private practice. Her husband is president of Davidson College, where she "volunteers."

Becky Bruce Jones is writing and publishing a computer-oriented chemistry book for labs.

Helen Jones Robin and Ty traveled to France, Italy and San Francisco. Ty has retired but still does some consulting. Their children are in Atlanta, studying and/or working. Helen is the director of the Independent Presbyterian Church's Day School in Birmingham. She sees Leigh Maddox Brown often—Leigh is director of new-member outreach and assimilation for the same church.

Mary Hamp Lowrey Goodman teaches junior high in DeKalb County. Daughter Ann just completed her residency at University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and plans to practice radiology at a Decatur, Ala., hospital. Ann's husband, John, is an anesthesiologist. Son Neill will spend a few months in Lancaster, England. Mary Hamp's husband is vice president for purchasing for the Huddle House Restaurant Chain.

Nancy Sibley Rempe is a grandmother—Isabelle, born Sept. 14, 1994.

Edna Vass Stucky hopes some class members will travel to Kansas for a visit. Her children are at home; husband John is in construction; Edna still works in a local clinic lab.

Kathryn Mobley Riddlehoover and her newly-retired husband, Ted, are foot-loose and fancy free and are grandparents. Kathryn, an avid golfer, has played the Augusta National Course.

Jane Lancaster Boney often sees Leland Draper, Janie Fincher Peterson and Betty

Ann Gatewood Wylie to catch up on the news. Betty Ann's daughter, Laura, graduated from the University of the South in Seawee along with Leigh Maddox Brown's daughter, Elizabeth.

Frances Anderson continues her work in art therapy and plans to teach graduate courses at Florida State and later in the San Francisco area. Her video tape Courage! Together We Heal was shown at Purdue University as part of a national exhibition on family issues. Frances was honored at Illinois State as one of 17 distinguished professors.

Deedie Withers Estes is an interim library director. She and daughter Marjorie travelled to Rome last fall. Deedie is also online: eestes@unccecs.edu.

Elizabeth Thomas Freyer and Frisky travelled to France in April and "lodged" in a chateau. They were in Paris for V-E Day anniversary ceremonies and missed seeing Lyn Lindskog Deroy, who lives in Tours.

Carol Frye Waddell is an active tournament bridge player.

Mary Louise Hunt Rubesch is a school learning specialist. Son Andy is a sophomore at the University of Washington, and daughter, Katie, is in the seventh grade. Mary Louise is a grandmother, through her three step-children. Her husband is doing fine after a heart transplant almost two years ago.

Ann Risher Phillips and Bob were transferred from Delaware and now live atop a mountain in Tennessee.

Louise Zimmerman Austell and Ned have been visiting classmates: Valerie McLanahan Goetz and Charlie at a wedding in Winston-Salem, Judith Thompson Travis and Jay, and Miriam Wilson Weems and Tom in Jackson, Miss. Other visits were with Frannie Bailey Graves and Bill in Atlanta and Libba Lee Neal and Heidi in Columbus. Louise's daughter graduated from Rhodes College in Memphis, the first graduation she'd attended since her own.

Karen Haralson de Galvez lives in Concepcion, Chile, enjoys her two grandsons, and has a new pottery studio. Her youngest daughter just completed a year at the American University of Paris and will attend Reed College, Portland, in the fall. She visited Valerie Goetz and Anne Miller Boyd in Atlanta.

Carolyn Pollard Pirnie loves Washington, D.C., and volunteers at the White House. She recently visited Cottie Slade in Atlanta.

Beth Webb Nugent has retired from medical practice at Emory.

Nancy Abernethy Underwood became the marketing officer for Park Meridian Bank in Charlotte and loves her work.

Ina Jones Hughs is a columnist for Scripps-Howard. Son George is a broadcast journalist; McNair is married and teaches fifth grade in Houston; and Clair is working on her master's in speech pathology.

Nancy Duvall Hargrove, online at ndh1@ra.msstate.edu, writes that her book on Sylvia Plath's poetry was published in 1994. Son Guy received his master's in information systems. At Guy's May 20 wedding, Betty Wylie entertained at the rehearsal dinner with an original fairytale about the couple. Daughter Meg received a B.S. in occupational therapy from the University of Mississippi Medical Center.

Ann Hunter Wickes made her annual pilgrimage to Atlanta this August and ran into Kathy Stubbs, "although I missed her by several feet," says Ann. Kathy was running along Ponce de Leon as Ann was driving by. They shouted a few greetings across the road. Ann's now back at home contemplating how to create a niche for herself teaching science to young children in museums or schools near Syracuse.

Susan Stevens Hitchcock is vice president for client services at Turknett Associates Leadership Group. Her daughter Tiffani was married May 20.

Meanwhile, your secretary is thinking of showing slides from her vacation in the next issue if she doesn't have news from anyone soon. Thirty-two cents (at last writing) and a card to her gets your name in lights. Anyone on the Internet can e-mail her at doherty@care.org.

Susan McCann Butler has spent the summer recovering from surgery for a ruptured disk. She missed the last month of teaching at Thomas Nelson Community College, where she is associate professor of English. The gang hopes Susan is feeling much better now.

Eleanor McCallie Cooper is recuperating from a back injury for which she was hospitalized. The class sends best wishes for a speedy and complete recovery. Eleanor is researching and writing an historical novel for young girls based on her family history. In her "spare" time, she does organizational development for communities as a consultant.

Kathy Harlan has accepted a position with Melita North America as director of marketing. She and Bruce are leaving the Pennsylvania winters for sunny Clearwater, Fla.

Betty and Jimmy Knight's daughter Sarah was married June 17. While many Scott alumnae were there, including Jimmy's sister Kenny Knight Linton '65, Georgia Tech also was amply represented. The couple left the church in the "Ramblin' Wreck." Sarah and her husband are Tech alumni and her brother Byron is in his first year at Tech.

Peggy Moore Hall and Conrad's sons were pursuing academics this summer. Mercer, a student at Amherst, studied at Cambridge and travelled in Europe. Cosby, a history major at Dartmouth, attended a regular term there in preparation for a winter internship. After Christmas, all the Halls are going to Africa.

Pat Parks Hughes reports that her daughter Christy graduated from Yale in 1994 and is working in Boston, Mass.

Reagan earns certification

Clare B. Reagan '71 earned the Certified Association Executive (CAE) designation from the American Society of Association Executives (ASAE) in August. Among association professionals, CAE is an indication of demonstrated skill in leadership, activity in community affairs and expertise in association management.

Prior to certification, applicants are rated on their experience and accomplishments in association management and must successfully complete a comprehensive one-day examination which tests general knowledge of the association management profession.

Reagan is a training and education administrator at TAPPI, a technical association for the paper and related industries that is made up of 12 technical divisions and more than 33,000 members worldwide.

Your secretary also heard from Angela Carter Sprunger, who is still in Burkina Faso, West Africa, with her husband, Mark, working as co-country representatives for the Mennonite Central Committee. Angela and Mark have four boys, including Ben, 4, and 1-year-old twins David Andrew and Daniel Warren. Their oldest son, Jason, attends the French International School, and Angela reports that he speaks better French than his parents.

Melanie Best has joined the ranks of homeowners, recently purchasing a condo in Hoboken, N.J., just across the Hudson River from New York City, where she works for the American Civil Liberties Union. Melanie writes that living in Hoboken is relatively quiet and peaceful, compared to the noise and stress of the city.

Ginny Lee McMurray trekked to New Orleans in June to visit relatives and attend a family wedding. She managed to squeeze in a visit with Eleanor Graham, who enjoys working with the Phelps, Dunbar law firm there. Eleanor had a busy summer that included a trip to the beach in Florida with Caroline, 8, and Benjamin, 5. Ginny also talked recently with Elizabeth Wells Lane, who attended her 20th high school reunion in Gastonia, N.C., in August. Your secretary was happy to see so many classmates at the reunion in April, and couldn't get over the fact that everyone looked the same as they did 15 years ago (or better)!

Just before the reunion, your secretary had a visit from Liz Mosgrove Land, Herb, Caroline and Big B (a.k.a. Brad). In the immortal words of Lizzie, "What a hoot!" The group had great fun merging all five of their children, and, except for the fact that Liz stepped on most of the porch toys and sat in a pan of bubbles, all went well.

Pat Arnen Brookshire and husband David joined your secretary's gang at a Braves game this summer. The Braves lost, but the group failed to notice as most spent four innings catching up! The Brookshires are house-hunting in the Decatur area and hope to move very soon.

Sarah Fairburn Pannill and your secretary are enjoying new babies (Ruth and Steven respectively) and recently attended a baby shower for Kimberly Clark Douglas. Kim's baby, Madison Nicole, surprised everyone by arriving eight weeks early. Mother and baby are doing amazingly well in a very frustrating situation. "Maddy" must stay at the hospital until she is strong enough to go home. Needless to say, Kim has spent lots of time driving to and from Northside Hospital.

Sally Harris had a tough year in which she lost both her mother and her father. She is still residing in Rocky Hill, Conn., and works as a nurse at a local hospital. The class hopes next year is a healthy, happy one for you, Sally.

As a result of the reunion, your secretary had a chance to "do lunch" with Jenny Spencer Osorio. Jenny recently moved to Marietta, and wound up buying Krista Wolter Skelton's previous domicile! Small world. Jenny has a fascinating job with the CDC, and you'd have to ask her to explain it to you!

Of course, the more traditional methods of submitting news are still welcomed, but if you have access to a personal computer, a modem, and a bit of technology, then you can simply submit your latest "goings-on" electronically: Teresa.Dore@AtlantaGA.attgis.com.

Your secretary looks forward to hearing from all the "Mounties" out there, "techies" or not!

All is well for your secretary, except for a nasty bike wreck in June. Thanks to a helmet, nothing was damaged "upstairs" but she'll have lovely scars for a few years as a result.

Claire West Paddock was recently promoted to business manager with HNS Software and married Peter Paddock Jr. in October.

Jennifer Boyd Miller taught summer school in Athens.

Gretchen Bruner Solomon and husband David vacationed in Charleston during the week of the Fourth of July. Gretchen was accepted to graduate school in higher education at North Carolina State University.

Karen Anderson vacationed to Mexico in July. Karen's big news is that she was accepted to the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard, and she began classes in August.

Elizabeth Ivie recently moved to Atlanta.

Amanda DeWees was a teaching assistant in English this summer at the University of Georgia. She is doing well and studying hard.

Your secretary spent several minutes on the phone with Laurel McDonald Peace recently. She reports that she and husband Matt are doing great and are thrilled to be settled in their new home in Jonesboro. Laurel works in workers compensation at Georgia-Pacific Corporation.

Every now and then, Kim Lamkin Drew sees Laurel in the lobby of the Georgia-Pacific building, since Kim works there as well.

Paige Edwards Stanfield and husband Jim are busy this summer remodeling their Decatur home. When your secretary

PARTING WORDS

JULIA THOMPSON SMITH, LONG-TIME FRIEND OF AGNES SCOTT COLLEGE, DIES IN EARLY DECEMBER.

Julia Thompson Smith '31 died on Dec. 1. A woman whose deep faith informed the commitments of her life, Smith was a long-time friend and benefactor of Agnes Scott College.

In the fall of 1994, reflecting on her involvement in the College, she remarked, "As I look back across the tapestry of my life, I can see the hand of God at work in so many places now though often I was not aware of it at all at the time."

Those who look at Agnes Scott today and in the years ahead will see the loving hand of Julia Smith at work in many ways, especially through the gifts she and her husband gave to endow the chaplaincy and the chair for free enterprise held by Professor Edmund Sheehy.

Daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. W. Taliaferro Thompson, Julia Smith was born in Petersburg, Va., in 1911 and graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Agnes Scott in 1931.

Generous with her resources of both money and time, her service in the Atlanta community extended far beyond her involvement with the College. She served First Presbyterian Church of Atlanta for over 60 years in a wide variety of ways, including as a Sunday School teacher and Meals on Wheels volunteer.

For many years, including three as president, she was associated with the Child Service Association, now Families First. Other community service included membership on the Board of the Student Aid Foundation, the Junior League of Atlanta, the Colonial Dames of America and the 20th Century Study Club.

She is survived by her husband, Hal L. Smith, trustee emeritus of Agnes Scott, who served as chair of the Board of Trustees, 1956-1973, by her children John E. Smith II and Claiborne S. Jones, four grandchildren, two brothers, W. Taliaferro Thompson Jr. of Richmond Va., and D. Gregg Thompson of Miami Shores, Fla., and a sister, Mrs. Ben Lacy (Anne) Rose '38 of Richmond, Va.

From time to time, fortunate people find their lives blessed by the presence of a truly gracious and generous spirit. Julia Thompson Smith was one whose deep commitment and hope-filled vision blessed many lives. I am grateful to God for the grace of her life, for all that she meant to those she loved and to this College, and especially grateful to have been privileged to know her and to glimpse, even if only briefly, her vision of the tapestry of her life, shaped and formed in faithful response to God's guiding hand.

Julia Thompson Smith: Her vision of the tapestry of life was shaped and formed in faithful response to God's guiding hand.
