Dedication

TO THE ALUMNAE

—to those who have given four years of their lives to Agnes Scott; and who have in the giving, received something of the inspiration that through them has become a part of their Alma Mater—

the Student Body lovingly dedicates this volume.

Foreword

THE purpose of this book is a comprehensive one, and the staff holds its breath as you begin to turn the pages. Dedicated to the Alumnae it attempts to remind them tangibly of their Alma Mater, and to present some from their number who have along a few selected lines made an appreciable stir in the world; and compiled for the Student Body, it endeavors to interpret for them, we hope truly, one year of their four at Agnes Scott. If our purpose is too ambitious for us, and we have failed, we ask your pardon.

Class History

*"Ah, distinctly I remember
It was in one hot September"*

four years ago that we arrived two hundred and twenty strong at Agnes Scott, each of us with the impression that ours was a great contribution to make to the world, and that now during our college career was a very good time to begin making it. In a word—each of us would startle faculty and fellow students alike with the greatness of our importance. Ah me! The wonders time does bring to pass.

It is said that physical unfitnes lies at the root of many cases of melancholia. This would be sufficient explanation of the total change in the sentiments and views of these Freshmen by the end of the first week. Exhausted by long hours of standing in line for the privilege of making a little financial contribution at the treasurer's office, and more waiting for that inaccessible little gathering known as the Admission Committee who met in the dim cellars of Main building; crushed by daily struggles with the other seekers after wisdom in other fruitless efforts to reach the window where the priceless possessions—books—were to be obtained; it is not surprising that these innocent young girls in whose hearts courage had burned so high, now broken in body and spirit, should begin to slink around the campus as so many little inferiority complexes. But even yet, little did they know of the agonies of History 1, or of that tedious and painful process known as the cultivation of "the daily theme eye." At least after this life could hardly be any more intolerable.

Ah, couldn't it! Why then that you-don't-know-the-half-of-it-dearie expression in the eyes of the Sophomores? Oh that week in the hands of those tormentors—rouge on our noses, cold cream on our cheeks, green ribbons on our hair—a horrible green that tried our beauty to the utmost.

Life during these feverish weeks ran from trial to tribulation. Stunt night was upon us and gone before we could fully realize its great significance. And tho the black Cat was not ours that year, we will beam with pride over memories of that finished theatrical production we presented.

By slow degrees the year dragged by and eventually, of course, final exams drew into sight. By now we had become philosophical, and in the light of past experiences we could smile wearily and think: "Even this too shall pass."

Another September came around, and again we arrived on the scene—this year with real grounds for our feeling of superiority. Had we not lived and learned, and was not worldly wisdom now ours? It was our turn to assume that Mona Lisa smile in the presence of the newcomers. Being less burdened with the novelty of education, we devoted great energy toward ensnaring the Black Cat. And not in vain. For with another stunt night, puss was ours. Incidentally, however, we did study, this year substituting the joys of Bible 1—memorizing the kings of Israel and Judah—for those of the daily theme eye. Finally came spring, and with it all the joys of commencement—teas, luncheons, and breakfasts for our Seniors. Truly, it was great to be a Sophomore.

The Junior year began, continued, and ended with one all-consuming thought, and that—money! Was not this the year we had lived for—that of the Junior-Senior banquet? Ah, what worries had we had during those carefree Freshman and Sophomore years? This indeed was real responsibility. We sold chocolates, gave circuses. We schemed and worked. We painted countless Mother Goose designs for menu cards. But after all the toil recompense was ours, when in the spring the banquet night arrived. The music, the color of the flowers and gay dresses were as if the rainbow had fallen and shattered into a thousand bits. And another year was gone.

One more vacation, one more September, and Seniorhood with all its prestige and privileges was ours. Could we ever have been those hurrying harried little Freshmen of four years ago? We who now strolled so nonchalantly into meals at all hours? Who burned lights far into the once forbidden hours of night? The dignity of our position was forcibly impressed upon us on the day we walked sedately down the chapel aisle, for the first time wearing our Senior gowns, and kneeling before Miss Hopkins were duly invested with our rights. Time had been so short that it all seems a dream. Christmas passed, Founder's Day came, and we who for three years had watched with envious eyes as the lords and ladies danced the minuet, realized that it was at last our time to don powdered wigs and brocades. And finally Commencement day—our Commencement. When we realize that next September we will not be spending hours in fruitless efforts to see the Electives Committee or sitting through History class in misery lest the bell should not ring before our lack of knowledge be discovered—but that maybe we ourselves will be teaching—or washing dishes, we begin to be convinced of the truth of those words we have laughed to scorn countless times: "Girls, you may not believe it now, but college days are the happiest days of your life."

"The Prophet"

(WITH APOLOGIES TO KAHLIL GIBRAN.)

HMAJONA, the chosen and imposed upon, who was the goat of her class, had labored four years in the city of Decatur for the Diploma that was to evolve and bear her back to the village of her birth. And in the fourth year on the thirty-first day of May, the month of rejoicing, she climbed the tower of Main and looked toward the Auditorium; and she beheld her Diploma coming with Dr. J. H. Finley. Then the gates of her heart were flung open, and her joy flew all the way to Atlanta.

But as she climbed down from the tower, a sadness came over her, and she thought in her heart:

How shall I escape in peace and without sorrow?

For as she walked from afar Freshmen and Sophomores and Juniors were leaving the Tea Room and the Library. And she heard their voices calling her name:

Go not yet away from us. Disclose the next ten years to us.

And she answered:

Hottentots, of what can I speak save of the Seniors, of their achievements and of their careers?

Then said a voice:

Speak to us of the inmates of Rebecca Scott Hall.

Therefore was her heart visited by mirth; and she answered in a Broken English voice:

Eleanor Albright shall be distinguished as that woman who will first swim the Atlantic Ocean. Great are the uses of Perseverance!

Reba Bayliss shall mingle a life of luxury with the practicability of a job as motorcycle cop.

Leila Bell shall amass a large fortune designing, advertising, and modelling artificial coiffures (wigs).

Frances Buchanan, after the final break with "Broncho", shall devote her life to serving neglected cow-punchers. Her victrola is to be her chief means of entertaining them; but often, beneath the strains of the music one may be able to hear her sadly moan, "He was grand to me."

Grace Carr shall reach the height of her ambition in a partnership in the medical profession—life partnership.

Cephise Cartwright shall serve humanity as an eminent paper hanger;—no crepe handled.

Elizabeth Clark shall sacrifice her youth to the investigation of the life habits of the cheese mite. Untold benefits will be the result to posterity.

Mary Davis shall desert a diplomatic career to write testimonials: I reached my marvellous position solely thru the use of (Fill in with any well-known product).

Marcia Green will not be able to withstand the strain of incessant guarding of the Phone Pad. After recovering from the Nervous Breakdown which will result, she will take the vow of maidenhood, and will secure an excellent position with the organization for Travelers' Aid.

Mary Heath and Mary Hedrick shall become notorious for the famous slogan, "Heath and Hedrick, Hair-Restorer for Hoary Hounds. When everything else fails, Try Us."

Elizabeth Henderson shall become a first-class secretary; and also, elope with her employer.

Ann Heys shall after vigorous campaigning win the much coveted title "Miss America." She will attribute her success to four years of intensive concentration at Agnes Scott.

Mae Erskine Irvine, having received excellent training in college shall reach unheard-of fame as a Physical Education Instructor. Her success will be based on the special Repetition Method which she uses on her pupils.

Anne George Irwin shall attain prosperity in a Chewing Gum Factory, by beginning at the very bottom—an analysis of the material itself.

Elsa Jacobsen shall astonish her friends by the seriousness of her career as a mannequin for Jenny.

Ethel Littlefield shall be ranked among the world's greatest Psychologists.

Leila Joiner shall find supreme bliss in the management of a thoroughly nautical house boat and Jock.

Pearl Kunnes shall put Paul Whiteman in the streets by her superb direction of a world-famous orchestra.

Louise Leonard shall assume the profession of teaching in a deaf-and-dumb school, as a matchless means for preserving the voice.

Mary Weems shall attain the pinnacle in the Expert Accountant line. She will justly give the credit of her success to her four years of intensive work with Bills.

Sara Stillman shall raise the standard of the profession of Horse Doctor by her able, sympathetic work in that field.

Peggy Rankin shall be decorated with every honor for her priceless contribution as General of the Woman's Legion in the next war.

Carolina McCall shall establish a nation-wide system of Day Nurseries—personally supervised, where her baby talk and her "Baby Face" will have free vent in a worthy cause.

Catherine Mitchell and Martha Johnston shall fill two dire needs in the Salvation Army. Guess What?

Mildred Morrow shall be the most attractive feature in Barnum and Bailey's best-known side-show, a Snake Charmer.

Ruth McMillan shall become fired with zeal for the study of insects and shall tread the globe with a butter-fly net as her only weapon.

Mitchell Moore shall charm audiences the world over with her esthetic and toe dancing.

Miriam Preston and Margie Wakefield shall continue their partnership on the race track. Miriam shall be a famous jockey and Margie the keenest of intellectual Bookmakers.

Ruth McDonald shall serve her native city as the most influential member of its police force.

Mamie Shaw shall found and operate a Hospital for Distressed squirrels.
Elizabeth Lynn shall prove an invaluable asset to Ringling Brothers by her remarkable Trapeze Performances.

Marguerite Russell shall be able to make an excellent living as the "Radio Announcer with the Personality."

Ruth De Wandelaer shall ably fill the position of Dog Catcher in a large American metropolis.

Evalyn Powell shall be noted as "The Edgar Guest of the Fairer Sex"; her most touching themes shall be the victrola and Little Nell.

Smith, Willie White, and Rainey, Frances shall be renowned as "The Phurious Photographers—Pictures of Animals a Specialty."

Ellen Douglass Leyburn, Elizabeth Lilly, and Elizabeth Norfleet shall immortalize a vaudeville skit, "The Three Must-We-Bear-(it)'s or Wisdom, Wit and Wonder," which shall attract throngs of admirers from the four corners of the earth.

And her diaphragm gave out, and her co-ordination was destroyed, and she sought rest and refreshment from Dr. Hewey. But the Hottentots pursued her, and clamoured, saying,

Speak to us of the inmates of Inman Hall.

And she gulped her Coca-Cola, wiped her brow, and continued:

Blanche Berry shall lead a rich and helpful life as an official chaperone to points all over Europe: Italian tours specialized in.

Josephine Bridgman shall do untold good as Prune Supervisor in a large orphan asylum.

Georgia Mae Burns shall fulfill all expectations as Walter Hampden's illustrious successor.

Louise Capen shall spend her summers as director of her own camp. During the winter she will conduct walking tours to Alaska.

Marion Daniel shall succeed delightfully as a renowned County Demonstrator.

Frances Dobbs and Pauline McLeod shall build up a fine business as Radio Experts, following the splendid slogan "All Knocks Answered."

Emilie Erhlich shall solve the problem of boredom in marriage by extending her Chinese honeymoon indefinitely and taking advantage of the reasonable rates in jinrickishaws.

Mary Ferguson shall become well-known in circles earthly and celestial as a spiritual medium.

Rachel Henderlite shall challenge the tallest Scotch Nobleman (see back numbers of the New York Times) to a Harry Lauder contest—and come out winner by a head.

Hulda McNeel shall live up to a prophecy foretold by one most suited to judging her capabilities: Huldy shall "make a good wife."

Courtney Wilkinson shall continue her studies at Johns Hopkins where the authorities shall see to it that she has plenty of time to "mull over" the explanation of the aversion oil and water have to mixing.

Helen Lewis shall startle the world with her ability as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. She will re-adopt the use of the judicial wig.

Lucia Nimmons shall lead a modern Troubadour's life with Mr. Riley Scott as her hero and example.

And her head dropped with weariness; and she longed to put up an Asleep Sign. But the Hottentots crowded around her and demanded:

Tell us of the inmates of Main Building and of the Cottages.

Then she asked for a cup of coffee, and as she sipped it she found courage; and she declared:

Maurine Bledsoe and Louisa White shall form a team of workers highly in demand in all fields, Efficiency Expert ("Fish") and General Superintendent ("Soup"). "Follow our Advice" shall completely obliterate the word bankruptcy from the American language.

Kitty Houston shall be noted as the foremost Prosecuting Attorney in Tennessee.

Charlotte Buckland shall gain fame as the most efficient Church Secretary in Florida.

Emily Daughtry shall be leader of the most noted Fire Brigade in the Rocky Mountains.

Virginia Sevier shall receive the death-bed instructions of Edna Wallace Hopper and Annette Kellerman, and will carry on their noble efforts.

Sarah Shields shall completely outshine Patrick Henry with her immortal words, "Take your time, little girl; this is the honest truth!"

Louise Plumb shall go to Europe and make a name for herself as the continent's most famous wine connoisseur.

Cleo McLaurine shall create and fill a demand for graduate Scrub Ladies.

Judith Wilson shall defy her parents and run away to join the Russian ballet under the noted Mordkin. Her interpretation of the Fire Bell at Agnes Scott shall be the most talked of thing in America.

Alice Weichselbaum shall prove that the most precious possessions come in the smallest packages by her excellent work as a furniture mover.

Ewin Baldwin shall desert the intellectual life for the adventurous uncertainty of existence as Flagman on the C. & G.

Valerie Folts and Margaret Neel shall form a trust regulating campaigns—military, religious, social, and financial—and shall thus contribute untold service to the business world.

And the coffee having taken too much effect, she succumbed to acute nervousness. And soda was administered; and as the crowds urged:

Tell us of the Day Students.

She continued:

Evelyn Albright and Louise Bansley shall bear witness to the fact that "it pays to advertise": By constant use and testimony of the efficacy of Dr. Payne's Tooth Paste, Evelyn shall attain a remarkable proficiency in skiing; Louise will find that Murine—for the eyes—will bring about a marvelous accuracy in pole-vaulting.

Emma Bernhardt shall lend a zest to her married life by finding the equations of spinach and angel food cake, and plotting the curves of the weather and the family budget.

Frances Chambers, Susan Clayton, Elizabeth McCallie, Kenneth Maner, and Grace Zachry shall establish a correspondence course in How to Go Through College Without Studying.

Martha Crowe shall supersede Babe Ruth as King of Swat.

Ruth Casey shall become the moving spirit in Big Business for the next decade.

Dorothy Chamberlain shall become a designer of Komfortable Klass-room Kouches: "Sleep in spite of misery."

Lillian Clement shall amass a million in the wholesale grocery business.

Mildred Cowan shall lead a happy though silent life as a prominent Florist who will only say it with flowers.

Gene Dozier shall develop a dual personality; her days shall be employed in the humble duties of Plain Sewing, while her nights shall be a round of gaiety as a Female Gigolo.

Mabel Dumas shall combine psychology and business in a highly successful career as Monkey Trainer in a zoo.

Evelyn Satterwhite shall open a new field for women by her breath taking record as traffic policeman at Five Points.

Frances Freeborn shall make a record unthought-of by Barney Oldfield as an eminent auto racer.

Venie Belle Grant shall be designated as Frances Freeborn's mechanic and the most powerful influence in the latter's success. The two young ladies shall attribute their success to the excellent training afforded by their Fords in college days.

Katherine Gilliland shall astound the world in her chosen role as sword swallower in Keith's circuit.

Marcia Horton and Louise Lovejoy shall add to the joys of the Decatur street car passengers by beautifying the telephone poles to Atlanta—decorations changed weekly.

Maude Jackson shall make her mark in the world as an illustrious cigar saleslady in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

Lamar Lowe shall employ Taxi Driving as a stepping stone to greater achievements in the future.

Caroline McKinney shall wed the sole heir to the Brewster millions and manage her budget so that at the end of each month she may come to the rescue of deserving but short-sighted college girls.

Emily Nelson, Stella Pittman, Elizabeth Sanders shall choose the movies as their sphere and delight untold audiences with false eyelashes and glycerine tears.

Emily Stead, Edith Strickland, and Elizabeth Vary shall sacrifice their earthly existence to be sealed into a wonder projectile and shot to Mars to study the economic situation on that planet.

Louise Davis and Ida Landau shall progress from unassuming modistes in an obscure dressmaker's establishment to vast wealth and honor with Flo Zeigfeld.

Willie May Coleman shall lose her head and elope with an ice man—and choose as her motto from then on "Keep Kool."

And her posture fell from A- to G; and I. G. could offer her no relief; for nervous exhaustion was at the basis of her gestures. And the crowd melted away—its curiosity satisfied. But Miss Daugherty refused to allow her to faint and led her off in triumph. And she boarded the train with all her belongings. And she said:

If our hands shall meet at our next reunion, we shall see what we shall see.

—Roberta Winter, Class Prophet.

Enchanted Ground

*Open, beloved, swing the gates apart!
Do you not know my footstep, ground enchanted,
You, of whom vivid memories are planted
Firmer than mighty forests in my heart?*

*Assailed by rapture as your blossoms burst
With sweetness, I dream fairy Springs hereafter.
I warm to friendly hands and comrades' laughter—
You teem with fresh adventures for my thirst.*

*Lovely your graces ripple in the sun,
Lonely and skyward looms your dauntless tower.
Oh, let me capture this exquisite hour
When dancing joy and silent pain are one!*

*On tiptoe, wondering, I have caught my breath
As your enchantment like a fragrance drifted
Into my life. And then my eyes are lifted
To hills of beauty where there is no death.*

The Silhouette

The SILHOUETTE is part of the jigsaw puzzle of every year—when you fit around it the pieces that are furnished by your own association, you'll have a picture from your experience. The SILHOUETTE hopes merely to furnish some of the materials for you to work with. And in the same way the Silhouette tries to preserve something of the outward form of our days and thereby to offer a key—a symbol that unlocks gates to private little paths of memory. When you turn these pages, if you feel again the warm breath that somehow persisted in blowing across your days, if your year-book is at all suggestive of your small pains and “dear delights,” then only will it live.

The Silhouette hopes that it is not entirely unintelligible to those who have not shared the varied doings and beings it attempts to hold between its covers.

The Agonistic

You ask me who I am and I shall tell you.

I am published each week by the students of Agnes Scott College.

I make my appearance on Wednesday afternoon.

I am published by an Editor-in-chief, and controlled by a Business Manager who have their assistants, and by a staff whose pictures you see.

I owe my being really, however, to faithful reporters whose pictures you do not see, but whose work appears every time I appear.

I try to give the college community and those who are interested in me the news of what is happening at this college, as well as at other colleges.

I am the AGONISTIC.

The Aurora

For many years the AURORA has been the literary medium at Agnes Scott. Its ideals have always been to publish the best work done by students, to stimulate efforts along literary lines and interest in the best literature of all times, and to uphold the highest ideals in writing. In the AURORA appear representations of achievements in essay, short story, play and poem, besides an editorial, a Book Review section and an Exchange department. While maintaining this balance the magazine attempts both to present the best efforts of students and to preserve a high standard of values in reading and writing. Realizing that even in writing there is a "happy medium" and that this medium is a quality of the outstanding literature of the past, there is in the AURORA, for this reason, a desirable absence of extremes—either in attitude, in subject, or in style. Perhaps because of this tendency towards conservatism, the AURORA is a more worthy instrument of literary activity than the ordinary college publication, which tends to vacillate between the ultra-conservative and the over modern. Thus it is an excellent demonstration of the literary life at Agnes Scott.

Play Writing

Drama is beginning to mean something more at Agnes Scott than just an evening's entertainment. Through Blackfriars, and for the last two years through the playwriting class conducted by Miss Nan Stephens, we are taking a definite stand in the Little Theatre movement—encouraging dramatic appreciation among the students as a whole, as well as dramatic composition among those who feel a greater interest. This is the second year that Blackfriars has presented a program of four one-act plays written by the class in play-writing.

May Day
Endymion

By EVELYN WOOD

Scene: A wooded dell on Mt. Latmos in Caria, Greece.

Time: When gods were many and beauty was worshipped.

PART I

It is the hour just before dawn. Darkness in the person of gloomy scarfed maidens, hovers over the scene. Now Apollo with his chariot of flame rides through the glen, dispelling dark clouds and bringing dawn to the world. He rides off and joyous shouts are heard coming from all directions. A troop of little children come in, and after them comes a procession of maidens, shepherds and the high priest, all bearing sacrifices, for it is the occasion of a festival to Pan. Last of all come the hunters with their leader, Endymion. The assembly ranges itself about the shrine: the priest offers sacrifices, gives prayers and thanks. The ceremony completed, there is a celebration in which a group of huntsmen try their skill with bow and arrow, discus, weights and javelins. Endymion's prowess at manly arts is greatest. At last the festival ends and one by one the people leave.

PART II

The scene is the same glen on another day. Through the woods comes Diana, goddess of the chase, who calls to her maidens. Together they chase the deer through the trees and slay some of the beasts. They linger in the woods awhile, playing the lyre and resting, but finally leave. There remains only Diana, who has caught a glimpse of the hunter, Endymion, coming through the trees and wishes to see his valor. She watches from behind a tree as he spies a boar, creeps upon him and finally gores him. She watches his dance of triumph and falls in love with him, her usually cold heart being captured at his prowess in the art in which she herself excels. She slips away through the trees as he throws himself on the ground to rest. He rests; the day is quickly passing. In the background shepherds go by with their flocks waving a greeting to Endymion. The dim-scarfed maidens bring the day to a close. Then stars peep out and night claims the scene. Soft music is heard and Diana appears to Endymion who gazes on her enraptured. He woos her but she leaves him, dancing back through the woods.

PART III

The scene is again the wooded dell. Endymion appears, pining for his immortal love, dangerous though he realizes this love to be. The dryads from their trees and naiads from their streams come to assuage his grief. Still he is unhappy. Pan, the wood god, sends a band of satyrs, who weave strange spells about him, but he cannot forget his infatuation. Still yearning, he at last calls on Diana, his love. She comes in her moon radiance. He is about to embrace her when there is a great thundering and Mercury appears. The shepherds and maidens rush in at the noise. Mercury bears the announcement that Jupiter is sending punishment upon Endymion for his presumption in wooing and yielding to the love of an immortal. Jupiter will allow him to live and remain forever young, but he must sleep perpetually. Endymion and Diana are heartsick. Spirits of sleep appear drawing a low-wheeled chariot covered with drooping poppies. Thereon steps Endymion; he bids sad farewell to the moon goddess. When all seems hopeless the spirit of eternal youth, sent by Jupiter, enters to bring consolation and to triumph over the dreariness of perpetual sleep. Endymion and Diana are comforted. Slowly the procession moves off, bearing Endymion to a cave on Mt. Latmos, where he sleeps to this day.

Athletics

Athletics

When one starts to tell what athletics mean at Agnes Scott, she is faced with telling what means something different to almost every girl. It does not mean intercollegiate athletics to any, for Agnes Scott has placed herself among those colleges whose sports are purely interclass. This does not mean that interest or excitement is lacking, as any one who has ever gone to scream herself hoarse for her class can testify.

MISS WILBURN

MISS HAYNES

To one girl, athletics may mean the thrill that comes when she chases a swiftly moving hockey ball down a large field in the haze of a cold autumn afternoon. It may mean the glad companionship of a long hike when one cooks one's own supper or buys it at Child's. To another, athletics may mean the joy of competing for a basketball and the swift passing of the ball. There are those who go to enjoy the relaxation of a week-end camp with the thought that this is athletics; perhaps it means the exhilaration that comes from the dive and the quick race down the swimming pool; perhaps it is the delight of a fast game on the tennis court.

MISS SINCLAIR

Athletics at Agnes Scott may mean any one or all of these to a girl. It is our purpose for this to be true. If in any small measure it is, too much credit cannot be given to the members of the Physical Education Department. No matter how many classes they have had, there is never a night that finds them too tired to coach a team, advise a manager, or give suggestions to the Athletic Board. They are always interested, always enthusiastic, always willing to help. Athletics and all it means to each one is inseparably connected with them.

PETER PAN—

"The Boy who wouldn't grow up."

THE LITTLE MINISTER—

"A gleam of color, a gypsy all poorly clad . . . a twig of roman berries stuck carelessly into her black hair."

ALICE-SIT-BY-THE-FIRE—
"It's summer done, autumn begun."

A KISS FOR CINDERELLA—

“(Little aware that she may have solved the question of the ages.) Beauty’s a grand thing.”

QUALITY STREET—
"Phoebe of the ringlets."

SENTIMENTAL TOMMY—

"Meaning to be whatever kind of boy she seemed most in need of."

PANTALOONS—

"There is nothing that may be said which they can not express with this leg or that . . . It is the loveliest of all languages and soft as the fall of snow."

Humor

From a Freshman's Note Book

Mountain range—A large cookstove.

Oxygen—An eight-sided figure.

Dispel—To spell incorrectly.

Frontpiece—Headlight on a Ford.

Furlough—A fur-bearing animal.

Monomaniac—Man with only one wife.

Ascetic—An interpretative dance.

Purgatory—State of having more than one wife.

"What kind of marks is your daughter getting at college?"

"She got one long one on her left shin where a hockey stick hit her during one of the games."

The well-dressed college girl doesn't need much of this world's goods.

Then (Institute) and Now (College)

Gentlemen Prefer:

BLONDES, BRUNETTES, OR WHAT ARE YOU?

Seems strange that the rising generation is seldom up till noon.

Miss Eagleson to class: "We have not much time left, so we'll finish up on drugs."

I like girls who paint and use plenty of perfume.

I like to see girls eat candy and chew gum.

Girls who spend a lot of time over ice cream sodas and toasted sandwiches appeal to me.

I enjoy seeing girls spend their fathers' money freely.

Girls who are forever needing more stationery on account of their voluminous correspondence are a big consolation.

And fashionable underclassmen who need flashlights to finish their manicures are my chief source of delight.

Girls who buy all the latest books and magazines are not to be censured.

Nor do I believe in frowning on girls who buy notebook paper and thumb tacks in large quantities.

I own a drug store in "little Dec."

“Did you know that George Washington, the father of our country, had an impediment in his speech?”

“Why, no!”

“Yes, he could not tell a lie.”

The ambition of the college miss:—
To sweep some big Frat man off his feet.

Awkard dancer: "The Charleston becomes rather monotonous, don't you think?"

Unlucky girl: "Well, try jumping on my other foot a while."

IF FOR AGNES SCOTT

If you are flunking—work.

If you are passing—work.

If you are high meriting—work. Idleness will cause you to lose your "boot-lick."

If you've made Phi Beta Kappa—stop work. You don't have to.

"Is she one of fashion's butterflies?"

"Considering the way she goes thru her clothes, 'Moths' would apply better."

DEAR Giddie,

From your letters I THINK you must lead a FRANTICALLY HECTIC life at COLLEGE, I mean I ACTUALLY think you must, but I'm all HOT and BOTHERED over this IT question I mean I REALLY am, because BAYLISS McShane says I have NOT got It and when I asked her WHAT It REALLY was she said "IT is that MYSTERIOUS thing which makes girls LEAVE home, and boys FOLLOW them," and I think it's POSITIVELY REVOLTING for people to keep TALKING about it, I mean I ACTUALLY do, and GEORGE hasn't called me up this week and I'm getting FRIGHTFULLY BITTER about LIFE, when I first met him I thought he was EXCRUCIATINGLY DIVINE, and now I simply LOATHE him I mean he's not ACTUALLY a gentleman, they say he said "I wonder who's the best looking boy at TECH, and WHY I am?" and I think that's POSITIVELY ATROCIOUS and Everything, I mean I ACTUALLY do, and I'm all HOT and BOTHERED over it I REALLY am, and now I've told you ALL the NEWS so I think I ACTUALLY ought to stop, don't you HONESTLY think so and everything?

Your
Aggie

P. S. GEORGE just sent me his FRAT pin and I mean I think I MUST have IT and DON'T you think it was EXCRUCIATINGLY DARLING of him I mean I REALLY DO.

Therese Barksdale:
"Is it true that bleaching hair causes insanity?"

Miss Eagleson:
"Well, I know a boy who is simply crazy over a blonde."

Tech: "What's the trouble between those two goldiggers?"

Emory: "They've been jumping each other's claims."

THINGS WE HEAR ABOUT BUT NEVER SEE

"You made another A+"

The Dean won't mind, Darling.

"It wouldn't all go in the box"

In Conclusion

It is with a strange mingling of feelings that we conclude this our task for the year; some anxiety lest it have fallen short of its goal; some sadness at bidding farewell to a book that has become like an old friend; and some joy at having finished what we undertook. Yet we would not consider our pages complete without a word of thanks and appreciation to the many who have lent us their talents and inspiration. To all those who, along a professional line, have made this book possible, we acknowledge our gratitude; and also to the Student Body, who have aided us by their cheerful cooperation and sympathy. Especially do we wish to mention Mrs. Dieckmann and Miss Stone, who were invaluable in their work on the college and Alumnae section; and Miss Lewis and Miss McKinney, who gave so unsparingly of their time and interest in working out the "Fantasy from Barry."

We wonder, as you turn this the last page of the book, whether you have actually caught a glimpse of the campus life here at college. For the Alumnae, we hope that it will bind you more closely to your Alma Mater by bringing her nearer to you; and for the Student Body, we trust that it will make to live again for you the happy experiences and memories of the past year at Agnes Scott.
