BEGINNING in 1891, the Decatur Female Seminary published the record of the school year in collaboration with the Aurora, the literary publication of the students. In 1902, this publication was discontinued and the present SILHOUETTE was organized. Years of growth for both college and annual have not altered the purpose of the editorial staffs: "To cast upon these pages a silhouette of our life at Agnes Scott—an existence itself as transient and flitting as firelight shadows."

DEVELOPMENT is the keynote of the Aurora. In the early days it was the year book, including all phases of activities. When the SILHOUETTE became the annual publication, the Aurora was changed into the organ of the literary societies with class issues. Gradually, it became a quarterly, containing only literary efforts, such as poetry, short stories, essays, and book reviews. In 1928 an art department was established to provide attractive illustrations for the contributions. The Aurora earnestly attempts to present the highest literary efforts of the students and to create an appreciation of the best writing on the campus.

THE Agonistic was begun by the Junior Class of 1916 and was the private and especial interest of that class until the paper became so popular that the campus adopted it to express their opinions. The staffs earnestly endeavor to carry out the two-fold purpose of the Agonistic: To present campus news in as accurate and as interesting a manner as possible, and to encourage the growth of true journalism among the students.

A class contest is held each year to stimulate interest in the work. A cup is awarded to the winner.

MAY DAY is always a wonderful climax to the school year. Months of planning make the day an outstanding success. By a contest in the fall the committee is able to present the best scenario. Late in the spring the queen is elected. The student body participating in the May Day exercises do their part well, but the day is successful because of the earnest work of this committee.

ATHLETICS

THE ATHLETIC BOARD

THE Athletic Association was organized with the idea of creating on the campus a spirit of "Play for Play's Sake." The Athletic Board, which conducts the affairs of the Association, is comprised of the officers of the Association, together with the heads of sports and the faculty advisers, Miss Haynes and Miss Wilburn.

The program for the year included the usual major and minor sports. The Outing Club was formed to stimulate interest in hiking and camping as well as other outdoor activities. The faculty-varsity games and Health Week were carried on.

The Athletic Association feels that in the widespread interest in sports on the campus this year, it has lived up to its motto, "Savingly and Recreationally Yours."

The Siamese Twins

Here we have Mo and Mo, the Siamese Twins. They walk together, talk together, cry together, sigh together. They even get out annuals together. There exists between them an amazing nearness (like the Depression, or final exams). Life to this dear pair is just a beautiful togetherness!

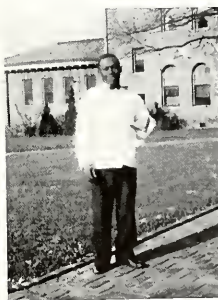

Lulu, The Man-Charmer

Lulu is a powerful woman. Note how the men swarm at her feet? For some eighteen years she has been charming the demons, and never once has she met anything but the highest success. Give her five minutes and she can capture anything. She's a genius in her line (and whatta line!).

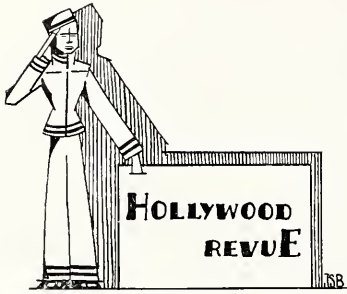

Topsy, the Tackler

Topsy tackles anything and everything, but she does herself especially proud with last week's pork roast. She is noted for her level-headedness and calm persistence, which she displays while in action. We expect Topsy to make All-American next year. She is truly a Tackler among Tacklers. Never another like Topsy!

Sonny Boy, The Somnambulist

Sonny Boy is a peculiar specimen. He just looks out into space, for hours at a time. Maybe he is thinking of new worlds to conquer, or maybe he is an introvert. Anyway, he can be aroused only thrice daily (at 7:30, 12:30, and 6:00). It is interesting to note his behaviour at these intervals. He walks up and down, frantically ringing a big black bell. Perhaps this is a form of self-expression, or maybe it has something to do with suppressed desires. Whatever the motive, the acting is soon over, and Sonny Boy resumes his former state of inertia.

LADIES and Gentlemen, stand by for the Cream of the Crop. On my left is Jackie Cooper, sliding down the banisters, and not giving a hoot about splinters, and on my right is Farina, the best speller in Our Gang. And who do you think is right in front of me, Ladies and Gentlemen? None other than Rasputin himself, with charming Kay Francis. Be careful, Kay—there's Harpo right behind that bush. What say, Harpo oleboyoleboyoleboy! Pardon me, Ladies and Gentlemen—I was about to forget four of our most popular artists. On my extreme right are Constance Bennett and good ole Laurel, and on my extreme left are Clark Gable and our own Zasu Pitts. Clark seems to be courting heavy, and Zasu (the poor child) is covered with confusion. Oh dear me!

AURORA

A Drama in the Ruff

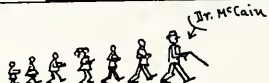

AURORA was the prettiest girl you never could. She had a Moral Character, too. She believed that right makes might, and all that stuff. Furthermore, Aurora was typically Agnes Scott. She never took books out of the library before she was 'sposed to, or nothin'. She always got in before time limit, and whenever anybody started talking about there was too much work to do, Aurora would begin telling them about the value of a college education. Yes sir—that was the kind of a girl Aurora was.

Now Aurora had a Romance. One time there was a boy that came out to fix the 'phone, and he must have got excited or something, because he got all locked up in the 'phone booth. But Aurora belonged to the Campfire Girls, and she knew how to do all these useful things like unlocking 'phone booths, so she let the boy out. Immediately, he takes her in his arms and says, "Aurora, you are the sweetest girl I never could. You have saved my life—now be my wife." All this moved Aurora to the heart, but she sadly shook her head, because she knew all the time he was in favor of True-False tests. Besides, she was already late to her gym class. So she said, "No, I cannot marry you, my dear Achilles (), Rudolph (), Jonathon (), Nicholas (). (Take your choice, it don't much matter.)

Well, he kept on saying, "Aw, Aurora, please," and all like that, but it did not do no good, because Aurora was a girl with a Iron Will, and when she said "No," she did not mean maybe. So finally poor Achilles (), Rudolph (), Jonathon (), Nicholas () gave up and went back home, all sad-like and everything, and that made Aurora feel like the mischief, but there was not nothin' she could do about it, because she was a girl ruled by Reason. So she drowned her love in her work, and remained a pure and wholesome girl.

N. B. We think this heart-rending drama would go over big on the stage (if it did not get censored). It is full of human interest and deep emotion, and that is what the public is demanding just now. We believe, however, that a slight change in action would lead to greater unity and coherence. Our point is this: Why not let Aurora string the lad along for a little while? She could be a girl of High Moral Character, and still tell him he had pretty eyes.

One point more. The person playing the part of Aurora should be tall and lithe-like, with the lure of learning in her eyes. That gets 'em every time.

EXPOSITION

Time: Ten Bells (P. M.).

Place: Trash Basket between Main and Inman.

Enter Agnes Scott Student, with microscope in hand. Begins careful examination of contents of Trash Basket. Enter another Agnes Scott Student, bearing a butterfly catcher, and searching frantically hither and yon. Ensues a collision between the two searchers, at the Trash Basket.

First Student: Hi.

Second Student: Hi.

First Student: If it's not asking too much, just what brings you here?

Second Student: To tell the truth, I'm searching for An Education. But don't tell. People would think me cracked. Not that it matters—but after all, there's the family—

First Student: Yeah, I know. But don't mind me. I'm your pal, see, and from now on we're going to tackle this thing together, because I'm searching for An Education too.

all I saw was gum chewing and all I heard was Marge Simmon's musical "shshsh." Personally, I think Education is fighting shy of the library. It's no use, pal, let's quit this mad search.

Second Student: Never say die, say damn. Besides, even Columbus had his hardships.

First Student: Good ole Columbus—well, let's see—I've got it! The phone booth!

Second Student: Righto. An Education must be in the phone booth!

ACT III

MORE RISING ACTION

Time: 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ Bells.

Place: Phone Booth (the free one).

The sleuths tip-toe nearer and nearer to the booth, in which a strange creature is inclosed.

First Student: Success at last. Pal, we are just before capturing An Education.

Second Student: The just reward of labor. But tell me, how shall we manage the creature? Bloodless captures are so much more preferable, don't you think so?

First Student: Yeah, I've always liked them better, too. I've got it! We'll capture An Education in the butterfly net. Quick! The creature is about to come out.

The Sleuths adjust the net so that An Education will step into it, as he opens the door. Door opens—
Second Student: Curses! Charlotte Regar!
First Student: Ma foi! Let's scam.
The Two Sleuths scam, leaving Charlotte wiggling and writhing in the butterfly net.

ACT IV

ALMOST THE DENOUEMENT

Time: 5 Bells (P. M.)
Place: Trash Basket (same one again).
First Student: Let's call it a day, pal. This searching business is getting on my nerves.
Second Student: Now don't be a manic-depressive. Besides, I've got a Thought—how about the May Day Dell?
First Student (all aglow): The May Day Dell! Now you're talking! An Education is bound to be hiding in the May Day Dell!
The Two Sleuths gently tip-toe down to the Dell. As they draw near, they perceive a strange creature, tipping and flitting about, and singing wildly to the winds.
First Student: How graceful is An Education!
Second Student: Just like a fairy, or something—quiet, now; let's slip up to him without his knowing—
The Sleuths softly creep up, from behind. Just then the creature turns around, facing them.

LE DENOUEMENT

Time } Don't you know by now?
Place }

First Student: Come on, pal, I'm tired of searching for An Education. Let's quit and go to Business School—¹ you can't tell me Columbus would stick it out any longer than ²outs.

Second Student: O bother Columbus! What's the point is An Education. And we must get him. Don't you know it's dangerous for him to be running around everywhere, loose?

First Student: Yeah, I know. But what's the use of searching longer? We've tried every possible clue (Long Silence, interrupted by occasional sighs from First Student, and moans from the Second—Then:) Look here, pal, did it ever occur to you that the Faculty might have An Education?

Second Student: I wish you wouldn't joke at a time like this.

First Student: But I'm serious. I know it sounds silly, but it's our last hope, so let's take a shot at it. There's Dr. Davidson now, going home. Let's get him as he goes up the steps. The Two Sleuths lay in waiting for Dr. Davidson and pound down on him just as he reaches the steps to his house.

First Student: So you've been holding out on us all these years! You meany!

Second Student: Give us An Education! We know you've got him! Give him to us! We demand An Education!

Dr. Davidson: My dear girls, do leave off this madness. If I had An Education, I would gladly give him to you, but frankly, I never heard of the thing.

First Student (in despair): Et tu, Brutu!
