From Newt to Nunn ...

One can look back over the last year and see many changes, not only on our campus but statewide as well. As Georgia prepares to host the 1996 Olympics, new buildings have sprung up across the state. Construction on campus signified the preparation for an important event as well: the coming of a new president.

Occurrences that evoked response within our microcosm were changes to administration, faculty, and staff; alterations within the P.E. department; and new additions to our parade of trees. Varying degrees of acceptance and disapproval have been heard campuswide, especially concerning what tree should be planted.

Statewide and nationwide happenings that have stirred emotion on campus were the appointment of Republican Newt Gingrich to Speaker of the House, the Atlanta Braves winning the World Series, and retirement of Democratic Senator Sam Nunn. Regardless of political affiliation, most Scotties have steadfast opinions concerning the entrance of Newt and exit of Nunn.

Change brings about diversity and with diversity comes enlightenment. In order to form a more accepting community, one must acknowledge opposing viewpoints, as well as one's own.

As an RTC, Rhonda Turner's experience of college life is very different than that of a traditional student.

Change brings about diversity, and with diversity comes enlightenment.

Agnes Scott's first alumna president, Mary Brown Bullock '66, brings fresh ideas to an institution with which she is familiar.

Dr. Ted Mathews enthusiastically illustrates his perspective on the history of jazz.

One sees not with the eye but with the mind, and when the mind is open ...

Have you ever looked at something from a different angle and been surprised at how new it looked? This book will show you the past year's history at Agnes Scott College – that is certain. This year, however, the year-book staff will try to present that history with an added fervor. We on the staff believe in open-mindedness and we'll attempt to convey that belief to you. One sees not with the eye but with the mind, and when the mind is open one can see omnidimensionally. Whether or not you agree with one side of an issue is not the question. The question is: Are you justified in agreeing with that side if you haven't even looked at another?

This year has been filled with many events and changes at ASC. We began the year with a new president whose experience offers us added insight and opportunities. Many administrators, faculty and staff are no longer here, but new people have taken their places. The last class of the century joined us as the class of 1995 moved on. Many new people have brought fresh minds to ASC and with them we can see from so many different perspectives than our own. With hope that our book will illustrate this point, so here we go

Is the Glass Half Full...

The year of 1995-96 has been an eventful one, full of changes, victory, and surprises for the Agnes Scott Community.

The week of Black Cat, a friendly rivalry among the classes ending with Junior Production and the Black Cat Formal, was exciting for everyone. The competition ended in victory for the Class of 97.

Also in October, the Atlanta Braves triumphed over the Cleveland Indians in the World Series, and the city of Atlanta celebrated.

This year was also full of new beginnings. Mary Brown Bullock became our seventh President, and we welcomed in the Class of 99.

The Class of 98 had a very successful Sophomore Family Weekend, and the Class of 96 finished up their college career. We will miss them and never forget them.

This year has been full of excitement, changes, new beginnings, and memories we will cherish for a lifetime.

Did we interrupt anything?

...Or Half Empty?

For most Agnes Scott students, this past school year has been an extremely pleasurable one. But hardships are a fact of life in the real world, and Agnes Scott has had to deal with its fair share of incidences. Problems ranged from class tension during Black Cat to natural disasters, and ASC was not spared from these inevitable events.

Recalling Black Cat causes many mixed feelings to arise throughout the student body. To say the least, this year's attempt at class bonding ended with a large number of disappointments and frustrations.

Atlanta, being known for its sunny days and blue skies, was taken by surprise when it was hit with Hurricane Opal and "ice storms."

It's true that this year has been eventful, but Scotties are strong, being able to pull through anything that comes their way.

Point

One Big Happy ...

One big happy (choose noun)

- a. Zucchini
- b. Playground
- c. Couch

Well, maybe Agnes

Scott College is not a zucchini or a couch, even though there are quite a few comfy ones on campus, but that is off the subject. If you take a moment to look around, you can begin to see how “playground” best fits. Just as children on a playground fail to see differences in age, color, or creed, the underclasswomen at ASC look beyond these typical stereotypes. So we are lacking swing-sets and seesaws, but seriously, being an underclasswoman at ASC is a rewarding experience.

At many large universities underclass students are known only as a social security number and can become lost in the daily shuffle. When you are in a math class with 600 other people, it becomes difficult to get to know, not only your professor, but your fellow classmates as well. Elitism flows like alcohol from fraternities and sororities.

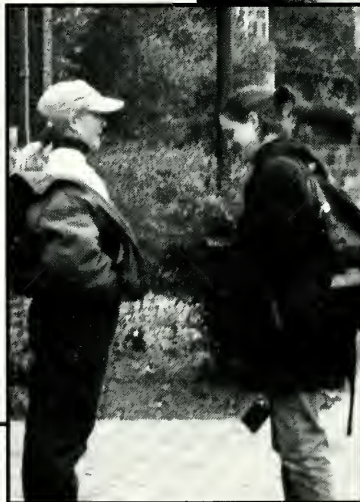

“In other schools you can feel like a freshman, sophomore, or junior, someone less than a senior, but here we are more like sisters. Upperclasswomen take you under their wings and a real sense of family arises” according to sophomore Neema Cyrus. ASC women respect and appreciate differences because of the close-knit environment. Though not always as fun as a playground, ASC is just as friendly.

While hiking on the Appalachian trail, first-year Carla Brunjes and sophomore Shannon Hensley stop to wait for the lolley-gaggers of their group.

Sophomores Rachel Green and Elise Eichorst waste time between classes in front of Alston.

Time Stands Still

8 a.m. Wednesday morning — Sally's alarm sounds and for the next six hours she is off from class to class squeezing in a stale hamburger and soggy fries for lunch. She returns to her dorm room to wait for dinner with study time to follow until she falls asleep face down in her books.

8 a.m. Thursday morning — See Wednesday.

Life at Agnes Scott can become routine and monotonous. Underclasswomen do the same things and see the same people each day. According to first-years Ashlea Mittelstaedt and Kristina Olmstead, "The campus seems isolated. Without a car, one can feel lonely and trapped. Students need an escape even if comes in the form of a friend with a car."

"The disunity of the first-year class coupled with the elitism felt by the sophomore and junior classes can lead to tensions on campus," says sophomore Lorie Summers. These tensions enhance the claustrophobic atmosphere of the campus and can lead some students to seek a new institution for study.

On a campus where time stands still, monotony leads to conformity. Where individuality should triumph, conformity is encouraged. Sally needs to break the mold.

First-year Leia Becker delights in the marvels of Christmas while examining her gifts.

Our Road in Life ...

Once again the time has come for us to pack our bags and head on to bigger and better things.

This time, though, we hold that higher honor of being the Class of 1996 of Agnes Scott College.

The last four years will always stand out in our minds. All the memories and friends we've made will definitely last us a lifetime.

While here, we have encountered many different viewpoints. We've taken on new responsibilities. We've matured and prospered. All of us have seen change and tragedy, but we will never forget each other and the experiences we have shared.

Looking back on everything that has happened to us, we have come to realize that we are on a road. Once followed, the road twists and turns, narrows and widens, then forks...not once, but many times. With each variation, we find ourselves faced with new choices. Agnes Scott was just one fork in our road.

As we continue to travel down that road of life, we will reflect on our four years here. We will be overwhelmed with pride and appreciation — pride for where we've been and appreciation for what we've become.

*Jessica Chatham
& Jackie Reynolds*

Sara Alderfer and Emma Mitchem show grins of happiness at Senior Investiture. They both know that in a few short months, they're out of here!

Once followed, the road twists and turns, narrows and widens, then forks...

Jackie Reynolds and Jessica Chatham do some "serious" reflecting on the years spent here at Agnes Scott College.

The Evolution of a Woman

As I sit right now writing this page, I look back at these past years. The first thing I do is smile. Yet as I think of all I'll leave behind after May 18, I get a lump in my throat.

I'll leave behind things. Some unpleasant, like sitting in front of a computer, writing freshman English papers, or long hours at Campbell working on labs in which "we just couldn't get the right results," and too many all-nighters. But many nice things came with the not-so-good, like Papa John's Pizza, the very common two and a half hour study breaks chatting with a friend about the last ER episode, and quick runs to the A&P to buy cheap-yet-satisfying ramen noodles. No more "man on the hall," or "Ouch, you forgot to yell hot water!"

Most importantly, I leave behind a naive little girl who four years ago took a plane to this country. Now I have turned into a woman who has gained not only an education but also strength and confidence. At Agnes Scott I met many wonderful friends who come from many different backgrounds. With them I've shared laughs and sorrows, and thanks to them I've gained a new perspective on life and have become the woman who I now am.

Maria Melo

Kathryn Lookofsky says, "We've been here long enough, will it ever end?"

No more 'man on the hall,' or 'Ouch, you forgot to yell hot water!'

Agnes Scott Has Changed ...

Professor Harry Wistrand first came to Agnes Scott College twenty-two years ago in the fall of 1974. When asked the question “How has Agnes Scott changed?”, Dr. Wistrand stated, “it’s interesting how things remain the same.” He feels this is true because the quality of education remains high and this factor helped turn out good students in the past and will continue to turn out good students in the future. One aspect that has changed campus life according to Professor Wistrand is the increased interest of women in the field of science. He feels that an important contributing factor to this is that there are many female role models and Nobel Prize winners. He also feels that women tend to be collaborative which is great for science.

One aspect that has changed ... is the increased interest of women in the field of science.

... to What You See Now

Star Minke is no stranger to change. As the new chair of Physical Education/Athletic Director/Volleyball coach, she had a challenging first year as she tried to attack some major issues in the PE department.

Leaders of SGA came to her with concerns about the PE department not meeting the students' needs as far as scheduling times and grading policies. In an effort to change this, Star Minke and the PE department have added five new courses with more sections. They have also increased the size of the classes and made it possible for athletes who play more than one sport to receive credit for every sport in which they participate. Students will also be happy to know that SGA and the PE department are proposing that the letter grade in the physical education classes be factored into the overall GPA.

Another goal Star Minke had for this year was to establish and revitalize the Athletic program, which she feels has been accomplished. When asked about the future, she says she has no plans to leave Agnes Scott. She is impressed with the academic reputation of ASC as well as the students themselves. She has enjoyed watching them learn and grow and feels that she has too.

Point

From Large . . .

Student Government Association is a vital part of the Agnes Scott community. This year they have been instrumental in beginning to bring about change in the Agnes Scott constitution. Jennifer Langston, President, and Deborah Lewis, Vice-President, have worked diligently to try to restructure the current constitution.

The main goal is to create a more student governed body. Although this will be a long process, most feel that steps toward student empowerment are essential for the future of Agnes Scott.

Some key issues that SGA is hoping to look at include: required explanations for expulsion, management of the budget and clarity in the the division of power on campus. As a private institution, Agnes Scott's constitution is difficult to change, but by focusing on these aspects SGA hopes to prevent future problems.

A major concern of many Agnes Scott students is the distribution of school funds to various organizations. SGA hopes to clarify how much money is distributed and where it goes. Other budget concerns include the rising cost of tuition. It is only through active student participation and support that change can occur.

Girl Scouts ... [provide] an outlet through which students can develop ...

... To Small

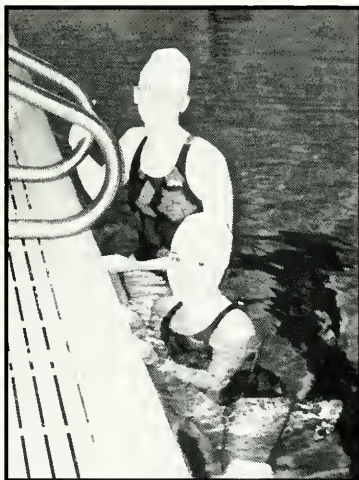

In contrast to larger organizations like SGA, little is known about smaller organizations, such as Campus Girl Scouts. Campus Girl Scouts serves the Agnes Scott community by providing an outlet through which students can develop their leadership ability as well as themselves. This year they have been working on developing their program. They created a mission statement this year which reads: “Campus Girls Scouts are confident young women committed to providing fun and educational opportunities through leadership, for the development of themselves and others within the community while serving as progressive role models in our evolving world.”

Campus Girl Scouts includes students from Georgia Tech, Emory and Georgia State University, although they are hoping to spread to other campuses in Georgia such as Kennesaw and the University of Georgia. Although they are still a developing organization, they are an important part of the Agnes Scott community.

As members of Aquatic Scotties, Tish King and Sarah Thiel practiced hard for the annual synchronized swimming show.

Organizations

Plans for the upcoming year include many outings such as Whitewater Rafting, rock climbing, a ropes course adventure and day and overnight hikes to different places in Georgia.

The Dana Scholars serve as ushers for all performances of the College Events Series, and the Chair is a member of the College Events Committee.

Mortar Board

London Fog

London Fog is an 8 - 12 member vocal ensemble organized for the performance of jazz and quasi-jazz arrangements. They perform several times during the year at Agnes Scott and in the community.

Showing the Way

Tower Council

The concept of Tower Council is to maintain a small, selective group of student public relations ambassadors who are involved in sharing information about Agnes Scott College and articulating its goals. The students in this organization are sponsored directly by the Office of Admissions, but maintain a working relationship with academic and administrative offices on campus. The Tower Council serves in an organized, official capacity as spokespersons to both the internal and external communities.

Orientation Council

As First-years begin their first and frightful days at Agnes Scott, Orientation Council has the huge job of welcoming and orienting all new students. From planning street dances to assigning Big Sisters, it is their job to make every new student feel right at home.

Doing a Good Job

LBA

The purpose of the Lesbian/Bisexual Alliance (LBA) is to support lesbians, bisexuals and all those who wish to identify with issues pertinent to the gay community at Agnes Scott. The group seeks to serve and educate the College community through forums for discussion and special projects.

Point

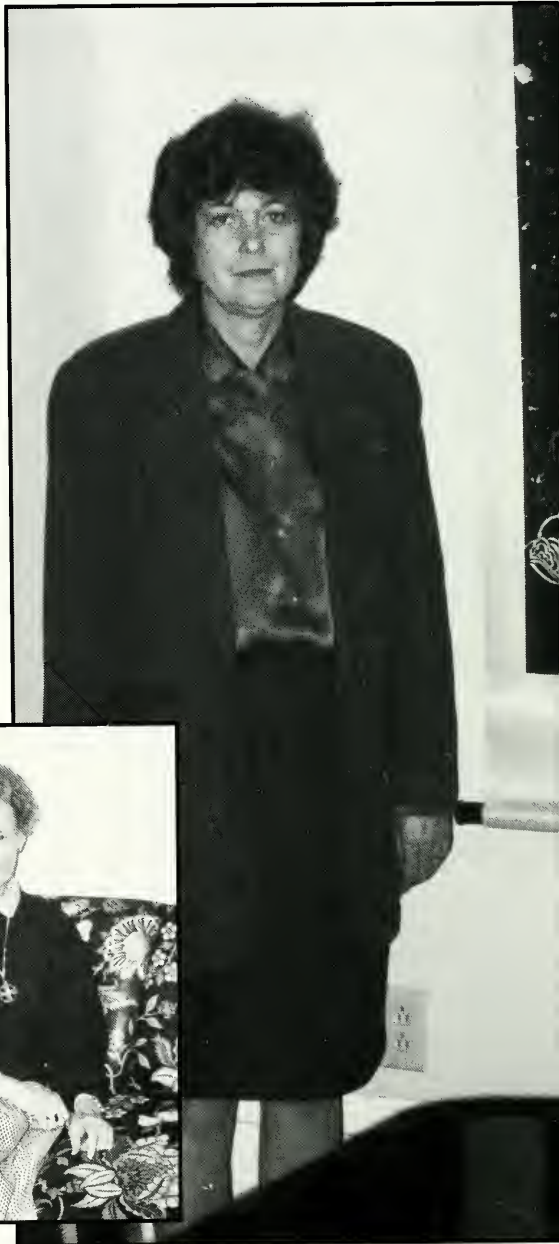

From Student to Administrator

Dean Mollie Merrick has witnessed the changing times of Agnes Scott ever since she was a freshman at the College in 1953. When she was a student, there were only three telephones in each of the residence halls. Today, all of the ASC computers on campus have worldwide internet access.

After graduation, Mollie moved to Savannah for about a year to work at First Presbyterian Church. When she left the church to work at ASC, the preacher said to her, "You began at the top. Why go down?" This quote has always reminded her of Agnes Scott's prestige.

Mollie Merrick continues working as a vital part of the ASC community because the students are "always the cream of the crop." She further states that ASC is what it is because of the faculty's unified goal of maintaining a high quality education and of the students' sense of self-confidence.

Mary Brown Bullock is the third female to serve the College in the role of President and the first alumna to fill the post.

Food for Thought

Ever wonder who fixes your sandwiches at the snack bar? Carrie Wells is the woman most likely responsible. She has been working for ASC for 23 years and has seen many changes. One major difference is how the food is prepared: In the past, food was prepared from scratch and fresh vegetables were always available. Another difference is that many people do not know that the snack bar's current location was once a gym. Ms. Carrie Wells deeply cares about her job and the students. She also feels as if her co-workers are part of her family.

Laura Phillips also works in food services and has been a faithful employee for over 25 years. Mrs. Phillips recalls when all meals required students to dress “appropriately” and Sunday dinner called for church attire. There was an overall “homestyle” environment, with linen tablecloths and home cooked meals made from scratch. Laura Phillips prides herself on trying to be a “pillow to support and comfort students during hard times.”

President Mary Brown Bullock

How would you describe your job to students on campus?

I try to work with the multiple constituencies that affect the college: students, faculty, members of the board, etc. I try to supply the school with support and encourage growth.

What are some of your first impressions of Agnes Scott today as opposed to when you were in school? The diversity. I remember the first African American student admitted to ASC during my senior year. Now, apparently 11 different countries are represented along with many diverse American groups. I also remember Alston center didn't exist when I was in school. In its place we had an area to gather for things that we called "hub sings." We would get together and sing, smoke, or play bridge. We had a lot of fun there.

What do you think of the Olympics coming to Atlanta and to Agnes Scott?

I think it's terrific. The Olympics will bring great economic growth to Atlanta. Also, the Olympics will enhance the international reputation of Atlanta along with Agnes Scott.

What are your visions of Agnes Scott in the future?

I see a greater increase in student population. However, we will not lower standards in order to obtain this extra population; in fact, we might raise our standards. I also see renovation of the library, expansion of the Alston center, and more international programs for both students going to foreign countries and to students coming in.

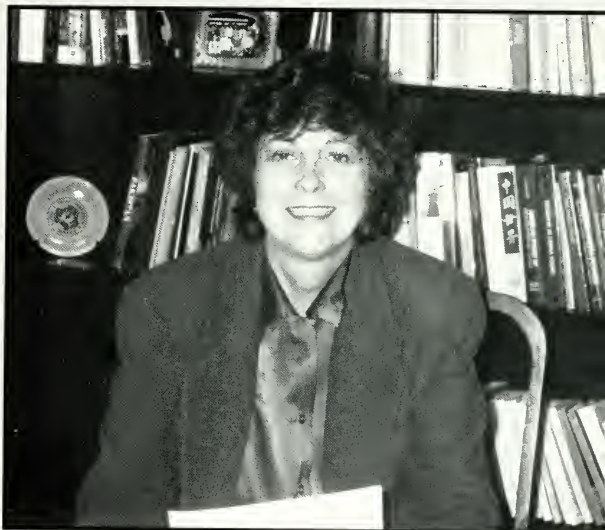

What do you notice that is different about Agnes Scott since you were in school?

There's much more contemporary feel to the school. I hope to add to this feel.

Now starting for Agnes Scott

Thumb! Line! Ball, ball, ball! Ten, nine, eight, . . . Nice shot! Ahhh, ACE!! A foreign language? Sort of. These are the various sounds heard at a game or match at Agnes Scott College. Athletes at ASC learn a new language when they sign on as part of an athletic program. They have to learn to concentrate on their coaches voices and appreciate the voices they cannot afford to hear. Tara Spuhler, volleyball player, says of the fans, "I don't hear them, but I like knowing their voices are there." Concentrate on the ball, bounce, shoot; kick, pass, goal; racket back, swing; run, run, 3.1 miles; set, spike, score! Athletes think about different things during their matches and games. They are nervous before the gun sounds the start, the clock ticks away the time, and the opponent serves. Being on a team allows the players to learn to balance athletics and academics. They learn how to rejoice the victories and learn from their defeats. They begin to play like a team.

a loss, and they maintain the high after the victory. Fans have evolved at ASC. They pay more attention to the athletic calendar as well as the social one. In fact as Jessica Chatham states, “It’s nice that athletic events have become social events at Agnes Scott.” More faculty, staff, and students have come to support their team when they were facing Emory, Oglethorpe, or Spelman. The fans also notice the way athletics have changed over the past year. “Every program has improved,” says Jackie Reynolds, a four-year supporter of athletic events. Nzinga Shakir also enjoys attending games, “I enjoy watching the players work together. It’s exciting.” Fans make certain that their students, classmates, and “Little and Big Sisters” know that they have supporters in the crowd.

Sports

A Season of CHANGE

Soccer players were greeted with a new coach when they returned in August. Paige Cardel came to Agnes Scott with different ways of running the practices and new ideas for coaching the games. Coach Cardel was not the only new face on the soccer team, excluding the first-years who joined the team. The soccer team accepted Eric Baumgartner as the assistant and goalie coach.

With this kind of leadership, the soccer team found themselves with new goals to achieve and ended the season with hope for next year. Coach Cardel ended the season with retrospective thoughts on the future of the soccer program, "The players that ended up staying will come back next year."

The soccer season came to an end with six seniors leaving and the expectation that the incoming first-years will continue to carry the team toward their goals.

A New Foundation

A new member of the volleyball team was greeted by excited players at the beginning of the season. Star Minke joined Agnes Scott Athletics and Physical Education as the new volleyball coach and the Athletic Director. The volleyball team experienced an improvement in their playing styles and their confidence carried them through the season.

The volleyball team also had an assistant coach, Danette Johnson. She provided another impetus for the players to reach higher than before with her knowledge of the game. Under the direction of these new faces, the volleyball team saw that their hard work paid off. They had improved much since last year.

With the support of captains Jessica Chatham and Becky Rafter, the team faced numerous adversaries. They overcame their initial awkwardness of playing with new people. They succeeded in making their season a successful one built on determination and hard work. Senior Jessica Chatham had this to say about the volleyball program, "We look a lot better than a few years ago." The volleyball program and team grew this year in more ways than one.

Are YOU ready to RUN??!!

For most people, 3.1 miles sounds like a long run. For some people it sounds like a long walk. To Agnes Scott's cross country team, however, it is an everyday occurrence. Every morning when most of the college is asleep, the cross country team, coached by Susan Showers, is on its way around Decatur running.

The cross country team represented Agnes Scott College at Oglethorpe, Morris Brown, and Georgia State, to name a few, running up hills, in the mud, in the rain, and through tree covered landscapes.

Every member ended the season with better time than at the beginning of the season. Andrea Riba had some thoughts about the team, "It was a very diverse team. This was the first year that we had first time runners!" The cross country team witnessed the improvement of their program that gave hope for the upcoming years.

BASKETBALL

A Clean Slate

Lori Anderson and Debbie Cheaves pressure the Wesleyan player.

Jessica McKenzie gets her chance to score on the free-throw line.

With a new coach and a record player turn out, the basketball season started with a bang. The basketball players worked hard and had one of their best seasons. Led by captain Debbie Cheaves, the basketball team moved on the court with a skill and quickness that alluded to years of playing together.

With the record turn out of interested students in the basketball program, Paige Cardel had Agnes Scott's finest. With assistant coach Kristi Workman, the players received more individual attention than last season. The team also saw more playing time per person than seen in previous years. The players took these changes in stride and fought to make this year a winning season.

The players improved their individual games as well as their teamwork. With only two players leaving in May 1996, the basketball program can build onto the strong nucleus formed this year. Shane Wood ended the season with these comments, "At the end of the season, we overcame a lot of adversity with injuries and people who had never played. We finally came together as a team."

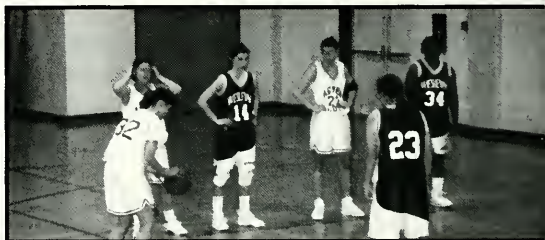

Megan Graham looks to Jessica McKenzie for the pass.

Coach Bill Swift was the new member of the tennis team in the spring. He incorporated new serving styles during the team's daily practices that proved to be well worth the work.

The tennis players did not have beautiful weather usually associated with playing tennis. They had to swing their rackets in the freezing cold of February. Brooke Renfroe said of her team members, "We've played in the freezing cold with frozen balls--that's dedication."

Even though the weather was unkind, the tennis team represented Agnes Scott with its usual flair and style. The team picked up exciting new first-years and added them to the powerhouse existing from last year.

This year's tennis team proved to be the foundation from which all will build upon and to which all will have to measure.

Mona Cousino was a force to reckon with when she came to the net.

Emily Curington went low for the return.

Marley Maupin returns the serve with equal tenacity.

GETTING FIT & Staying Active

Jacalyn Ellis keeps fit by using the treadmill.

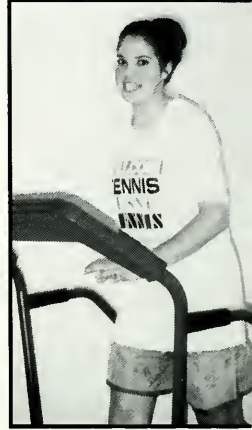

Agnes Scott had no trouble keeping fit this year!

More than 190 faculty, staff, and students participated in Century Club. This number has increased from previous years. The Century Club was created to promote physical activity beyond the P.E. classes required by the college. These numbers alone can show the success of this program and the willingness of students to maintain a fitness level now more than ever. More people were willing to walk, swim, run, treadmill, nordic track, and bicycle than ever before.

With new weight equipment entering the athletic building, the weight room could be seen filled with people toning and building up their muscle.

Century Club was not the only impetus for exercise. ASC2 led students hiking and water rafting. Intramurals got a good start with the club softball and the co-ed softball teams. Record numbers of faculty, staff, and students turned out for those events. Overall, Agnes Scott has promoted good health and exercise, and hopefully that feeling will grow.

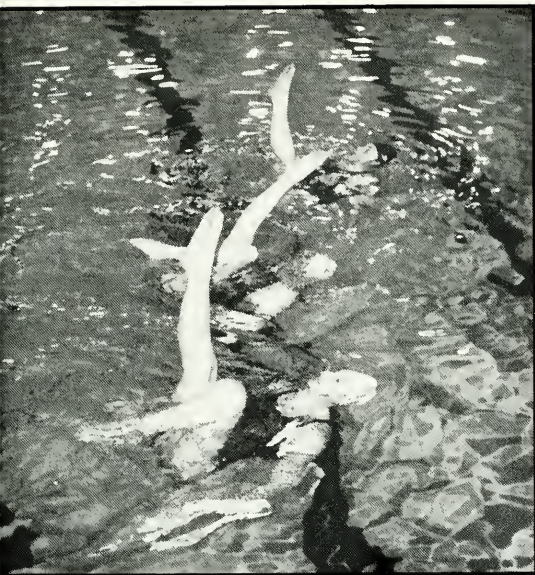

Jennifer King chose the bike for her workout.

Tracey Baggett know the importance of stretching before exercise.

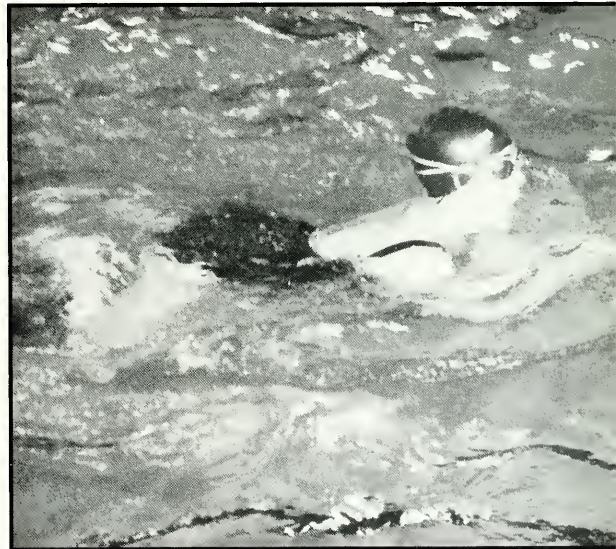

This fitness swimmer chose water as her exercising tool.

These students chose to join the Aquatic Scotties for their exercise.

Michelle DeZerne knows to alternate upper and lower body workouts.

Amy Starr chose swimming as a good way to better her health.

New to Some ...

Spanish Club, Blackfriars, and the Silhouette. I had never worked on a yearbook before, but it looked interesting. I loved compiling photo albums, so this couldn't be much different. Little did I know. As soon as we got to work I realized there were layouts to chose or design, pictures to take and crop, copy to write, and a hundred other details that quickly added up to quite an obstacle for little inexperienced me. I wasn't alone when it came to learning the Macintosh software, but everyone except me seemed to know how to use those gadgets with the rulers screwed together (croppers). A section editor pointed out that we could not use a certain picture because the girls's head was in the gutter--Huh?!? She's not even in the street, much less in the gutter. Well, in the next few weeks I learned what the work entailed, adjusted to the yearbook lingo of the rest of the staff, and helped to create the yearbook you see before you. I hope you enjoy it!

...Old Hat to Others

Having been editor of the yearbook my senior year in high school and on the staff the two previous years, I was anxious to continue at Agnes Scott. Coming from an extremely small private school, pre-K through 12th grade, our yearbook had to appeal to a wide variety of ages. While we had a lot of creative leeway, we also had to consider that small children and their parents would be judging the book. Here at Agnes Scott there isn't that kind of pressure. The yearbook is for the students. It is not done for the faculty or administration. It is designed to truly represent the students of Agnes Scott and the year they spent here. While working on a yearbook, I always think of what students will want to remember five, ten, or twenty years from now. The yearbook is one of the few parts of school that you can take away with you. Hopefully in this yearbook you will find many of your favorite memories from 1995-96.

Point

What Is in a Name?

In these days of media overload and overkill, give me the simplicity and directness of items that do not carry with them the cost of billboards, print-media space and audiovisual airtime.

“Generic” items seldom have cutesy names. If the item is in the local grocery store, the label may be a bit garish in its color scheme – the better to catch your budget conscious eye with, my dear, if in a retail store, signs on racks or shelves may indicate that items there are similar to a particular name brand, but this is definitely the best value for your buck. Store brands seldom carry the now common promises of health, wealth and self-improvement, but the labels do convey the inherent message, “Hey, we’re cheaper!”

“Generic” items ... [are] definitely the best value for your buck.

Eating Wheat Thins made Susan Vincent Molinaro rich.

In theory, “off brands” do not offer some of the benefits of name brands, and recent studies indicate that America’s love affair with generic products is waning. With regard to clothing, however, why invest massive amounts of money in fleeting fashion trends, when no-name clothing emulates the current “in” style and will conveniently dissolve in the washer at about the same time as the next fashion swing takes place? As for food and personal hygiene items, store brands are often so cheap that trying a product once, just to test it out, will probably not be painful, and a positive reaction may far outweigh the financial pains of never having any money for a Friday night escape from campus because one just had to use that super swell highly advertised product that everyone else is using – or are they?

Drinking Coors Light made Elanor Peterson famous.

Drinking Minute Maid increased Valerie Horton's sex appeal.

Give Me Those Name Brands

There is a certain level of comfort and confidence which accompanies the known ... the sure ... the name brand.

Name brands offer a certain aura and mystique, some rightly so

Mother's have, after all, told us for years that, "the classics never go out of style," and implicit in that statement is the command to buy well and wisely. For many, this means purchasing established name brands with a reputation for quality and workmanship.

And the concept extends beyond clothing.

Name brands offer a certain aura and mystique, some rightly so, some as the result of media tantalization. Where a manufacturer or designer's name does carry the credence of solid workmanship and quality, money should be no object - short of sending oneself to the poor house or debtor's prison. Such items are things to be saved up for, to be treasured.

Of course, there will be those people who fall prey to the name brand du jour. They proudly display their pricey togs, replete with free (to the designer) advertising on their chest ... or shoes. They consume and use only items that they have seen advertised, disregarding price or value in an effort to appear healthy, wealthy and wise. They are "in," don't you know, never mind the impulsive nature of their purchases. With age, perhaps they will truly become wise ... because the classics never go out of style.

Washing her clothes with Surf made Beena Mathews thin.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, a Republican congressman from Georgia, was considered a viable 1996 Presidential candidate, but decided he preferred his position of control in the House of Representatives. Often targeted by Democrats on ethics issues, Gingrich promised to overhaul more than a generation of social problems that began in the era of the New Deal and the Great Society.

President Bill Clinton has had many concerns this year: the 1996 presidential election, taxes and Medicare reform, and the first Republican-controlled Congress in 40 years.

Senator Bob Dole, a Republican from Kansas, was the Senate majority leader and a leading conservative candidate in the 1996 Presidential election. If he took office, Dole would be the oldest newly elected president at the age of 73.

Politics

Gen. Colin Powell came to national attention during the Persian Gulf War and never left the public eye. Although he ruled out running for president, he said he was always attracted to politics. Early in the presidential campaign he looked very much like a candidate.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, a political leader who fearlessly pursued peace with the Palestinians, was assassinated on November 4, 1995, by a radical fellow Israeli.

Timothy McVeigh is a well-guarded prisoner. He and one other man, Terry Nichols, are charged with eleven counts in the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City. The explosion on April 19, 1995, killed 169 people and injured more than 500.

World News

The civil war in Yugoslavia continued and after more than four years there was still no peace among the Croats, the Serbs, and the Muslims. Millions have lost their homes, more than 200,000 have been killed, and tens of thousands have become refugees.

The Atlantic region's hurricane season this year was so active that it has produced the most named storms since the National Hurricane Center started assigning names in 1953. A number of the storms made landfall and assaulted Caribbean islands, Gulf and east coast seaside communities. Hurricane Opal even managed to forge inland as far as metro-Atlanta, downing trees and powerlines in early November.

In the Million Man March, hundreds of thousands of African-American men marched in Washington in a spirited rally for unity and brotherhood. Participants were optimistic that the day would be a peaceful one, with praying, singing, and speechmaking resulting in more understanding among all races.

In the News

The low-speed Bronco chase ... Mark Furhman ... the bloody gloves ... Judge Lance Ito ... television cameras in the courtroom ... media overload. The murder trial of O.J. Simpson (finally) ended. The jury took less than four hours to reach a verdict in the sensational trial that lasted eight months. Simpson was found not guilty of murdering his former wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend, Ronald Goldman in 1994.

It took 30 years for the Atlanta Braves to win a World Series, but the fans say it is worth it. A sixth inning home run by David Justice gave the Braves a victory over the Cleveland Indians. This was the third trip to the Series in 5 years for the Braves, who finally seized the title for a much calmer, but still enthusiastic, hometown.

Garth Brooks has been a major success in the nineties. Recently, his limited-edition greatest record, "The Hits," has sold about 10 million copies. This 32-year-old artist from Tulsa, Oklahoma is just getting started.

One critic described Hootie and the Blowfish as a pleasant band with a mellow sound, a winning and unpretentious attitude, a goofy name, and a whole lot more. Hootie, whose given name is Darius Rucker, performs music which includes country rock, blues, and southern rock.

Entertainment

Baltimore Orioles shortstop Cal Ripken marched into the record books on September 6, 1995, when he broke Lou Gehrig's record and played in 2,131 consecutive baseball games.

Worst case scenario: It's the busiest year of your life; your first year as a yearbook editor; a very small, fairly inexperienced staff and twenty-three days to produce a 152-page yearbook from scratch. This has been the story of my life and this year's book.

I have to admit (and brag a little) that it got done! The small staff learned quickly and we worked together diligently. I must say that I'm so proud of all of us. Amanda and Emma--you were the only veterans we had this year and I can't thank you enough. Debbie--I'm grateful to you for helping Melissa and me out in our crisis situation right before the big deadline.

Melissa--I told you we could do it!! Thanks for putting up with me when I got in those difficult moods and for being so dedicated. Are you up for another round?!

Pat--you rock me!!! If it weren't for you, Melissa and I would have lost our minds and killed each other by now without accomplishing anything. You're a lifesaver.

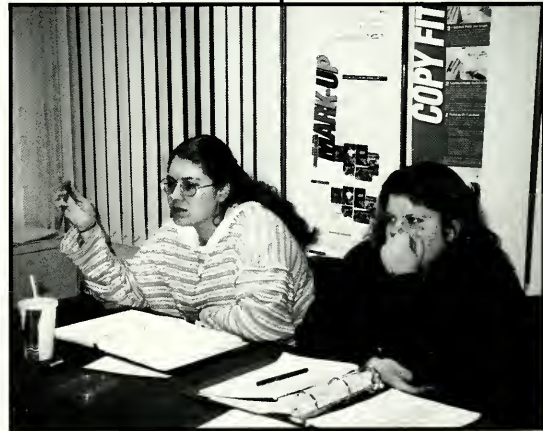

Many thanks to all of the staff for the late nights and hard work. I hope the experience wasn't a bad one. And for everyone else, I hope we have presented this past year from the many different viewpoints that exist at this college. This book is yours and I want so much for you to enjoy every page of it now and in the many years to come.

"What do you mean, the photographer left an hour and a half early?!?!"

"Now we're only going to say this one more time: we need 15 more days in February ... or a miracle to complete this book on time."

Another Point

"23 days? What do you mean, 23 days?" Ok...reality time. I never knew that a small phrase like "23 days..." could have made such a difference in my life. We had about a month to put a yearbook together and I was somewhat skeptical. Sure, we could throw one together, but how good would it be? The staff, as well as Sarah and I, learned quickly that it would all come down to a matter of time.

It being my first year as editor, I had no clue as to what to expect. The staff was mostly first-years with varying degrees of experience and Emma and Amanda were our only seasoned veterans. Thank goodness for Pat though. Our Jostens goddess stepped in and guided our path towards deadline time.

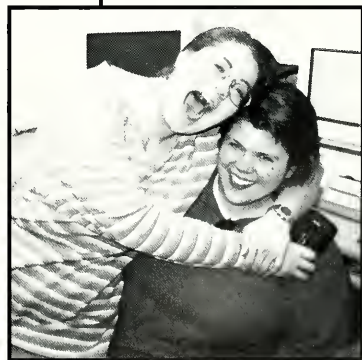

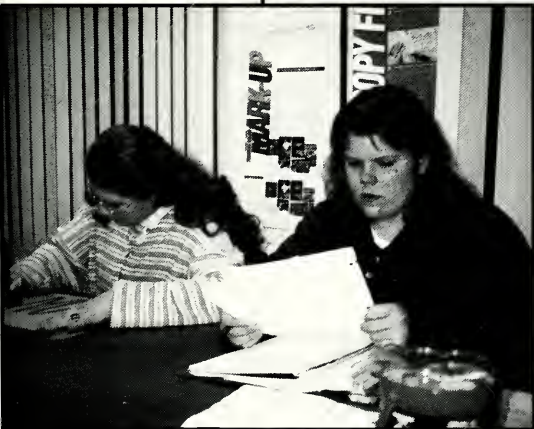

In a mere month, I saw a small staff pull together and produce a fantastic yearbook that represents varying viewpoints. Thank you Emma and Amanda for utilizing your Silhouette experience and for getting the job done. Thank you Julia, Rachel, Sharon, and Andrea for your dedication and determination. Much gratitude goes to our copy/content/any other section editor, Debbie. Thank you for stepping in during our time of need and doing a wonderful job. Many thanks to Ashlea, Tamara, Kim, Heather, Melissa, and Kristina as well. Pat...thank you...I can't say enough. Finally, Sarah...thank you for not letting me panic and for your many late nights in the publications office. WE DID IT AND SURVIVED.

I hope all of you enjoyed this yearbook as we attempted to capture the various viewpoints on campus. In listening to the opinions and thoughts of those at ASC, it was interesting to see the richness and diversity of opinion held by others. I hope that diversity was represented within these pages. The staff of the 1996 Silhouette bids fond farewell to the yearbook and the year, hoping to never again have to produce 152 pages which follow a concept in something close to 23 days. Even professors give more time for major 20 page papers
